THE OCCULTATION OF THE TWELFTH IMAM

A Historical Background

Jassim M. Hussain
First published in 1982 by Muhammadi Trust
Reprinted by Bunyad Be'thet,
Foreign Department and Imam Mehdi Organisation in 1982/1402 A.H.
Address:
Bunyad Be'thet
Avenue Somayye (Between Ave. Forsat and Ave. Mofatteh)
Tehran, Iran        Tel. 821159
Printed in the Islamic Republic of Iran.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Arabic Letter</th>
<th>Transliteration</th>
<th>Short Vowels</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>,</td>
<td>a</td>
<td>i</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>b</td>
<td>u</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>t</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>th</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>j</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>h</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>kh</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>d</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>dh</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>r</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>z</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>s</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>sh</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>s</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>d</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>t</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>dh</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gh</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>f</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>q</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>k</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>l</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>m</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>n</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>h</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>w</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>y</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>t</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Long Vowels:
- ā
- ū
- ī

Diphthongs:
- aw
- ay
- iyy
- uww

Persian Letters:
- p
- ch
- zh
- g
CONTENTS

Preface by Dr. I. K. A. Howard

Introduction and Survey of the Sources

1. Introduction
2. Survey of the Sources
2.1. Books on the Question of the Ghayba
2.1.2. Books on the Question of the Ghayba written between the years 260-329/874-941
2.1.3. Books on the Question of the Ghayba written after 329/941
2.2. The Biographical works
2.3. The Books of General History

CHAPTER I.

THE ROLE OF TRADITIONS IN THE OCCULTATION OF THE TWELFTH IMAM

1. The early usage of the term al-Mahdī
2. The occultation of al-Qā'īm al-Mahdī in the Qur'an
3. The traditions concerning the twelfth Imam and his Occultation
3.1. The traditions concerning al-Qā'īm al-Mahdī
3.2. The traditions of the Sunnites (Ahl al-Hadīth)
3.3. The twelfth Imam in the Zaydite traditions
3.4. The twelfth Imam in the Imamite traditions
3.4.1. The traditions concerning the twelfth Imam
3.4.2. The political role of al-Qā'īm
3.4.3. The signs of the rise of al-Qā'īm
CHAPTER II.

THE ROLE OF THE IMAMS IN THE SHĪʾITES' UNDERGROUND ACTIVITIES AND THEIR INFLUENCE UPON THE EVOLUTION OF THE GHAYBA

1. al-Sādiq’s attitude towards the new regime 31
2. The Imamite activities during the period of al-Kāzim (148-183/765-799) 34
3. The attitude of al-Riḍā towards the ‘Alid revolt against al-Ma’mūn 40
4. The development of the Imamite organization (al-Wikāla) during the time of al-Jawād 45
5. The ‘Abbāsids’ attitude towards the activities of al-Hādī 49
6. Conclusion 53

CHAPTER III.

THE IMAMITES VIEWS CONCERNING THE CONCEALED IMAM AND HIS BIRTH

1. The schisms amongst the adherents of al-Ḥasan al-ʿAskarī after his death 56
1.1. Introduction 56
1.2. Schism I: The Wāqifa at al-ʿAskarī 58
1.3. Schism II: The Jaʿfarites 59
1.4. Schism III: The Muḥammadiyya 62
1.5. Schism IV: The Qāṭiʿiyya 62
1.6. Schism V: The Cessation of the Imamate 65
1.7. Conclusion 66
2. The question of the birth of the twelfth Imam 67
2.1. The origin of the mother of the twelfth Imam 67
2.2. The birth of the twelfth Imam 69
3. The reasons for the first occultation of the twelfth Imam 74
4. al-‘Askari’s plan to hide his successor 75
5. The ‘Abbāsid attempt to arrest al-‘Askari’s son 76

CHAPTER IV.

THE UNDERGROUND ACTIVITIES OF THE TWELFTH IMAM AS SEEN IN THE ACTIONS OF THE SAFĪRS

1. A brief study of the Wikāla before the twelfth Imam 79
2. The main functions of the Wikāla 83
3. The early career of ‘Uthmān b. Sa‘īd 85
4. The career of the first safīr 86
5. The opposition to the first safīr 90
6. The Imam’s Wikāla during the time of the first safīr 91
   6.1. Iraq: the centre of the Wikāla 91
   6.2. The second area: Egypt, the Hijaz and Yemen 93
   6.3. The third area: Azerbaykān and Arrān 95
   6.4. The fourth area: Qumm and Dīnawar 95
   6.5. The fifth area: Rayy and Khurasan 95
7. The death of the first safīr 97

CHAPTER V.

THE UNDERGROUND ACTIVITIES OF THE SECOND SAFĪR OF THE TWELFTH IMAM

1. The designation of the second safīr, Abū Ja‘far 99
CHAPTER VI.

THE CAREER OF THE THIRD SAFĪR, AL-NAWBAKHTĪ

1. al-Nawbakhti's activities during the time of the second safīr 119
2. The installation of the third safīr 120
3. The activities of Ibn Rūh al-Nawbakhtī 122
4. The third safīr and al-Shalmagānī 126

CHAPTER VII.

THE FOURTH SAFĪR AND THE COMPLETE OCCULTATION OF THE TWELFTH IMAM

1. The career of the fourth safīr (326-329/937-941) 133
2. An analysis of the Tawqī' of the fourth safīr 134
3. The Imamite learned men's attitude towards the second occultation 138
4. The attitude of the ordinary Imamites towards the second occultation 143
5. The application of the epithet al-Mahdī to the Twelfth Imam 145

CONCLUSION 153

Footnotes 159
Bibliography 205
Abbreviations 220
PUBLISHER'S NOTE

With the permission of the author, we are able to re-publish this book in the interest of propagation of its contents, which represent a study in depth of the occultation of the Twelfth Imam. According to Professor I.K.A. Howard, Department of Islamic Studies, University of Edinburgh, "too little attention has been paid to this subject by scholarship generally, and specially in the West". His point is well taken in so far as publications in English and other foreign languages are concerned.

We reproduce below similar other noteworthy views of Prof. Howard, extracted from the Preface of the Muhammadi Trust publication of this book in 1982:

«For the first time in English, the evidence for the existence of the Twelfth Imam is fully presented and while it is of a circumstantial nature, it is much more convincing than the usual picture presented by Western scholarship. Dr. Hussain's thorough and sympathetic treatment of this is to be greatly welcomed.»

«The greater occultation of the Twelfth Imam is a matter of religious faith. It, like other great religious beliefs, is not something which scholars can prove or disprove. However, it has an inner religious reality which no one can reject. The proof of this inner religious reality is that it is a doctrine which has sustained and strengthened the faith of millions of Shi'ite Muslims up to the present time. Despite persecution and tribulation, this community and their faith have survived. ...»
We may add that the belief that Imam Zaman ( безопасно) will reappear in time has indeed sustained millions of Muslims, even in the modern context of secularism, materialism, nationalism and the like.
INTRODUCTION AND SURVEY OF THE SOURCES

1. Introduction

Muḥammad b. al-Ḥasan al-ʿAskarī is the twelfth Imam of the "Imamates" or "Twelve-Imam Shiʿites", al-Ithnā ʿAshariyya, who form the second largest denomination in Islam after the Sunnis. He appears to have been born in 256 A.H./869 A.D. Four years later, after the death of his father al-ʿAskarī, the eleventh Imam, he was hidden from the authorities of the ʿAbbāsid caliphs as a precaution. His whereabouts were disclosed only to a very few of his followers. Four of his father's close associates became successive mediators between the Imam and his followers until the year 329/941. This period has been considered by the Imamites as the first or the short occultation (al-Ghayba) of the twelfth Imam. During it the four safīrs directly supervised the underground religious and political activities of the Imamites.

The last safīr announced on his death-bed in 329/941 that the twelfth Imam had decided not to appoint another safīr and had entered into total occultation. The Imamites considered this declaration the beginning of the twelfth Imam's second occultation, which has continued until the present time.

Because of the second occultation the series of Imams stopped at the number twelve. Accordingly the Imamites believe that the twelfth Imam is al-Qāʾim ("he who will rise"), whose rising was promised by the Prophet. For the Prophet is said to have predicted that a descendant of his daughter Fāṭima would rise with the sword and fill the world with justice and equity. For this reason the Imamites believe that he is still alive, but in a state of occultation until the moment of his rising at an unspecified time in the future.

Since the first half of the fourth/tenth century many scholars have examined the occultation of the twelfth Imam purely from the theological point of view, even though this event appears to have been historical. However, because of the close connection between the occultation and the Imamate (al-Imāma) or the religious and political leadership, it became involved with Shi‘ite theological discussions and gradually its historical aspects came to be ignored. Thus modern scholars like Ignaz Goldziher, Margoliouth, Snouck Hurgronje and Darmesteter were inclined to study the occultation of the twelfth Imam as a theological phenomenon and tried to trace its pre-Islamic origins.

The present inquiry is an attempt to study the historical background and circumstances of the occultation of the twelfth Imam. The Imamites had political ambitions to obtain political power under the leadership of an Imam called al-Qā’im bi-l-sayf (the one who will rise with the sword). This study tries to examine the role of these ambitions in his occultation and to trace as well the evolution of the underground Imamite organization (al-Wikāla) and its role during the time of the twelfth Imam’s short occultation.

It is essential to make a survey of the main sources of this study so that the viewpoint of each of them can be understood and the information they contain evaluated accordingly.

2. Survey of the Sources

2.1. Books on the question of the Ghayba

It is indeed an old idea in Imamite history that one Imam from the progeny of the Prophet would go into hiding to prepare for the day when he would rise again under the title al-Qā’im al-Mahdī and fill the world with justice. The concealment (al-Ghayba) was considered a sign of the true al-Qā’im al-Mahdī, and both before and after the occultation of the twelfth Imam in 260/874. Many Shi‘ite writers collected traditions attributed to the Prophet and the Imams concerning this issue. These traditions were used by many Shi‘ite groups to back up the claims of their leaders who aspired to power by adopting the title of al-Qā’im al-Mahdī. Before 260/874 they were used even by some Imamites themselves as evidence that one or another of their deceased Imams was in fact al-Qā’im al-Mahdī. Finally the same traditions have been used by the Imamites to support their claims that the twelfth Imam was al-Qā’im al-Mahdī himself. These works on the subject of the Ghayba can be divided into three groups based on the dates of their authorship.
2.1.1. Books on the question of the occultation written before 260/874

The Imamite scholars wrote about four hundred books (al-Uṣūl al-Arbaʾ miʿa) during the lifetimes of the first eleven Imams. Some of these dealt with the subject of the Imam’s concealment, recording traditions on the authority of the Prophet and the Imams predicting that an Imam would go into occultation. These traditions, however, neither named the Imam nor fixed the time at which his occultation would begin. The ambiguity of these traditions encouraged many Shīʿites to apply them to different Imams. Hence the Wāqīfat sect held that Mūsā al-Kāẓim, the seventh Imam, was the hidden Imam whereas al-Imāmiyya al-Qaṭʿiyya and al-Zaydiyya al-Jārūdiyya 1 held that the hidden Imam would be the twelfth, but they did not identify him by name. Despite the fact that a great majority of these early works are not extant, it appears that during the fourth and fifth centuries the Imamite authors based their works concerning al-Ghayba on these early writings. The following works are examples of the Wāqīfat, Zaydiite and Imamite views on this matter.

i) The Wāqīfat

1. Al-Anmāṣī Ibrāhīm b. Šāliḥ al-Kūfī, was a companion of the fifth Imam, al-Bāqir (d. 114/732). He wrote a book entitled al-Ghayba which represents the Wāqīfat point of view, although the information he gave was used by such later scholars as Ahmad b. ʿAlī
b. Nūḥ (d. before 423/1031) and al-Tūsī to support the Imamite view. 2

2. Al-Ṭāʾī al-Tātārī, ʿAlī b. al-Ḥasan, was a companion of the seventh Imam, al-Kāẓim (d. 183/799), whom he named as the hidden Imam. In defence of his view he wrote Kitāb al-Ghayba, which became the framework for the works of later Wāqīfat authors like Ibn Sumāʿa (d. 263/877) on this issue. 3

3. Al-Ḥasan b. Muḥammad b. Sumāʿa, composed a book on al-Ghayba, following the footsteps of his Wāqīfat teacher al-Ṭāʾī al-Tātārī. 4 However, those Imamites who lived during the period from 260-329/874-940-1, like al-Ḥasan al-Ṣaffār (d. 292/904) and al-Kulaynī (d. 329/940), used his information to support their claim that the hidden Imam was not the seventh Imam but the twelfth Imam. 5

ii) The Zaydites

Abū Saʿīd ʿAbbād b. Yaʿqūb al-Rawājīnī al-ʿAshfarī (d. 250/864) was one of the leading scholars of the Shi'ite sect al-Zaydiyya al-Jarudiyya. He compiled a book of traditions entitled Kitāb Abū Sa'id al-'Aṣfarī. The importance of this work is that its author cites a tradition referring to the occultation at least ten years before its occurrence. He also mentions other traditions which point to the fact that the number of the Imams would end with the twelfth Imam and that he would be al-Qā'im. However in contrast to the Imamites he does not mention the names of the twelve Imams.

Al-'Aṣfarī's work along with the works of Sulaym b. Qays (d. 80-90/699-707) and al-Hasan b. Maḥbūb al-Sarrād (d. 244/858) were used extensively by such Imamites as al-Kulaynī (d. 329/941), al-Nu'mānī (d. 360/970) and al-Ṣadūq (d. 380/991) to prove the existence of the twelfth Imam and his subsequent occultation.

iii) The Imamites

1. Alī b. Mahzayār al-Ahwāzī was a close associate of the ninth Imam, al-Jawād. He was appointed by the latter as his representative in al-Ahwāz and continued to remain in office throughout the reign of the tenth Imam, al-Hādī. He wrote two books, called Kitāb al-Malāḥim and Kitāb al-Qā'im, both dealing with the occultation of the Imam and his subsequent rising with the sword. Then between the years 260/874 and 329/940 his two sons Ibrāhīm and Muḥammad became the authorised representatives of the twelfth Imam in al-Ahwāz. It is on their authority that al-Kulaynī and al-Ṣadūq give important information concerning the communication methods employed in the underground activities of the Imamites.

2. In his work on the subject of al-Ghayba called al-Mashyakhra, al-Hasan b. Maḥbūb al-Sarrād (d. 224/838) records several anecdotes which are often attributed to the Imams. This work has been lost but several quotations from it are included in the available Imamite sources.

3. Al-Faḍl b. Shādhān al-Nisābūrī (d. 260/873) was a well-known Imamite scholar and secured the trust and the praise of the eleventh Imam. He also compiled a book called al-Ghayba, but most of its material seems to have been quoted from the work of al-Hasan b. Maḥbūb. Since al-Faḍl died two months before the death of the eleventh Imam in 260/874, the importance of his work lies in the traditions he recorded indicating that the twelfth Imam would be al-Qā'im. Many later writers like al-Ṭūsī in his own work entitled al-Ghayba, relied on al-Faḍl’s work. Bahāʾ al-Dīn al-Nīlī (d. 790/1388) also compiled a work entitled al-Ghayba by summarising al-Faḍl’s work.⁹ Despite the fact that the actual work of al-Faḍl is lost, the works Kifāyat al-Muhtadī fī Maʿrifat al-Mahdī by Mīrālaḥī (d. 12th/18th century) and Kashf al-Astār by Mīrzā Ḥusayn al-Nūrī (d. 1320/1902) seems to be copies of his work.¹⁰ Therefore it is not unreasonable to make use of these later sources for our present purposes.

2.1.2. Books on the Question of the Ghayba written between the years 260-329/874-941

During the years of the short occultation (260-329/874-941) many books reflecting different views were composed on the question of al-Ghayba. These were mainly collections of anecdotes based on works written before 260/874. Their authors were either jurists or propagandists and they participated in the activities of the underground organization of the Imamites led by the twelfth Imam himself. Thus they recorded important information, which cannot be found in books on history compiled during the same period.

In 262/876, Ibrāhīm b. Ishāq al-Nahāwandī (d. 286/899) claimed to be the representative of the twelfth Imam in Baghdad.¹¹ He composed a book about the Ghayba reflecting the view of the extremists (al-Ghulāt). Later al-Nuṣmānī (d. 360/970) used al-Nahāwandī’s information extensively in composing his well-known book al-Ghayba.¹²

ʿAbd Allāh b. Jaʿfar al-Himyarī (d. after 293/905) wrote a book entitled al-Ghayba wa-l-Ḥayra. The importance of his work lies in the fact that he was one of the close associates of the tenth and the eleventh Imams and later became the agent of the first two deputies (ṣafīrs) of the twelfth Imam. Unfortunately this work and the work called al-Imāma wa-l-Tabṣīra min al-Ḥayra by Ibn Bābawayh (d. 329/940) are not extant. However, the latter’s son, al-Ṣadūq (d. 382/991) and al-Ṭūsī (d. 460/1067) made thorough use of these works.

Al-Kulaynī (d. 329/940) devoted much space in the section entitled al-Ḥujja of his book al-Kāfī to the question of the occultation. He backs up this study with important information on the general situation of the Imamites between the years 260-329/874-940 with special emphasis on the role of the saﬁr of the Imam in this period. He recorded many traditions attributed to the Imams concerning the concealment of the twelfth Imam. He quoted this information from the earlier Wāqifite and Imamite authors like al-Ḥasan b. Maḥbūb (d. 224/838), ʿAbbād b. Yaʿqūb al-ʿAsfārī (d. 250/864) and al-Ḥasan b. Sumāʿa (d. 263/877). Moreover, the agents of the twelfth Imam were the main source of his information on the underground activities of the Imamites.

2.1.3. Books on the question of the Ghayba written after 329/941.

The occurrence of the second occultation in 329/941 led to a state of confusion among the Imamites. Hence, several works were composed to justify the twelfth Imam’s occultation and to explain the reasons for its prolongation. Five works of this period can be considered the basis for all later Imamite opinions concerning the occultation. Since these primary sources have been widely used in this book, it is worth evaluating the information they contain in some detail.

1. Al-Nuʿmānī, Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm b. Jaʿfar, known as Ibn Abī Zaynab, was a native of the town of Nuʿmānīyya, one of the districts of Wāṣīṭ. He moved to Baghdad where he was educated in Ḥadīth transmission under the supervision of al-Kulaynī (d. 329/940) and Ibn ʿUqda (d. 333/944). He then went to Syria where he died around the year 360/970.

   Because of the confusion which had spread amongst the Shiʿites after the death of the eleventh Imam, al-ʿAskarī, in the year 260/874, al-Nuʿmānī wrote a book entitled al-Ghayba. He tried to prove the necessity of the twelfth Imam’s occultation by relating traditions on the authority of the Prophet and the Imams predicting its occurrence. He acquired most of his information from early authors who wrote on this subject, irrespective of their doctrinal views. Among such early authors are al-Ḥasan b. Maḥbūb, an Imamite (d. 224/838), al-Faḍl b. Shādhān, an Imamite (d. 260/873), al-Ḥasan b. Sumāʿa, a Wāqifite (d. 263/877), Ibrāhīm b. Ishāq al-Nahāwandī, an extremist (d. 286/899), al-Kulaynī, an Imamite (d. 329/940), the well-known Zaydite jurist Ibn ʿUqda (d. 333/944), and al-Masʿūdī (d. 345/956).

   Al-Nuʿmānī’s outstanding contribution was that he was the first compiler after al-Mas'ūdī (d. 345/956) to give an interpretation of those traditions attributed to the Imams by al-Kulaynī, which indicated that al-Qā'im would have two occultations, the first short and the second long. Al-Nu’mānī stated that the first occultation was the period of the four representatives of the twelfth Imam, lasting from the year 260/874 until the year 329/940-1, and that the second began after the death of the fourth safīr in 329/941.14 Some of his remarks reflect how the complete occultation of the twelfth Imam threw the Imamites into confusion and caused a massive decrease in their numbers. His interpretation became the basis for all later Imamite works on this subject.

2. Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. Bābawayh, who is better known as al-Ṣadūq (d. 381/991), wrote a book on the question of the Ghayba entitled Kamāl al-Dīn wa Tamām al-Niʿma. The information contained in this work is valuable because al-Ṣadūq relied on the Shiʿite primary sources (al-Uṣūl) which had been compiled before 260/874.15 Thus we find that he often refers to the authors al-Ḥasan b. Maḥbūb, al-Faḍl b. Shāḍhān, al-Ḥasan b. Sumāʿa, al-Ṣaffār, al-Himyari and his own father, Ibn Bābawayh,16 who had close ties with the third and fourth safīrs of the twelfth Imam. Because his father was an eminent jurist and the Imam’s agent in Qumm, al-Ṣadūq was able to give reliable information regarding the underground communications between the agents and the Imam via his four safīrs. However, a study of the chain of transmitters (isnād) of some of his reports concerning the birth of the twelfth Imam indicates that al-Ṣadūq obtained his information from extremists such as Muḥammad b. Bahr. Consequently, one must be careful in using these reports.

3. Muḥammad b. Muḥammad b. al-Nuʿmān, who is known as al-Mufīd (d. 413/1022), was at one time the leader of the Imamites. During this time the question of the occultation began to penetrate theological discussions. Hence he wrote five articles in defence of the occultation of the twelfth Imam and also compiled an independent work entitled al-Fuṣūl al-ʿAṣhara fī al-Ghayba. Despite the dogmatic approach of this work, it records valuable information concerning the historical circumstances surrounding the disappearance of the twelfth Imam before 260/874. Al-Mufīd also presents an exposition similar to that of al-Nawbakhtī and Saʿd al-Qummi putting forward the fifteen different views held by the Imamites after 260/874. Al-Mufīd bore witness to the disappearance of all fifteen groups by 373/983, except the Twelvers who believed that their leader was the twelfth Imam and that he was in concealment. In his book al-Irshād, al-Muḥīd follows the method employed by al-Kulaynī and al-Nuʿmānī in the narration of Ḥadīth, first of all by proving the existence of the twelfth Imam and then by vindicating the prolongation of his age beyond the life-span of an ordinary person.

4. After al-Muḥīd his two eminent pupils ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn, better known as al-Murtadā (d. 436/1044), and Muhammad b. ʿAlī al-Karajakī (d. 449/1057), followed his rational approach in their treatises on the prolongation of the twelfth Imam's concealment. This approach is clear in the extant article of al-Murtadā which was published in Baghdad in 1955 under the title Masaʿīla waḥīfa fi al-Ghayba and translated into English by Sachedina. In 427/1035 al-Karajakī compiled a work entitled al-Burḥān ʿalā Ṣiḥḥat Tūl ʿUmr al-Imam Ṣāḥib al-Zāmān, in which he mentions many people whose ages had been prolonged beyond the life-span of an ordinary person. His aim in this was to prove, like al-Ṣādiq and al-Muḥīd before him, that the prolongation of the twelfth Imam's life during his occultation was not an extraordinary phenomenon. On account of the dogmatic approach of these two works they are devoid of any historical information concerning the actual career of the twelfth Imam between the years 260-329/874-941.

5. The well-known Ḥanīfī scholar Muhammad b. al-Ḥasan al-Ṭūsī (d. 460/1067) deals with the question of the Ghayba of the twelfth Imam in most of his dogmatic works. But the most important of these is Kitāb al-Ghayba, in which he makes use of both tradition and reason to prove that the twelfth Imam was al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī, and that he must be in a state of occultation. Through his reflection of the other Shiʿite claims, which held that ʿAlī b. Abī Tālib (d. 41/661), Ibn al-Ḥanafiyā (d. 84/703), al-Ṣādiq (d. 148/765), Muhammad b. Ismāʿīl, and al-Kāẓim (d. 183/799) were al-Qāʾīm and that they were in hiding, he suggests that the traditions concerning the occultation go back to the time of ʿAlī.

Al-Ṭūsī also provides reliable historical information on the underground activities of the four representatives of the twelfth Imam, quoting from a missing book entitled Akhbār al-Wukalāʾ al-ʿArbaʾa by Aḥmad b. Nūḥ al-Baṣrī. Al-Ṭūsī's work became the main source for all the later Imamite writers regarding the concealment of the twelfth Imam, particularly al-Majlisī (d. 1111/1699) in his work Biḥār al-Anwār.
A contemporary of al-Kulaynī was Abū al-Qāsim al-Balkhī, a Muʿtazilite, who died around the year 301/913. He held that the eleventh Imam had died heirless and gave expression to these opinions in his work al-Mustarshid, which is a refutation of Ibn Qubba’s book, al-Inṣāf. Unfortunately his work has been lost. However judging by the quotations recorded in the book al-Mughni by al-Qādī `Abd al-Jabbār (d. 415/1024), it appears that al-Balkhī relied on al-Ḥasan al-Nawbakhtī (d. ca. 310/922) for information concerning the divisions among the Imamites after the year 260/874.\(^\text{18}\)

As for al-Ashʿarī (d. 324/935), he depended on al-Balkhī for his information about the Imamites. In fact after al-Ashʿarī’s conversion to the group of Ahl al-Ḥadīth, later to be the Sunnis, his books became the main source for the later Sunni writers, such as al-Baghdādī (d. 429/1037) in his work al-Farq bayn al-Firaq\(^\text{19}\), the writer Ibn Ḥazm (d. 456/1063) in his work al-Faṣūl fī al-Mīlal wa-l-Ahwāʾ wa-l-Nihal and later al-Shahrīstānī (d. 548/1153) in his work al-Mīlal wa-l-Nihal.\(^\text{20}\) However the information contained in the latter works concerning the Imamite schisms after the death of al-ʿAskarī is so far removed from the original exposition of al-Balkhī and al-Nawbakhtī that one has to be careful about relying upon it.

2.2 The Biographical Works

Among the primary sources of this study are the books of al-Rijāl, which deal with the scientific biographies of the narrators and compilers of traditions by estimating the degree of their authority and deducing their reliability from their dogmatic and political inclinations.

The Imamites compiled four main biographical works concerned with the domain of the present study in the 4th-5th/10th-11th centuries.

1. The first is Maʿrifat al-Naqilīn ʿan al-Aʿimmā al-Ṣaḥīḥīn, compiled by Muḥammad b. ʿUmar al-Kashshī. He was a native of the town of Kashsh near Samarqand, where he was brought up under the auspices of the Imamite scholar Muhammad b. Masʿūd al-Samarqandī and where he spent the whole of his life. According to al-Ṭūsī he died in 368/978.\(^\text{21}\) Al-Kashshī quoted his information from fifty-three narrators, but his main source was ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b.
Outayba of Nishapur, who was contemporary with the short occultation and had close ties with the agents of the twelfth Imam in Khurasan. Ibn Outayba provides important information concerning the evolution of the underground organization of the Imamites (al-Wikala) after al-Sadiq (d. 148/765) and the reason behind the rise of the Waqifite groups after the death of the seventh Imam in 183/799.

Al-Kashshi's work became an important source for later Imamite scholars like al-Tusi (d. 460/1067), who summarised it and gave it the title Ikhtiyar Ma'rifat al-Rijal.

2.3. Al-Tusi's works, al-Fihrist and al-Rijal, are two of the four main Imamite books of al-Rijal. He cites different chains of transmitters (isnad) regarded as authentic and enables us to discover the links between the Imamite scholars and the agents during the short occultation.

4. The fourth Imamite work on al-Rijal is Fihrist Asma' Musannifi al-Shi'a, which was written by Ahmad b. Ali al-Najashi (d. 450/1058), a native of Kufa. He received his Shi'ite education there and then moved to Baghdad, where he was one of the leading Imamite scholars along with al-Murtada (d. 436/1044). His residing in these two cities enabled him to establish close contact with forty-five Imamite scholars who had in their possession documents related to the period of the short occultation. These documents cast light on the different ranks within the Imamite organization and provide useful information on works on the Ghayba compiled before and after 260/874.

Al-Barqi (d. 278/891), in his work on al-Rijal, provides valuable reports concerning the relationship between the Imams and their followers in particular the tenth and eleventh Imams, since he was their contemporary.

Despite the fact that the work of al-Dhahabi (d. 748/1347) entitled Mizan al-I'tidal is a later source, it contains some reports which elucidate the background of the Ghayba and its connection with the rise of al-Qa'im.

2.3 The books of general history

Al-Tabari (d. 310/922) lived during the periods of the short occultation. His work Tarikh al-Rusul wa-l-Muluk is devoid of any information on the activities of the representatives of the twelfth Imam, which points to the fact that their activities were underground.
However he does follow the militant activities of the other Shi'ite groups like the Qarāmiṭa and the Ismā’ilīs until the establishment of their state in 296/908. He also traces the use of the prophetic traditions regarding al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī by these groups in their struggle for power during the time of the short occultation.

Al-Mas‘ūdī (d. 346/957) lived during the period of the second occultation and provides important information regarding the harsh treatment of the Imams and their followers by the ‘Abbāsids and the effect of this policy on the occurrence of the Ghayba. This can be found in his works, Murūj al-Dhahab, al-Tanbīḥ wa-l-Ishrāf and Ithbāt al-Waṣiyya (attributed to him).

In his work al-Kāmil fī al-Tārīkh, Ibn al-Athīr (d. 630/1232) provides a useful report concerning the schisms among the agents of the twelfth Imam and the role of the extremists in these schisms, especially al-Shalmaghānī. It is possible that Ibn al-Athīr quotes his information from an Imamite work entitled Tārīkh al-Imāmiyya by Yahyā b. Abī Ṭay (d. 630/1232). Unfortunately, however, this work is not extant.

Many other historical and geographical works and books of traditions have also been used in the present study. Before they have been employed, they have been considered with the same critical method as that used above.
CHAPTER I

THE ROLE OF TRADITIONS IN THE OCCULTATION OF THE TWELFTH IMAM

After the martyrdom of al-Ḥusayn, the Imamite Imams from ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn to al-Ḥasan al-ʿAskari followed a quiescent policy towards the Umayyads and the ʿAbbāsids. But they expected that all their suffering would be terminated by al-Qāʾim, whose rising in arms they were awaiting. The Imamites based their expectations on their interpretation of certain Qurʾanic verses and on numbers of traditions attributed to the Prophet concerning the political and religious role of al-Qāʾim. So it is essential to discuss some of these Qurʾanic verses and traditions in order to see their effect upon the attitude of the ʿAbbāsids towards the Imamites, and consequently their reactions to the question of the occultation (al-Ghayba) of the twelfth Imam.

1. The early usage of the term al-Mahdī

The term al-Mahdī, which means "the one who is guided by Allah", is the passive participle of the stem hadā, "to guide". A term that occurs twice in the Qurʾan is the active participle of the same stem, al-Hādī, the Guide. The first verse states, "Allah is surely the Guide of those who believe" (XXII, 53), while the second states, "But the Lord is a sufficient Guide and Helper" (XXV, 33). In the usage of the Qurʾan the eighth form of the same stem, ihtadā, "he accepted the guidance for himself", is used strictly as a reflexive passive, whose participle is Muhādī. So Man, who is guided by Allah, is not simply guided, but reacts himself to the divine guidance (hidāya), either by instinct or intellect. Through these two means he can acquire knowledge of Allah, which leads him to worship Him by following His laws on earth. However, Allah’s laws cannot be discovered through these two sources of knowledge, so throughout the course of history Allah has revealed His knowledge and laws to a group of people who have been divinely guided to lead mankind towards His straight path. These people are called "Prophets" and possessed charismatic qualities which enabled them to implement the commands of Allah and to lead the people without error. Hence they are called in the Qur'an al-Hudāt (sing. al-hādī), because they were already rightly guided (muhtadūn) by Allah.²

The term al-Mahdī (the guided one) has the same meaning as al-Muhtadī. However, it has been applied to certain individuals in the early Islamic period as an honorific title, while also being applied to al-Qā‘im. Many examples can be cited showing that the term al-Mahdī was used in these two senses. For example the poet Ḥassān b. Thābit (d. 54/673) applied the term al-Mahdī to the Prophet in a qaṣīda when he says:

\[
\text{بَشَّاءُ عَلَيْ الْمُهْدِي أَضْحَ أُوْلَىَّا}
\]

\[
\text{يَخْبِرُونَ وَظَاهاً أَنَّهَا أَنْتُمُواَيِ}
\]

Sorrow for the Mahdī who is buried!
O best of those who walked on Earth, be not far!

The poet Jarīr applies this term to Ibrāhīm, the prophet.⁴ The Sunnites often applied it to the four caliphs after the Prophet, who were called al-Khulafā’ al-Rashidūn al-Mahdiyyūn, the divinely guided caliphs.⁵ Sulaymān b. Ṣūrī called al-Ḥusayn, after his martyrdom, Mahdī b. al-Mahdī.⁶

As for the theological usage of this term, according to Rajkowski, Abū Iṣḥāq Ka‘b b. Māṭi’ b. Ḥāṣū’ al-Himyarī (d. 34/654) was the first individual to speak of al-Mahdī as the Saviour.⁷ But it is worth mentioning that the second caliph, ‘Umar b. al-Khattāb, had spoken of occultation before Ka‘b. When the Prophet died in 11/632, ‘Umar contended that Muḥammad had not died but had concealed himself as Moses did and would return from his occultation. ‘Umar’s claim, however, was rebutted by Abū Bakr, who reminded him of the Qur’ānic verse revealing the death of the Prophet⁸ which states: “Surely you shall die and they [too] shall surely die. Then surely on the Day of Resurrection you will contend with one another before your Lord” (al-Zumar, XXXIX, 30-1).
The follower of Ibn al-Hanafiyya (d. 814-700-3), al-Mukhtar, who was in revolt in Kufa in 66/685, named him as claimant to the Imamate and called him al-Mahdi in the messianic context. Later the name of Ibn al-Hanafiyya became associated with the Kaysaniyya sect, which denied his death and held that he was the promised Mahdi, who had concealed himself in Mound Radwa, and who would rise in arms to eliminate injustice. The Kaysaniyya dogma played an important role in Islamic political history during the Umayyad period, since the Abbasi propaganda, which brought about the collapse of the Umayyads, was in fact derived from this sect. The dogma of al-Kaysaniyya can be seen in the poetry of Kuthayyir (d. 105/723) and al-Sayyid al-Himyari (d. 173/789). The latter had followed this sect, but it is said that he became an Imamite after a discussion with al-Sadiq, who clarified for him that the concealed Imam mentioned by the Prophet was not Ibn al-Hanafiyya but the twelfth Imam from the progeny of al-Husayn.

The Zaydites also applied the term al-Mahdi in its eschatological sense to their leaders who rose in arms against the Abbasids, such as Muhammad al-Nafs al-Zakiyya (d. 145/762), Muhammad b. Ja'far al-Sadiq (d. 203/818), and Muhammad b. al-Qasim al-Taqlan, who disappeared in the year 219/834. An example of the Zaydite usage of this term is recorded by Ibn Tawus, who states on the authority of Ibrahim b. 'Abd Allah b. al-Hasan, the brother of al-Nafs al-Zakiyya, that the latter had rebelled hoping that Allah might make him the Mahdi promised by the Prophet:
As for the Imamites, a considerable body among them applied the title of al-Mahdi in its messianic sense to each Imam after his death. This can be seen in the claim of al-Nâwûsiyya, al-Wâqifa and the followers of al-'Askari, the eleventh Imam. After the death of al-Šâdiq in the year 148/765 the Nâwûsiyya group held that he was al-Qâ‘im al-Mahdi and that he did not die but went into occultation. The Wâqifa group applied this title to the seventh Imam Mûsâ al-Kâzim (d. 183/799) and denied his death, contending that he was al-Qâ‘im al-Mahdi and that he would rise to fill the earth with justice after it had been filled with tyranny. Other Imamites held that the eleventh Imam al-‘Askari was al-Qâ‘im al-Mahdi, whereas the last important usage of this term was given to the twelfth Imam, who became the magnate of the Imamites’ hope in their struggle for justice and equity.

It is worth mentioning that all these claims relating to the eschatological usage of the term ‘al-Mahdi’ were based mainly on Prophetic traditions concerning a future restorer of Islam. Hence it is essential to discuss the traditions of the Prophet and the Imams, especially these traditions which concern the twelfth Imam, so as to see their role in the question of his occultation.

2. The Occultation of al-Qâ‘im al-mahdi in the Qur’an

In Shi‘ite exegesis many Qur’anic verses are regarded as references to the role of al-Qâ‘im and his occultation. The most important is the following verse: O, but I call to witness the planets, the stars which rise and set [al-Takweer, LXXXI, 15-6]. According to Imam al-Bâqir, this verse means that an Imam would go into occultation in the year 260/847; then he would reappear suddenly like a bright shooting star in the dark night.

Ibn al-Furât, al-Kâfî and al-Šâdûq interpret the following Qur’anic verse: “Say: Have you thought: If (all) your water were to disappear into the earth, who then could bring you gushing water” [al-Mulk LXVII, 30]. They maintain that this verse is a metaphor for the concealment of the Imam, whose presence among people is like the water they need to drink.

The Ismâ‘îli writer Mansûr al-Yamân (ca. 4th century A.H.) agrees with al-Kulaynî that some Qur’anic verses which apparently deal with the Day of Judgement actually concern the appearance of al-Qā‘im after his occultation. According to al-Kulaynī the verse “And those who sincerely believe in the day of Judgement” [al-Ma‘rājī, LXX, 26] refers to those who believe in the reappearance of al-Qā‘im.21 Maṣūr al-Yaman gives a similar esoteric interpretation of another verse:

And of mankind are some who say, we believe in Allah and the Last Day, when they believe not. They think to beguile Allah and those who believe, but they beguile none save themselves; but they perceive not [al-Baqara, II, 8-9].

Maṣūr al-Yaman states that the Last Day (al-Yawm al-Ākhir) in this verse is the “Commander of the Age” (Ṣāḥib al-Zamān), that is al-Qā‘im al-Mahdi.22 Al-Kulaynī interprets many Qur’anic verses with the same kind of approach and links them to the future role of al-Qā‘im al-Mahdi.23 In his view, when al-Qā‘im reappears he will establish the political state of the “People of the House” (Ahl al-Bayt) that is, the Imams, upon the ruins of the state of inequity. This is al-Kulaynī’s esoteric commentary on the verse: “And say: The truth has come and falsehood has vanished. Surely falsehood is a vanishing thing.” [Banū Isrā‘īl, XVII, 81].24

Al-Ṭūsī follows in al-Kulaynī’s footsteps in commenting on certain Qur’anic verses. Take, for example, this passage:

And We desired to show favour unto those who were oppressed in the earth, and to make them Imams and to make them the inheritors. And to establish them in the earth, and to show Pharaoh and Haman and their hosts which they feared from them [al-Qaṣṣ XXVIII, 5-6]

Al-Ṭūsī holds that the above verses predict the establishment of the state of Justice by al-Qā‘im al-Mahdi, who would inherit what had been in the possession of the wrong-doers.25

Other Imamite scholars maintain that the fifth Imam, al-Bāqir, said that Allah’s promise of victory to an Imam from the People of the House is mentioned explicitly in the following verse:

And verily We have have written in the scripture (al-Zabūr), after the Reminder My righteous slaves will inherit the earth. [al-Anbiyā’, XXI, 105]26

Other verses have also been interpreted by the Imamites to be connected with the role of al-Qā‘im, after his rising from occultation, such as the verse:

Allah has promised such of you as believe and do good works that He will surely make them to succeed (the present rulers) in the earth even as He caused those who were before them to succeed (others); and He will surely establish for them their religion which he has approved for them, and will give them in exchange safety after their fear. They serve Me. They ascribe nothing as a partner unto Me. Those who disbelieve henceforth, they are the wrong doers. [al-Nūr, XXIV, 55]

Al-Qummī and al-Ṭusī report that the People of the House mentioned that this verse concerns the Mahdī because he would live during his concealment in a state of fear, would appear after the removal of fear, and would certainly become victorious.²⁶

3. The traditions concerning the twelfth Imam and his occultation

3.1 The traditions concerning al-Qā’im al-Mahdī

There are many traditions attributed to the Prophet in the books of tradition concerning the identity of al-Mahdī, his family, his epithet (kunya) and his character. The conclusion of these numerous traditions is that al-Mahdī is a descendant of the sons of Fāṭima,²⁷ the daughter of the Prophet; and more particularly, that he is of the progeny of her son al-Ḥusayn. His colour is similar to that of the Arab, and his body is like the Israelite, and his name and kunya are similar to the name and kunya of the Prophet.²⁸ Moreover some traditions claim that the Prophet said that al-Mahdī’s father’s name is like the name of the Prophet’s grandson, al-Ḥasan. Below are a number of these traditions.

i) We, the family of ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib, are the Masters of the inhabitants of Paradise: I, Ḥamza, Ja’far, ʿAlī, al-Ḥasan, al-Ḥusayn and al-Mahdī.²⁹

ii) Al-Mahdī is from my progeny. His name is similar to mine and his epithet is similar to mine. In his physique and character he looks exactly like me. He will be in a state of occultation and there will be confusion (Ḥayra) in which people will wander about. Then he will come forth like a sharp, shooting star to fill the earth with justice and equity as it was filled before with injustice and inequity.³⁰
iii) Al-Mahdi is from my family (‘itra) from the sons of Fāṭima. It is worth mentioning that this tradition was reported on the authority of Umm Salama by ʿAlī b. Nufayl, who died in 125/742.31

iv) On the authority of Ibn ʿAbbās, the Prophet is reported to have said, “How shall Allah destroy a nation whose beginning is myself, whose end is Jesus and whose very centre is al-Mahdi, who will be from my family?”32

v) The name of al-Mahdi’s father is similar to the name of my son al-Ḥasan.33

The conclusion of Osman concerning these traditions seems to be rather forced. “All these hadiths are weak and contradictory (mutadārib), therefore their attribution to the Prophet Muḥammad is to be very much doubted.”34 For the use of the epithet al-Mahdi by numerous Islamic groups, particularly the Zaydites, in their struggle for power during the Umayyad period shows that these traditions were well-known among the Muslims of that period. Moreover, many traditionists from different Islamic sects transmitted these traditions before the downfall of the Umayyads in 132/749, and later they were collected in the books of tradition (ḥadīth). The earliest of these books was Kitāb Sulaym b. Qays, attributed to Sulaym b. Qays al-Hilālī, who died between the years 80-90/699-708. He reports many Prophetic traditions concerning al-Mahdi, his occultation and his reappearance.35 It appears from these two points that Osman’s judgement is somewhat hasty, particularly if one takes into account the fact that Prophetic traditions regarding al-Mahdi were narrated by twenty-six companions of the Prophet. On their authority thirty-eight traditionists recorded these traditions in their collections of ḥadīth.36

The evidence suggests that from the earliest times in Islam there was a belief that the Prophet had given his followers a promise about a man from the progeny of al-Husayn, who would rise in arms in the future to purify Islam from innovation. But political rivalry amongst the Muslims encouraged some people to exploit this hope and to distort these Prophetic traditions in order to use them in their struggle for power.37

These traditions only mention that al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī will be from the progeny of the Prophet. But there are also other traditions attributed to the Prophet which state that al-Mahdī will, in fact, be the twelfth Imam.

It is true that Montgomery Watt objects that,
Until al-‘Askarī died on 1st Jan. 874, there was nothing to make people expect that the number of the Imams would be limited to twelve or that the twelfth would go into occultation. It follows the theory of the twelve Imams was worked out after 874.38

Nevertheless, there is ample proof that traditions claiming al-Qā‘im would be the twelfth descendant of the Prophet were in circulation before 874. It is thus necessary to throw light upon these traditions, which were transmitted by Sunnites and Zaydites as well as Imamites, so that one can see to what extent these traditions were used by the Imamite scholars to support the belief that the twelfth Imam had not died but was in a state of occultation.

3.2. The traditions of the Sunnites (Ahl al-Ḥadīth)

i) Jābir b. Samura narrates that he heard the Prophet say, “There will be after me twelve Amīrs.” Then he mentioned something which I did not hear, so I asked my father, who was sitting beside me, who said, “All of whom will be from Quraysh.”39

ii) ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb reports that he heard the Prophet say, “The Imams (al-A’immah) after me will be twelve, all of whom will be from Quraysh.”40

iii) ‘Abd Allah b. Mas‘ūd was once reciting the Qur’ān in the mosque in Iraq, when a young man came and asked him if the Prophet had informed them about the number of his successors. Ibn Mas‘ūd replied, “The Prophet informed us that his successors will be twelve caliphs, whose number is similar to the number of the leaders (al-nuqabā’) of Banū Isrā‘īl.”41

These traditions have been related by the traditionists and considered authentic. Ibn Ḥanbal narrates the first with thirty-four chains of transmitters (ṣangd), all of which are on the authority of Jābir b. Samura,42 although there are slight differences in the versions. Some of the narrators used the words Amīr and Khalīfa instead of Imām. But these traditions, as reported by the Sunnites, indicate only that the Prophet would be succeeded by twelve successors; none reveals that the twelfth would go into occultation, nor that he would be al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī. But the Zaydite and the Imamite narrators relate the same traditions with phrases which indicate that the twelfth Imam would be al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī.

3.3 The twelfth Imam in the Zaydite traditions

The Zaydite sect, the Jārūdiyya, narrate many traditions attributed to the Prophet and al-Bāqir concerning the political role of the twelfth Imam. One of their distinguished scholars in Kufa was Abū Sa‘īd ʿAbbād b. Ya‘qūb al-Rawājīnī al-ʿAsfārī (d. 250/864). He wrote a book entitled Kitāb Akhbār al-Mahdī. Al-Dhahabī reports that ʿAbbād was a Rāfdite propagandist, and was awaiting the rise of al-Mahdī in the near future. He used to carry a sword, and once said that he kept his sword ready in order to fight for al-Mahdī. It is worth mentioning that ʿAbbād held this view before the occultation of the twelfth Imam in 260/874, since he died in 250/864. He reports three Prophetic traditions concerning the twelfth Imam. Below are two of them:

i) The Prophet is believed to have said, “From my descendants there will be eleven leaders [who will be] noble, receivers of tradition [and] possessed of knowledge, the last of whom will be al-Qā‘im bi-l-Haqq who will fill it [i.e. the world] with justice, just as it was filled with tyranny.”

ii) The Prophet is reported to have said: “I and eleven of my descendants and you, O ʿAlī, are the axis of the earth, that is, its tent pegs and its mountains. By us Allah has secured the world so that it will not sink with its people. For when the eleventh of my descendants has died the world shall sink with its people without warning.”

These traditions along with other sayings predicting the historical circumstances and the signs which would precede the rise of al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī were used by the Shi‘īs in their struggle for power. This can be seen in the events of the general ʿAlīd uprising which occurred in 250-1/864-5, when many Shi‘ites applied the Prophetic traditions concerning the signs of the rise of al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī to the historical circumstances surrounding this revolt. Ibn ʿUqda (d. 333/944) reports that al-Ṣādiq said:

A man from the People of the House of the Prophet will rise in arms in Mecca holding a white standard in his hand: the Euphrates will become dry, and, at the same time, a group of people, whose eyes are small, will advance towards you from the East and will force you to leave your houses. Moreover, the graves of your dead will be opened and predatory animals will attack your houses. Afterwards a fair-complexioned man will install a chair in Mecca calling people to curse ‘Alī b. Abī Ṭālib, and killing many people, but he will be killed on the same day.\(^{50}\)

According to ‘Alī b. al-Ḥusayn b. al-Qāsim al-Kharrāz (d. ca. 250/864) all these signs occurred during the revolt of Yaḥyā b. ʿUmar in 250/864. As a result, some Shiʿites, particularly the Jārūdiyya, believed that the leader of this revolt, Yaḥyā b. ʿUmar, was himself al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī.\(^{51}\)

3.4 The twelfth Imam in the Imamite traditions

The Imamite traditionists are distinguished from the Sunnites and the Zaydites by their claim that the twelfth Imam mentioned in the Sunnite and the Zaydite traditions is in fact Muḥammad the son of the eleventh Imam al-ʿAskarī, and that he is al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī. Moreover they have written in more detail about his occultation, and his political role, the signs which would precede his reappearance and the social and political conditions which might pave the way for it.

3.4.1. The traditions concerning the twelfth Imam

The Prophetic traditions concerning the twelve Imams related by the Sunnite and the Zaydite traditionists were also narrated by the Imamites.\(^{52}\) They applied these traditions to their twelve Imams and added traditions of the Imams themselves which indicate explicitly that the successor of the eleventh Imam was al-Qāʾīm. The traditions attributed to the Prophet do not indicate explicity that al-Qāʾīm would be the successor of al-ʿAskarī, the eleventh Imam, whereas the sayings of the Imams do.

The earliest reference to a Prophetic tradition concerning the twelfth Imam is recorded by the Imamite traditionists on the authority of Sulaym b. Qays al-Hilālī. He was a companion of five Imams, ‘Alī, al-Ḥasan, al-Ḥusayn, ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn and al-Bāqir, and died in 90/701.\(^{53}\) The Imamites regard his work as the first Shiʿite collection of Ḥadīth.\(^{54}\) He reports numerous narrations concerning the twelve Imams and the political role of the last Imam. The first of these narrations is attributed to a Christian monk who met ‘Ali after his return from the battle of Ṣiiṃṭ. He informed him that he had found in the Gospels that the successors of the Prophet Muḥammad would be twelve; the last of them would fill the world with justice, and Jesus would perform the prayer behind him.⁵⁵

All the other narrations in Sulaym’s work are attributed to the Prophet. The most important of these is quoted on the authority of the companions ‘Ali, ‘Abd Allah b. Ja‘far al-Ṭayyār, Salmān al-Fārīsī, Abū al-Haytham b. al-Tayhān, Khuzayma b. Thābit, ‘Ammār b. Yāsir, Abū Dharr, al-Miqdād and Abū Ayyūb. They narrated that the Prophet gathered his companions together at Ghadīr Khumm and said to them:

O people, the legal power (al-wilāya) is granted only to ‘Ali b. Abī Talib and the trustees from my progeny, the descendants of my brother ‘Ali. He will be the first, and his two sons, al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn, will succeed him consecutively. They will not separate themselves from the Qur’an until they return to Allah.⁵⁶

Sulaym adds that the Commander of the Faithful, ‘Ali, told him, “O brother, son of Ḥilāl, the Mahdī of my nation is Muḥammad, who shall fill the earth with justice and equity as it was filled with tyranny and injustice. I know who will pay the oath of allegiance to him.”⁵⁷

Sulaym states that he met al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn in Medina after the assassination of their father, ‘Ali, and related to them this tradition on ‘Ali’s authority. They confirmed that they had also heard it from the Prophet. Sulaym adds that he informed ‘Ali b. al-Ḥusayn, the fourth Imam, in the presence of his son al-Bāqir about this tradition, and they also confirmed its authenticity. Moreover Abbān b. Abī ‘Ayyāsh reports that he met al-Bāqir during the rite of pilgrimage and mentioned Sulaym’s tradition to him, and that he confirmed its authenticity.⁵⁸

But al-Mas‘ūdi doubts the authenticity of this tradition claiming that this tradition was transmitted only through Sulaym.⁵⁹ Despite the fact that this tradition is related on the authority of Sulaym b. Qays by many Imamite scholars, such as al-Kulaynī, al-Nu‘mānī, and al-Ṭūsī,⁶₀ it was related and confirmed by others as well.⁶¹ In addition al-Ṣadūq relates the above tradition on the authority of ‘Ali,⁶² and he narrates another prophetic tradition on the authority of ʿAbd Allah b. ʿAbbās:

I am the master of the Prophets and ʿAlī the master of my trustees, of whom there will be twelve; the first one is ʿAlī, and the last is al-Qāʾim.⁶³

Moreover the Imamite scholars relate numerous traditions attributed to their Imams, which confirm that the twelfth Imam will be al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī.⁶⁴ It is worth noting that al-Hadramī (fl. 3rd/9th century) reports a tradition which gives the Imam who will rise in arms the epithet al-Qāʾim.⁶⁵ At the same time other narrations employ the epithet al-Mahdī, particularly in the works of al-Ṣaffār (d. 290/902).⁶⁶

The use of these two terms caused such confusion amongst the followers of al-Jawād that some were not sure whether al-Qāʾim and al-Mahdī were the same individual or not. Therefore, according to al-Ṣadūq, al-Jawād was reported as having said that al-Qāʾim is from “us” and that he would be al-Mahdī; he must be awaited by his followers during his occultation and obeyed at his rising and that he would be his descendant in the third generation.⁶⁷ The Imamites of the fourth/ninth century called the twelfth Imam al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī. Al-Mufid states that he was called al-Mahdī because he would guide people to a forgotten dogma and law.⁶⁸

3.4.2. The political role of al-Qāʾim

It has already been pointed out that the Imams from ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn onwards adopted publicly a quiescent policy towards the Umayyads and the ʿAbbāsids. Accordingly, they stressed the propagation of their teachings, which they expected, would result in religious and political awareness among the people and would prepare the ground for the task of al-Qāʾim. Al-Nuʿmānī reports that al-Bāqir advised his partisan Abū al-Jārūd to keep quiet at home, and not to implicate himself in the militant activities of some ʿAlids against the Umayyads, since the Umayyad state had a natural lifespan and the moment of its downfall had not yet come.⁶⁹ He added that any ʿAlid who rebelled against tyranny before the rise of al-Qaʾīm would inevitably fail.⁷⁰ Al-Ṣādiq and the later Imams followed the same policy. They ordered their followers not to allow despair to find a place in their hearts and to wait for the rise of al-Qāʾim in the near future. This policy enabled the Imamites to spread their doctrine and at the same time to organize themselves during the period between 132-260/749-874 - into a well-established political and financial organization (al-Wikāla). It seems probable that this underground organization was preparing for the rise of al-Qāʾim. For they expected his rising and placed important political and religious duties upon his shoulders.

Several narrations suggest that the quiescent policy of the Imams was established after their followers caused two abortive rebellions. According to al-Kulaynī, al-Ṣādiq once said:

This matter (al-Amr), that is, the endeavour to reach power, was hidden until it reached the hands of the Kaysāniyya. They revealed it on the roads and circulated it among the villagers of al-Sawād.73

According to al-Nuṣayrī, the Imamites endeavoured to rise in arms twice, first in the year 70/689 and second in the year 140/758, but their followers spoiled their plans by revealing the name of their leader to their foes, an act which resulted in the arrest or the assassination of the Imams. In this connection a conversation between al-Bāqir and his partisan ʿAbd Allah by ʿAṭā al-Wāṣiṭi is revealing. Al-Wāṣiṭi said to the Imam:

You have many followers in Iraq and there is no one among your family who has the merit for leadership but you. So why do you not rise in arms? Al-Bāqir replied: O ʿAbd Allah, do not listen to the masses, because none of us has his name mentioned by the people nor a hand pointing at him as the Imam, without soon facing inevitable death. So search for him whose birth is concealed from the people, because he will be the one who will manage such an affair.75

Moreover al-Ṣādiq was reported to have said:

This matter (the rising in arms) was vested in me, but Allah delayed it; He shall do with my progeny whatever He wants.76

These sayings indicate that the Imams had suffered the consequences of revealing the fixed dates of their militant endeavours to reach power. Hence the later Imams did not reveal explicitly to their followers which Imam would be al-Qāʾim with the sword. At the same time they encouraged their followers to follow their instructions,” for this would pave the way for one of the Imams to reach power under the title of al-Qā‘im.

Several traditions reveal that the establishment of al-Qā‘im’s political state will occur through the “natural” course of events. A Prophetic tradition states that a group of people from the east will start underground activities and pave the way for the installation of al-Mahdī by military means. The latter will struggle for power without any miraculous aid and will face difficulties and opposition against the propagation of his teachings, similar to the opposition which the Prophet faced with Quraysh. Furthermore he will not take any militant action unless he has at least 10,000 partisans.

According to al-Bāqir the main goal of al-Qā‘im will be to establish an Islamic state and to apply Islamic law as it was revealed to the Prophet. Al-Ṣādiq asserts that he will follow the Prophet’s policy by eliminating and demolishing all the innovations which derive from a situation of ignorance (al-Jāhiliyya) and apply Islam in a new form. Other narrations indicate that he will apply the law of David and Solomon along with the Islamic law and apply the rules of the Torah to the Jews and the rules of the Gospel to the Christians. According to al-Nu‘mānī, his state will include, in addition to the Islamic lands, the territories of Rūm, Sind, India and China.

Some functions attributed to al-Qā‘im indicate the unrest and disappointment felt by the Imamites in the face of the political and economic situation of the time. Al-Faḍl b. Shādhān (d. 260/873) and al-Kulaynī report that al-Qā‘im will rise with the sword as God’s avenger against those who caused troubles to ‘Ali and his wife Fāṭima. He would also take vengeance against those who were responsible for the suffering of the Imams and their followers, particularly against those who assassinated al-Husayn. Al-Ṣādiq considered al-Husayn’s assassination the main reason for the rise of al-Qā‘im as an avenger. Other functions of al-Qā‘im depict the political annoyance of the Imams towards the allegiance of the Arabs, and especially towards the clan of Quraysh who had monopolized political authority since the death of the Prophet. Al-Nu‘mānī mentions a tradition attributed to Imam al-Ṣādiq: “When al-Qā‘im rises he will deal with the Arabs and Quraysh only by the sword.”

The Imamites also vested al-Qā‘im with another task which reveals their dissatisfaction with the economic system of the Abbāsid state. According to al-Himyarī, al-Bāqir stated that when al-Qā‘im rose all the feudal systems would be abolished.\textsuperscript{87} Al-Kulaynī agrees with al-
Himyarī and adds that \textit{al-Qā'im}, after carrying out this operation, may allow his partisans to administer and cultivate the lands with the condition that they pay the legal land-tax.\textsuperscript{88}

In the light of these hopes and the repeated failure of the Zaydite uprisings, as had been expected by the Imams, the Imamites concentrated all their hopes on the uprising of \textit{al-Qā'im}, whose state had been awaited since the time of al-Bāqir.\textsuperscript{89} Al-Nuʿmānī reports that when the ‘Abbāsid revolution broke out in Khurasan and black baners were raised, Abū Bakr al-Ḥāḍramī and Abbān went to the Imam al-Ṣādiq, and asked his opinion about participating in the revolution. He warned them against it saying: “When you see us follow a man, then you must join us with weapons.”\textsuperscript{90} Although the Imam did not reveal the identity of the man to be followed, he confirmed that he would struggle for power by militant means and eliminate the rule of his opponents.\textsuperscript{91} It appears that because of the militant role of \textit{al-Qā'im} the Imams refrained from giving any explicit statement of his identity. However, they did indicate that since the rulers, first the Umayyads and then the ‘Abbāsids, had reached power by “natural” means, their fall would also occur by “natural” means.

There is a good deal of evidence to indicate that some of the Imams would have taken militant action if they had had strong and faithful partisans. But they delayed this task indefinitely until the intellectual activities of their followers could bear fruit and be converted into a political awareness which might enable one of the Imams to gain power by militant means. The Imams also wanted their partisans to be more optimistic in gaining immediate success, and not to leave the task of propagation of their teachings to \textit{al-Qā'im}, whose military uprising relied on the outcome of the activities of the Imamites themselves. Finally, it seems most likely that the uprising of the Imam who would be \textit{al-Qā'im}, was later attributed to the twelfth Imam, because the Imamite propaganda reached a developed, political stage during the life-time of the tenth and the eleventh Imams, and this might have enabled the twelfth Imam to reach power.

3.4.3 The signs of the rise of \textit{al-Qā'im}

The early Imamite traditionists delineated five signs which would precede the rise of \textit{al-Qā'im al-Mahdī}: first, the rise of al-Yamānī.
then the rise of al-Sufyānī, thirdly the assassination of the Pure Soul (al-Nafs al-Zakiyya) in Mecca only fifteen days before the rise of al-Qā'īm, fourthly an outcry in the morning from the sky in the name of al-Qā'īm, and finally the sinking of an army into the earth (al-Baydā') during its march on Mecca. Despite the fact that al-Nu'mānī, al-Ṣadūq and al-Ṭūsī differ as to the chronological occurrence of these signs, they all agree that they will occur in the same year.

It seems that the delineation of these signs along with the expectations of the Imamites and al-Jārūdiyya that al-Qā'īm al-Mahdi would rise in the near future caused the ʿAbbāsid authorities to be suspicious, since some of these signs were connected with their regime and indicated that al-Qā'īm's uprising was directed mainly against them. The fact that the Imams had the ʿAbbāsids in mind can be seen in the discussion between al-Ridā, the eighth Imam, and his adherent al-Ḥasan b. al-Jahm, who said to him:

“May Allah make you prosper! The people are saying that al-Sufyānī will rise after the fall of the ʿAbbāsids.” Al-Ridā said:

“They lie. He will rise while they are still in power.”

This statement has been confirmed in other traditions attributed to al-Ṣādiq. For example his companion Yaʿqūb b. al-Sarrāj asked him:

“When will your Shiʿa gain their release from suffering?” He replied, “When conflict occurs amongst the ʿAbbāsids, and their power begins to decline. Then their partisans and their subjects will be encouraged to threaten the authorities. Thereafter al-Sufyānī will rise from the West, while the Yamānī will advance from the East, until they both reach Kufa, where they will destroy the ʿAbbāsids. At the same time the Hasanī will start his rebellion. Then the Master of this matter, al-Qā'īm, shall advance from Medina towards Mecca to rebel.”

According to al-Nu'mānī, al-Ṣādiq added that because of these events, the fall of the ʿAbbāsid regime was inevitable. Its fall would be similar to a piece of crockery dropped from the hand of its possessor, which then splits into pieces.

In the light of these statements attributed to the Imams it is clear that from the time of al-Ṣādiq onwards, the Imamites awaited the political uprising of one of their Imams, called al-Qā’īm while the ʿAbbāsids were still in power. Indeed the spread of these traditions caused the ʿAbbāsids to fear the Imams, who might have been behind some ʿAlid revolts. Perhaps this is why the ʿAbbāsid caliphs became suspicious of the Imams. Even the caliph al-Mansūr himself related a tradition on the authority of al-Bāqir stating that al-Qā'im would be from the progeny of ʿAlī. He restricted the movements of al-Ṣādiq and his followers and made it a policy to discriminate against them. Moreover he invested his successor Muhammad with the epithet “al-Mahdi” (158-169/775-785) in order to turn the attention of his subjects from the ʿAlīd family toward the family of ʿAbbās.
Despite the fact that the movements of the seventh Imam, Mūsā al-Kāẓim, were also restricted by the authorities, so that he died in prison, the Shīʿite propaganda for the rise of an Imam in the name of al-Qā'im and al-Mahdi spread on a wide scale, particularly after the rebellion of Ibn Ṭabātabā in 199/814. Probably because of this situation the caliph al-Maʿmūn devised a new policy towards the eighth Imam al-Ridā. He made overtures to him asking him to be his heir apparent. By this means he hoped to split the ʿAlīds some of whom were in rebellion and to keep al-Ridā within the ʿAbbāsid palace under close watch. Al-Maʿmūn followed this same policy with the ninth Imam, al-Jawād, marrying him to his daughter Umm al-Fadl, and keeping him under house-arrest. Thereafter house-arrest became the cornerstone of the policy of the caliphs towards the Imams. It obliged the Imams to stress the idea of the occultation as the means the Imam would employ to avoid the ʿAbbāsid restriction, which increased from the time of al-Mutawakkil onwards.
Because his agents discovered connections between the underground activities of the Imamite agents in Baghdad, Madāʾin and Kufa and the Imam al-Hādī, al-Mutawakkil followed the policy of al-Maʿmūn. He wrote to al-Hādī a letter full of kindness and courtesy asking him to come to Sāmarrā where they could meet. Afterwards al-Hādī was summoned to the capital in 233/848, where he spent the rest of his life under surveillance. As a result he was prevented from meeting most of his adherents. He was only able to meet a few of his associate agents (wukalāʾ) in secret. In fact al-Mutawakkil’s policy managed to prevent the ʿAlīds from rising in arms against his regime. However it failed to destroy the system of the wikāla or to end the underground activities of the Zaydites and the Imamites. These spread throughout the empire to the extent that they were capable of causing a revolt.
Between the years 245-260/859-874 the Imamite and Zaydite traditionists were relating traditions stating that al-Qāʾim would be the twelfth Imam and urging people to join his side when he rose. The Zaydite al-‘Asfarî (d. 250/864)\(^{107}\) and the Imamite Ahmad b. Khâlid al-Barqî (d. 274-80/887-93)\(^{1}\) both related such traditions. For example, in 250/864 al-Barqî passed on a narration attributed to ‘Ali b. Abî Ṭâlib and the Prophet al-Khidr, which states explicitly that \(al-Qâ’im al-Mahdî\) would be the twelfth Imam.\(^ {108}\) The spread of such narrations encouraged the Imamites to expect the rise of \(al-Qâ’im\) in the near future and to link his rising with ‘Abbâsid rule. Some of them applied these traditions along with others concerning the signs of the rise of \(al-Qâ’im\) to the circumstances surrounding the ‘Alid revolt which broke out in 250/864. Ibn Ṭâqī relates that the leader of the rebellion, Yahyâ b. ‘Umar, was expected to be \(al-Qâ’im al-Mahdî\), since all the signs concerning the rise of \(al-Qâ’im al-Mahdî\) related by al-Sadiq occurred during the revolt.\(^ {109}\)

Although Yahyâ b. ‘Umar died in 250/864, the ‘Abbâsid’s fear increased because of the continuation of this revolt and al-Ḥasan b. Zayd’s (250-270/864-884) success in establishing a Shi‘ite state in Ṭabaristân. This fear is not surprising if one bears in mind the fact that there was a well-known Prophetic tradition which stated, “A people will appear in the East who will pave the way for the Mahdî’s rise to power.”\(^ {110}\) This tradition, at that time, might seem to refer to the establishment of the ‘Alid state in Ṭabaristân, which would prepare the way for the rise of \(al-Qâ’im al-Mahdî\). Other factors supported the ‘Abbâsid fears. According to al-Ṭabarî, ‘Abbâsid spies discovered secret correspondence between the founder of the ‘Alid state in Ṭabaristân, al-Ḥasan b. Zayd, and the nephew of Muḥammad b. ‘Ali b. Khalaf al-‘Aṭṭâr,\(^ {111}\) a follower of the tenth Imam al-Hâdî. Moreover many pure Imamites took part in the ‘Alid revolt of 250/864, such as Muḥammad b. Ma‘rûf, who held the banner of the rebels in Mecca,\(^ {112}\) and ‘Ali b. Mûsâ b. Ismâ‘îl b. Mûsâ al-Kâzîm, who joined the rebels in al-Rayy and was arrested by the caliph al-Mu‘tazz.\(^ {113}\) It seems that the ‘Abbâsid authorities linked these factors with the activities of al-Hâdî. Therefore they imposed tight restrictions upon al-Hâdî and his followers, and arrested prominent figures in Baghdad, such as Abû Hâshim al-Ja‘farî, and Muḥammad b. ‘Ali al-‘Aṭṭâr, and sent them to Sâmarrâ.\(^ {114}\) This campaign of arrest also included al-‘Askarî and Ja‘far, al-Hâdî’s two sons.\(^ {115}\)

Another reason the ‘Abbâsids’ feared the position of al-Hâdî and his successor, al-‘Askarî, is the traditions of both the Prophet and the Imams concerning the series of the twelve Imams, the last of whom would be al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī. This series could only be interpreted as applying to the Imamites’ tenth Imam, al-Hādī, and his successor al-‘Askarī. So it was plausible that the successor of the latter would be the twelfth Imam, about whom so many traditions were being related. Moreover further traditions, attributed to al-Hādī and al-‘Askarī, themselves appeared around this period emphasizing the important political and religious role of al-‘Askarī’s son. For example, Abū Hāshim al-Ja‘farī (d. 261/875), the associate and follower of al-Hādī, reports the latter as having said,

“The successor after me is my son al-Hasan but what will you do with the successor of my successor?” Al-Ja‘farī said, “May Allah make me your sacrifice! Why?” The Imam said, “Because you will not see his physical body and it is not permissible for you to reveal his name.” Al-Ja‘farī said, “How shall we mention him?” Al-Hādī said, “Say ‘The proof [al-Hujja] is from the family of Muḥammad.’”

It seems from al-Kulaynī’s report that the Imamites considered al-Hādī’s statement as applying to al-Qā‘im. Moreover, they felt it explained a statement by the eighth Imam, al-Riḍā, who had said that the body of al-Qā‘im would not be seen and his name would not be revealed. Perhaps al-Bāqir and al-Jawād’s interpretation of a Qur’anic verse, referred to on page 15, may be linked with the above two statements. For as we have seen, he stated that an Imam would go into concealment in 260/874, and would later rise like a bright, shooting star in the dark night.

On account of the spread of these Imamite traditions and the ‘Alid underground activities, the eleventh Imam, al-Hasan al-‘Askarī, was forced to stay in the capital under house-arrest and had to report to the Abbāsid court twice a week. The authorities hoped that through these measures they would be able to prevent the appearance of any danger from the twelfth Imam.
CHAPTER II

1. Al-Ṣādiq’s Attitude towards the new Regime

It appears that the members of the ‘Abbāsid family who became part of the revolutionary movement against the Umayyads adhered to the belief, in common with the various groups of the Shi‘a, that the first lawful caliph after the Prophet was ‘Alī,¹ and that the caliphate must belong to the People of the House (Ahl al-Bayt). The ‘Abbāsids preached against the Umayyads by calling for reform and justice. They invited the people to rally around the most suitable person from the progeny of Muḥammad (al-Da‘wa li-l-Riḍā min Āl Muḥammad). Many Shi‘ite thought that this slogan referred only to the descendants of Imam ‘Alī. Thus they joined the ‘Abbāsid movement.² Some of the Shi‘a, such as Abū Salama al-Khallāl, reached high rank in the ‘Abbāsid movement without cognizing the fact that the ‘Abbāsids were the founders of the movement, and they aimed to monopolize the caliphate for themselves. When the propagandists overthrew the Umayyads in 132/749, Abū Salama al-Khallāl, having discovered the reality of the ‘Abbāsid’s goal, endeavoured to transfer the caliphate to the ‘Alids by corresponding with Imam Ja‘far al-Ṣādiq, ‘Umar al-Ashraf and ‘Abd Allah al-Mahd, offering it to each of them, Imam Ja‘far al-Ṣādiq rejected the offer bluntly by burning Abū Salama’s letter, and he warned ‘Umar al-Ashraf and ‘Abd Allah al-Mahd against accepting it.³ Al-Ṣādiq had already held a secret meeting with the leading personalities of the ‘Abbāsid family, such as al-Saffāh and al-Manṣūr at al-Abwā’, near Medina, around the year 120/737, to discuss the situation of the People of the House (Ahl al-Bayt). At this meeting the attendants wanted to form an underground collusion to bring about the downfall of the Umayyads. A proposal also was made to support the Ḥasanid claims put forward by ʿAbd Allah al-Mahd on behalf of his son Muhammad al-Nafs al-Zakiyya, but al-Ṣādiq refused to have anything to do with it. Although the ʿAbbāsids present at this meeting made a nominal pledge to Muhammad al-Nafs al-Zakiyya, al-Ṣādiq seems to have been aware of the possibility that their involvement with the revolutionaries, particularly the Kaysāniyya or its Ḥāshimiyya branch, would be successful and that they would replace the Umayyads. Also al-Ṣādiq knew he was the true divinely appointed Imam of the Muslims and he achieved the Imamate by the testament of his father, Imam al-Bāqir. Thus people should rally around him to recover his right in the caliphate. Al-Ṣādiq’s view did not please the ʿAbbāsids, so, they carried out their underground activities against the Umayyads without his participation.

When the ʿAbbāsids succeeded in seizing the reins of power in 132/749 they were naturally aware of the danger from their kinsmen, the ʿAlids, whose claims to succession would be greater than their own if ʿAlī’s right to the caliphate were to be accepted by the general populace. As a result the ʿAlids now faced ʿAbbāsid oppression more severe than that of the Umayyads. The motives for this oppression seem to have been first of all doctrinal. The early members of the ʿAbbāsid family, such as ʿAbd Allah b. ʿAbbās, had confirmed ʿAlī’s right to the Imamate (the political and religious authority) by relating many traditions attributed to the Prophet supporting it. They had also supported ʿAlī against the first three Caliphs and participated in the Caliphate of ʿAlī, and they gave some support to his son al-Ḥasan. In the eyes of the ʿAlids by taking over the Caliphate the ʿAbbāsids became usurpers of the political authority of the Imamate. Hence the ʿAbbāsids became suspicious of the ʿAlid attitude toward their authority. Secondly there were economic motives for the ʿAbbāsid oppression since Imam al-Ṣādiq continued to collect the khums secretly from his followers, an act which the ʿAbbāsids considered as a preparatory step towards some conspiracy to overthrow them. These two factors obliged the ʿAbbāsids to keep al-Ṣādiq in Medina and to hold his followers, especially in Iraq and later in Egypt, under close scrutiny as measures to ensure the security of the state.

Thus al-Ṣādiq maintained an externally quiescent policy towards the ‘Abbāsids. Yet at the same time he spread traditions amongst the Shi‘ite narrators of traditions stating that the Imamate was a prerogative bestowed by God upon one of the descendants of al-Husayn, who, before his death and at the Prophet’s order, had transferred it to his successor by a clear stipulation (al-Naṣṣ al-Jalī). Al-Sādiq held that it was not necessary for the divinely appointed Imam to rise in revolt immediately in order to recover his rights to political authority. He should be satisfied with the spiritual leadership and perform its duties until the time when the community is sufficiently aware of his right to political power. Then God will assist him in his quest. In accordance with his quiescent policy al-Sādiq announced openly that al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī and not himself would achieve political power.

Al-Sādiq’s quiescent policy did not satisfy a considerable body of his adherents. Their political ambitions caused schism amongst the Imamites. The instigator of this political movement was called Abū al-Khaṭṭāb. At first he was trusted by al-Sādiq and nominated as agent (wakīl) of the Shi‘ite group in Kufa. But al-Sādiq then repudiated and denounced him because of his extremist theological view, which he had endeavoured to enforce by militant means. It seems likely that Abū al-Khaṭṭāb wanted to circumvent the influence and the interference of al-Sādiq by propounding his political and revolutionary ideas to al-Sādiq’s son Ismā‘īl, who was more inclined to such thoughts than his younger brother Mūsā. Thus Abū al-Khaṭṭāb hoped to give his revolutionary ideas religious legitimacy under Ismā‘īl’s name.

Although the rebellion of Abū al-Khaṭṭāb was easily subdued at Kufa, his failure and al-Sādiq’s continued insistence on a quiescent policy forced Abū al-Khaṭṭāb’s followers to resort to underground activities under the leadership of Muḥammad b. Ismā‘īl. This event led the adherents of al-Sādiq to split into the Ismā‘īlīs and the Mūsawiyya. After his death, they split into Mūsawiyya, who held the Imamate of Mūsā al-Kāzim, al-Fathiyya, who held the Imamate of the eldest son of al-Sādiq, Abū Allah al-Aftah; al-Muhammadiyya, who held the Imamate of Muhammad b. Ja‘far al-Sādiq, the Wāqifa, who thought that al-Sādiq had not died but was al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī; and the two Ismā‘īl sects who held the Imamate of Ismā‘īl and his son Muḥammad respectively.
2. The Imamite activities during the period of al-Kāzim (148-183/765-799)

As a consequence of al-Ṣādiq’s death the Imamites became so weak that even if military rebellion might have been possible during his lifetime, there was little chance of it now. The rise of the Ismāʿīlīs during al-Ṣādiq’s lifetime, followed by the rise of the Fāṭhiyya sect, which included most of the Imamite fuqahā', made the position of al-Ṣādiq’s successor, Mūsā al-Kāzim, very weak, and obliged him to follow the quiescent policy of his father. For this reason al-Mansūr (d. 158/774) did not take any action against him or his followers during his lifetime. However he continued his pursuit of the representatives of the revolutionary branch of the Hasanids.

The regime of al-Mahdī, who was installed in the Caliphate after the death of his father al-Mansūr in 158/774, was distinguished by his “orthodox” policy. He encouraged the traditional muḥaddithūn, pursued the zindiqs, and oppressed the People of the Book. However, “this policy could be described as less religious policy than a political weapon. The promotion of the Sunna by the ‘Abbāsids was, in fact, a means in the struggle against the religio-political enemies or opposition movements.”

This statement is illustrated by al-Mahdī’s attitude towards the Imamites. When he came to power in 158/774, the followers of al-Kāzim became active and more powerful than the Fāṭhiyya and the Ismāʿīlīs. Al-Mahdī thought that the religious and intellectual activities of al-Kāzim’s partisans might endanger his regime, especially as there was a report indicating “that an important body of opinion had been turning towards the ‘Alids and away from the ‘Abbāsids or rather, had been insisting that the Hāshimites charisma was not equally spread through all the clan, but was peculiarly present in the ‘Alids alone.” Perhaps for this reason, al-Mahdī summoned al-Kāzim from Medina and imprisoned him in Baghdad. But in so doing he neither reinforced the legitimacy of his rule nor changed public opinion towards the charismatic character of al-Kāzim. Therefore, he decided to follow a policy which depended on bribery and the intimidation of the Shi’a. Al-Kāzim was released in 159/775, after he had sworn that he would not rise in arms against al-Mahdī or his successors. According to al-Ṭabarī, al-Mahdī simultaneously approached the Zaydites in order to gain their assistance in monitoring the activities of the ‘Alids and their followers.

For example, he made overtures to Ya‘qūb b. Dāwūd, who belonged to a family which had worked in the secretarial affairs of Khurāsān during the Umayyad period, and made him his “brother in God”. Then, in 163/799, al-Mahdī made him his vizier and vested him with full powers to handle all the affairs of the Caliphate, whereupon Ya‘qūb gathered together the Zaydites and appointed them to the high offices of the state. Al-Mahdī may have been motivated by the fact that the non-revolutionary Zaydites (al-Jarīriyya) believed in the Imamate of the Inferior (al-Mafḍūl) as long as the Superior (al-Afdal), was present, and such dogma might give a legitimate foundation to his Caliphate which could be used against the ‘Alids.

During al-Mahdī’s regime the claim was put forward that the lawful Imam after the Prophet was not ‘Ālī but al-‘Abbās, and that therefore the Imamate belonged to his family. In fact Ya‘qūb b. Dāwūd brought many jurisprudents together from Baṣra, Kūfah and al-Sham and organised them so as to further this claim. Al-Kashshī reports two transmissions to support this. He says that the Zaydite Hishām b. Ibrāhīm wrote many Zaydite works, one of them entitled “The Confirmation of the Imamate of al-‘Abbās”, and he adds that another Zaydite, called Ibn al-Muq‘ad, wrote a heresiographical work illustrating the dogmas, places and activities of the pro-Imamites, such as al-Ya‘fūriyya, al-Zurāriyya, al-Ammāriyya, and al-Jawāliqiyya, and submitted his work to al-Mahdī. This work was then recited together with a warning by the Caliph at the gates of Baghdad, Medina and other cities. The recitation of this work was the first step to al-Mahdī’s pursuit of the other factions of the pro-‘Alids. Some of these pro-‘Alids were obliged to flee from Kūfah to remote provinces, like Yemen, while al-Kāżim spread instructions amongst his adherents for them to follow his quiescent policy carefully. Al-Kashshī’s report seems to indicate that the tense relationship between the ‘Abbāsids and the pro-‘Alids continued until the death of al-Mahdī in 169/785.

Although some of this tension seems to have been alleviated with the accession of al-Hādi, the Ḥasanids were closely watched and their salaries cut. They began to increase their propaganda in Khurāsān and the other provinces in a new Zaydite form, and they contacted the leading personalities of the Ḥasanids in Medina, encouraging them to revolt. As a part of al-Hādi’s precautionary policy the Hasanids of Medina were forced to come to the office of the governor every evening. They exploited a gathering of their followers from numerous provinces during the Pilgrimage and made their ill-treatment by the governor an excuse to rebel in 169/785. But their uprising was easily defeated and resulted in their being massacred in the battle of Fakkhk. However the Caliph accused al-Kāzim of provoking the rebels and decided to kill him, but died in 170/786 before he could put his decision into practice.

The battle of Fakkhk and the commitment of al-Hādi’s successor, al-Rashīd, to the anti-‘Alid policy of his predecessors only served to entrench the political strategy of the three ‘Alid parties, the revolutionary Hasanids, the Ismā‘īlīs and the Imamites.

The Imamite group under Imam Mūsā al-Kāzim became stronger and more organised, and insisted on a gradual movement towards their political goal, but the Imam rejected any bid to rise in arms because he considered this the task of al-Qā‘im. His adherents, most of whom were originally from Kufa, were scattered throughout the Islamic state and used the rite of Pilgrimage to communicate with each other. They succeeded in maintaining an important body of followers in Akhmim in Egypt, which became a centre for communication between the Shi‘a in Kufa and those in Egypt. They had other followers in al-Maghrib. Al-Kāzim permitted a few of his adherents to work in the ‘Abbāsid administration, especially in the offices of al-wizāra and al-barīd (governmental mail), so that they could help to save their fellows in times of danger. Hence several Imamite families held office, such as that of ‘Alī b. Yaqtīn and that of al-Ash‘ath, including Ja‘far b. Muḥammad al-Ash‘ath and his son al-‘Abbās, who became the governor of Khurasan, and Waddāh (or Wādhīh), who worked in the barīd of Egypt.

The enlargement of al-Kāzim’s party increased his wealth, for there is much evidence to indicate that he collected secretly from his adherents the khums, the zakāt, gifts and other taxes enjoined in the Shari‘a as part of what was due to his Imamate.

The second Shi‘ite party was the Ismā‘īlīs, who had already disassociated themselves from the quiescent policy of al-Ṣadiq and his son al-Kāzim by adopting the Imamate of Ismā‘īl first and then of his son Muḥammad, both of whom were more inclined toward more actively revolutionary underground political activities. They learnt from the repeated failure of the Hasanid uprisings, which were initiated without political preparation, and they decided to struggle for power through a gradual political process. This decision encouraged them to adopt ideas from beyond the circle of Islam, and their adoption of these ideas may have “liberated” their minds from the limits of Shari‘a. They put forward new interpretations of the Islamic texts, according to which each passage had an esoteric and an exoteric meaning. For example, a tradition attributed to the Prophet says that the Mahdi will appear when the sun rises from the place of its setting. According to them, this meant not the rising of the real sun, but that of al-Mahdi, who would appear in al-Maghrib. Therefore, they became more interested in preaching their doctrine in al-Maghrib and encouraged their followers in the east to emigrate there. Nawbakht’s reports suggest that the relationship between the Isma‘ili and al-Kazim’s followers was tense, since the Isma‘ili leaders allowed their followers to assassinate the Imamites who supported al-Kazim. Moreover the Imamites accused the Isma‘ili of being implicated in the arrest of al-Kazim.

In the Hijaz the situation of the third Shi‘ite group, the Hasanids, was very difficult following the total defeat of their second revolt in Fakhkh in 169/785. The ‘Abbāsids discovered that the notion of al-Mahdi had been in circulation amongst the Hasanids and that they believed that he might rise in Mecca. It was such a notion that encouraged two Hasanid leaders to rise in arms, first al-Nafs al-Zakiyya in 145/762 and then al-Ḥusayn b. ‘Alī in 169/785, each of whom hoped that he might be the promised Mahdi. Thus the ‘Abbāsids continued to restrict the movements of the Hasanids and forced them to present themselves to the governor (al-Wāli) every evening. This critical situation made it impossible for the Hasanids to take any militant action in the Hijaz, so two of al-Nafs al-Zakiyya’s brothers left Medina after the battle of Fakhkh to promote their claims elsewhere. The first of these was Yahyā al-Mahdī, who went to the province of Daylam and preached his ideas there, winning considerable support from the native princes and the people of Daylam, whom he provoked to rebellion against the caliph al-Rashīd in 175/791. The second brother, Idrīs, fled to Egypt, where he already had a large body of partisans, and, with the assistance of a certain Wadih, a Shi‘ite working in the barid, managed to escape from there to al-Maghrib. It seems most likely that his partisans in al-Maghrib had already spread much propaganda against the ‘Abbāsids, because within three years Idrīs succeeded in rebelling against them and establishing the Idrīsid state, in 172/788.
The numerous Shi'ite activities mentioned above seem to have been the causes of al-Rashîd’s anti-‘Alid policy, which covered most of his Caliphate. In 171/787 he became suspicious of the loyalty of the ‘Alids in Baghdad, and decided to gather all of them together and exile them to Medina. He followed this step with the appointment of Bakkar al-Zubayrî, a descendant of ‘Abd Allah b. al-Zubayr, as governor of Medina and he ordered him to put the ‘Alids under close watch and to restrict their movements. As for the rebellion of Yahyâ al-Mahd in Daylam, al-Rashîd sent an army against him (fifty thousand according to al-Ṭabarî) under the leadership of al-Faḍl b. Yahyâ al-Barmakî. Through diplomacy and promises of amnesty he managed to persuade Yahyâ al-Mahd to end his uprising and to surrender, after giving him a guarantee of security from al-Rashîd. But the Caliph was not satisfied, so he had al-Mahd arrested in Baghdad and killed.

As for the revolt of Idrîs al-Mahd, al-Rashîd followed the policy of his father al-Mahdî by using the Zaydites against the other ‘Alids. He sent a Zaydite scholar called Sulaymân b. Jarîr to kill Idrîs. In order to hide his secret target, Sulaymân pretended to be a Shi‘ite partisan who had escaped from the ‘Abbâsids’ oppression. He became one of the courtiers of Idrîs and managed to poison him in 177/793. However the assassination of Idrîs did not bring about the disintegration of his state, as the Berber tribes installed his child, Idrîs II, after his death. For this reason al-Rashîd vested Ibrâhîm b. al-Aghlab with the government of Īfriqiyya and, four years later, encouraged him to establish the Aghlabid state, possibly to counteract the danger posed by the Idrîsids.

In the meantime the Imamite scholars were active in the intellectual field in Egypt, Yaman, Iraq and Khurasan. Hishâm b. al-Ḥakam, for example, attempted to prove the legitimacy of the Imamate of al-Kâzim, which means that he considered the ‘Abbâsids as usurpers of al-Kâzim’s rights.

The Hasanid uprisings in Daylam and al-Maghrib and the underground activities of the Imamites and the Ismâ‘îlis worried al-Rashîd and made him think that al-Kâzim, whom he already knew to be receiving the khums, the kharâj and gifts from his followers, was behind all these activities and had prepared a conspiracy to overthrow him. Therefore he initiated a campaign of arresting the Imamites. He started by arresting al-Kâzim in Medina in 179/795, and sent him to prison in Baṣra and Baghdad. Furthermore, Ibn al-
Mu'tazz reports that al-Rashīd ordered the Zaydite Abū 'Iṣma to kill the Imamite poet Mašūr al-Nammarī. It was this campaign of persecution that forced the Imamite missionary Hishām b. al-Ḥakam to hide in Madā'in, from whence he escaped to Kūfah, where he died two months later. However, al-Rashīd's arrests did not deter the Imamite underground activities, especially in Baṣra. Therefore, according to the Imamite narrations, al-Kāzīm was poisoned for al-Rashīd in 183/799 at the instigation of Yaḥyā al-Barmakī. Al-Rashīd also put to death sixty ʿAlīd who were in his prisons.

The death of al-Kāzīm led to another schism amongst the Imamites. The first group, which represented quite a large body, was called the Wāqifa. They held that he was al-Qā'im al-Mahdī, but they differed amongst themselves concerning his death and split into four sub-groups, three of whom maintained that he had died while the fourth denied it. A few anecdotes mentioned by the Ithna' ʿAshariyya suggest that the cause of the denial of al-Kāzīm's death was that some of his agents, like Uthmān b. ʿĪsā al-Rawāsī in Egypt, and Ziyād, al-Qindī, ʿAlī b. Abī Ḥamza, Ḥayyān and al-Sarrāj in Kūfah, possessed a large amount of money (more than a hundred thousand dinars) which belonged to al-Kāzīm. Since they had used this money for their own benefit, they denied his death and rejected the Imamate of al-Ridā in order that they would have an excuse for not returning the money. However, it is hard to agree with al-Kashshī's view concerning the reason behind the emergence of the Wāqifa sect. Most of the traditions concerning the occultation and the rise of al-Qā'im are attributed to al-Sādiq, who did not indicate explicitly which of his descendants would be al-Qā'im. Therefore it is very likely that a considerable number of the muḥaddithūn thought that the Imam had indicated his son Mūsā and hence stopped at him, contending that he was al-Qā'im al-Mahdī and was in a state of occultation.

The second group resulting from the schism after al-Kāzīm's death held that he had passed away and the Imam was his son ʿAlī al-Ridā, who, according to al-Kulaynī, assumed the Imamate by the designation of his father. Al-Ridā faced many difficulties in proving his right to the Imamate, not only to his father's prominent followers, but also to his brother Aḥmad. However, between the years 183-199/799-814, he managed to maintain a considerable number of followers, and administer an underground system of communication to carry on the religious functions of his Imamate. Moreover his preference for the religious dimensions of Islam, rather than its political dimensions, made him a magnet for many individuals, including the precursors of the Sufi movements, especially in Khurasan. But many Imamites who had accepted his Imamate were not satisfied with his quietist attitude and involved themselves in the underground activities of the revolutionary Zaydites, probably without his permission.

3. The Attitude of al-Ridā towards the 'Alid Revolt against al-Ma’mūn

When al-Amin became caliph, Iraq was the centre of his power. It was here that he maintained the support of the Arabs, and especially that of the Murjī’ite scholars (al-Āmma, later called the Sunnites), while his brother al-Ma’mūn was governor of Khurasan and gained the support of its military leaders and senior administrators, especially the Persian vizier al-Faḍl b. Sahl and his partisans, who eventually helped him to overthrow al-Amin. Al-Ma’mūn’s success in gaining the caliphate was contrary to the political and economic interest of al-Amin’s supporters. Therefore many regional revolts took place in Syria, al-Jazīra, Yemen and Iraq, headed by the local ‘Abbāsid governors. At the same time the ‘Alids used their underground propaganda which was influential in the Yemen, Hijaz and Iraq, to exploit al-Ma’mūn’s difficulties in Iraq and to cause a revolt in Kufa in 199/815. Thus these regions fell out of al-Ma’mūn’s control.

Although reports about the ideological identity of the ‘Alid uprising and the events surrounding it are confused, apparently it was a Zaydite revolt maintained with the support of some Imamite sects. These included the followers of Aḥmad b. Mūsā al-Kāzim and the sabṭiya, the followers of Muḥammad b. Ja‘far al-Ṣādiq along with some of the Imamites, but without the direct order of the eighth Imam, al-Ridā.

The spiritual leader of this revolt was Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm b. Ṭabātabā, while its military leader was Abū al-Sarāyā. It broke out under the slogan “We invite people to rally around the most suitable leader from the progeny of Muḥammad and to practice the teachings of the Qur’an and the sunna” in Kufa on the 10th Jumādā 199/26th January 815, where the rebels had the support of the people of the environs of Kufa and of the bedouins. Abū al-Sarāyā minted coins in his own name in Kufa, managed to defeat three ‘Abbāsid armies and occupied Madā‘in. Moreover he dispatched many successful campaigns under the leadership of al-Ridā’s brothers and relatives to extend his authority in Iraq, al-Ahwāz, Fars, the Hijaz, and Yemen. They fulfilled their tasks and became the governors of these regions. For example, Zayd b. Mūsā al-Kāzim became the governor of al-Ahwaz and Basra, Fars came under the control of Ismā‘īl b. Mūsā al-Kāzim, and Yemen came under the control of his brother Ibrāhim, Wāsīt was ruled by Husayn b. Ibrāhim b. al-Ḥasan b. ‘Alī. Abū al-Sarāyā appointed Sulaymān b. Dāwūd in Medina, and nominated al-Husayn al-Afṭas as governor in Mecca, authorising him to be the leader of the pilgrims and to provide the Ka‘ba with a white kiswa. The authority of Abū al-Sarāyā increased after the mysterious death of the spiritual leader of the revolt, Ibn Ṭabāṭabā on the 1st Rajab 199/15th February 815, and the refusal of the eminent ‘Alid, ‘Alī b. ʿUbayd Allah, to accept the position of Ibn Ṭabāṭabā. Abū al-Sarāyā, in order to evade the interference of any strong spiritual leader, nominated for this post a young ‘Alid called Muhammad b. Muhammad b. Zayd b. ‘Alī, and monopolised all affairs of the leadership of the revolt.

Abū al-Sarāyā’s full control in Iraq did not continue, because the ‘Abbāsid army defeated him at Qaṣr b. Hubayra near Kufa and forced him to withdraw towards Baṣra along with 800 horsemen. But news came to him that his governor in Baṣra, Zayd b. Mūsā al-Kāzim, had also been defeated after hard combat and had been captured by the ‘Abbāsid troops. Thus he went towards al-Ahwāz, but was defeated by the ‘Abbāsid governor of that city and his followers dispersed. A few months later the troops of al-Ḥasan b. Sahl captured him at Jalawlāh and on 10th Rabī’ I 200/18th October 815 they beheaded him, after which his body was impaled in Baghdad.

It is worth mentioning that the failure of this revolt caused some Imamites to hold that Mūsā al-Kāzim, the seventh Imam, was al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī. They had considiered his son Aḥmad as the lawful successor of his father. But since he had participated with Abū al-Sarāyā, they rejected his Imamate and denied the death of al-Kāzim. This fact reveals the general attitude of the Imamites towards any militant action and indicates that they had Ḥadīths concerning the rise of an Imam with the sword, whose uprising would never be defeated, for he could not die without establishing the government of the People of the House. This may be the reason behind the quiescent attitude of those followers of al-Riḍā who did not take any open or active part in the revolt of Abū al-Sarāyā. On hearing of the military defeat of their comrades on the Iraqi front after the death of Abū al-Sarāyā, the rebels in Mecca, who had full control of the Hijaz and the Yemen, made overtures to Muhammad b. Jaʿfar al-Sādiq, asking him to be their leader and finally persuading him to accept their offer. They swore the oath of allegiance to him as their caliph and called him Amīr al-Muʾminīn on 6th Rabī‘ II 200/13th November 815. He himself claimed that he was al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī, and based his claim on prophetic traditions. But the eighth Imam al-Riḍā denied his claim, although he endeavoured to save him from a military defeat by advising him to postpone his revolt against the Ābāsids.

The installation by the rebels of an Ālid caliph in Mecca with the epithet al-Mahdī threatened the authority of al-Maʾmūn. Having failed to subdue the revolt by force, al-Maʾmūn decided to resort to political methods, by conciliating the eight Imam al-Riḍā. He dispatched an army under the leadership of ʿĪsā b. al-Julūdī to Medina for this purpose. But this army was badly defeated at the hands of Muhammad b. Jaʿfar al-Sādiq. Therefore al-Julūdī asked al-Riḍā to contact Muhammad and ask him to end his resistance, but he rejected al-Riḍā’s mediation and insisted on continuing his rebellion. This led to skirmishes between the Ābāsid troops and the rebels until the end of the year 200/815, when the Ābāsid army captured Muhammad b. Jaʿfar al-Sādiq and forced him to renounce his claim publicly. Because his arrest did not return the areas of revolt into the hands of the authorities, al-Julūdī returned with him and al-Riḍā to Merv. According to al-Kulaynī, al-Maʾmūn welcomed al-Riḍā and offered him the caliphate, but he refused. However, after a few months of negotiation with al-Maʾmūn, al-Riḍā agreed to be his successor. The caliph announced his acceptance on 5th Ramaḍān 201/28th March 817 and called him “al-Riḍā min Al-Muhammad”. At the same time he ordered his soldiers to wear green clothes instead of the black which was the emblem of the Ābāsids. Then he strengthened his relations with al-Riḍā by marrying his sister Umm Ḥābiba to al-Riḍā.

The installation of al-Riḍā was in reality a political step arranged by the Persian vizier al-Faḍl b. Sahl and associated with other policies aimed at consolidating his Persian support and harming the interests of his Arab opposition in Baghdad. This can be concluded from the points mentioned below:

Firstly, the fact that al-Maʿmūn continued to reside in Merv caused complaints amongst the military and administrative groups in Iraq, who had been the courtiers of Al-Amin (193-198/808-814) and who then had to struggle for their economic and regional interests against the Persian vizier of al-Maʿmūn, al-Faḍl b. Sahl, and his brother al-Hasan b. Sahl. Because he was busy with this conflict, al-Maʿmūn failed to subdue completely the ʿAlid rebellion in the Hijaz and Yemen. Therefore, with the encouragement of his vizier, al-Maʿmūn installed al-Riḍā as his successor to the caliphate in order to divide the rebels by gaining the support of al-Riḍā’s adherents and those who were hoping for the appearance of an inspired ʿAlid leader.

Secondly, al-Maʿmūn changed the colour of the ʿAbbāsid emblem from black to green. The latter colour was associated with the Sasanids, whereas the ʿAlid emblem was white. Such a step suggests the influence of the Persian vizier al-Faḍl b. Sahl.

Thirdly, by installing al-Riḍā as his successor, al-Maʿmūn succeeded in splitting the rebels by gaining the support of al-Riḍā’s brothers, who accepted the conciliation of al-Maʿmūn and mentioned his name in the khutba along with the name of al-Riḍā. According to al-Ṭabarī, al-ʿAbbās b. Mūsā al-Kāzim accepted the governorship of Kufa on behalf of al-Maʿmūn, a fact which encouraged some of the rebels to mention the names of al-Maʿmūn and al-Riḍā in the khutba. But the majority of the Kufans insisted on mentioning only al-Riḍā’s name or that of any prominent person from the descendants of ʿAlī. Such attitudes indicate the Zaydite inclination of the Kufans. However, the leader of the rebels in Mecca, Ibrāhīm b. Mūsā al-Kāzim agreed to mention both his brother al-Riḍā and al-Maʿmūn in the khutba. For this reason, al-Maʿmūn confirmed his office and authorised him to lead the pilgrimage in Mecca. But a year later, in 202/817, the caliph gave the governorship of Mecca to an ʿAbbāsid leader, ʿĪsā al-Julūdī, and dispatched Ibrāhīm to Yemen to subdue the rebellion there. He also granted him Yemen’s governorship. After he had fulfilled this task, Ibrāhīm set out for Mecca, but during his return he was arrested, as was his brother Zayd, and sent to al-Maʿmūn. Moreover, al-Nawbakhtī mentions that a considerable body of the muhaddithūn and Zaydites (the non-revolutionary branch) became Imamites after the installation of al-Riḍā. But the accounts of al-Kashshī and al-
Ṣadūq suggest that these same people, for example Hishām b. Ibrāhim al-Rashīdī, had been used by al-Ma’mūn to watch the partisans of al-Ridā, and this might explain why they returned to their previous faith directly after the death of al-Ridā in 203/817.93

Fourthly, after he had quashed the ‘Alid rebellion, al-Ma’mūn decided to go to Baghdad, taking with him al-Ridā and Muḥammad b. Ja’far al-Ṣādiq. During his advance, his vizier al-Faḍl b. Sahl was assassinated, then al-Ridā died in Tūs, probably of poison,94 and Muḥammad b. Ja’far al-Ṣādiq passed away and was buried in Jurjān.95 Their mysterious deaths seem to indicate that al-Ma’mūn, having used them to fragment the ‘Alid opposition, was now moving on to a more rigorous anti-‘Alid programme.

Fifthly, the numerous measures initiated by al-Ma’mūn after his arrival at Baghdad on Rabī‘ I 204/819 revealed the political aim of his previous policy. He cast aside the green banner and ordered his subjects to wear the black colour of the ‘Abbāsīds.96 He granted al-Ridā’s successor, al-Jawād, two million dirhams.97 and gave back the district of Fadak to prominent ‘Alids, Muḥammad b. Yaḥyā b. al-Husayn and Muḥammad b. ʿUbayd Allah b. al-Hasan.98 Furthermore, the land-tax (al-kharāj) of the sawād was adjusted in favour of the tax-payer. The share of the treasury was to be two-fifths instead of half of the produce.99 Through these actions, al-Ma’mūn wanted to cut the support given by the prominent ‘Alids and the peasants of the sawād to the revolutionary ‘Alid activities, which, according to Abū al-Fidā, he had brought to an end. He was also endeavouring to work against his Arab opposition in Baghdad. When he entered the city everything there returned to normal as if the uprising had never occurred.100

Finally, in 205/820 al-Ma’mūn started to hold symposiums between the Imamites and the Zaydites, and encouraged them to discuss the question of the Imāma in his presence. It is worth mentioning that the non-revolutionary Zaydites believed in the Imamate of the inferior (al-Mafḍūl) in spite of the presence of the superior (al-Afdal). This view was based on the belief that even though ʿAlī b. Abī Ṭālib was the most excellent of the community after the Prophet, he fully recognized the caliphate of Abū Bakr and ʿUmar. Because of this belief of the Zaydites, in the discussions with the Imamites, al-Ma’mūn often agreed with the viewpoints of Zaydite scholars such as ʿAlī b. al-Hīm, as regards the Imamate.101

Then al-Ma’mūn managed to capture the ‘Alid rebel ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Ahmad b. ʿAbd Allah b. Muhammad b. ʿUmar b. ʿAlī b. Abī Ṭālib, who rose in arms in Yemen. By subduing this rebellion, al-Maʿmūn ended the last military opposition of the ʿAlids during his rule. Finally, in 206/821 his real attitude towards the ʿAlids was revealed when he ordered them to wear black, and announced that all the descendants of Imam ʿAlī b. Abī Ṭālib and their close kindred (al-Talibiyūn) should be prevented from entering his palace.¹⁰²

4. The development of the Imamite organization (al-Wikāla) during the time of al-Jawād

Despite the well-developed status of the Imamite organization during the last period of al-Ridā’s Imamate, he died, leaving a successor only seven years old, thus causing further splits amongst his followers. Al-Masʿūdī mentions that because of the age of Muhammad al-Jawād, the ninth Imam, al-Ridā’s followers were confused as to whether or not he possessed the requisite qualifications for the Imamate. Therefore eighty leading personalities from various provinces, among them al-Rayyān b. al-Salt, Saṭwān b. Yahyā, Yūnis b. Ṭālib al-Rahmān, Muhammad b. Ḥakīm, ʿAlī b. al-Hasan al-Wāṣiti, and Ishāq b. Ismāʿīl b. Nawbakht, gathered together at the house of ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. al-Hajjāj in Baghdad to discuss the validity of al-Jawād’s Imamate. They decided to test his knowledge during the pilgrimage. Two groups concluded that al-Jawād’s age precluded his being qualified for the Imamate; the first group supported the Imamate of his uncle, Ahmad b. Mūsā al-Kāzim, whereas the second group, including Ibrāhīm b. Sāliḥ al-Anmāṭi, joined the Wāqifa and held that the seventh Imam was al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī.¹⁰³ But the rest were satisfied that al-Jawād’s knowledge was exceptional and held that he was well qualified in spite of his age.¹⁰⁴ Hence they continued with the affairs of the organization, and sent propagandists from Kufa and Medina to various provinces. According to al-Najāshī, many Kūfī muhaddithin, such as Muhammad b. Muhammad b. al-Asḥath, Ahmad b. Sahl, al-Ḥusayn b. ʿAlī al-Misrī, and Ismāʾīl b. Mūsā al-Kāzim, moved to Egypt and carried on their activities there. One of these activities was to circulate the traditions of the Prophet concerning al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī and the fact that he would be from the progeny of al-Ḥusayn.¹⁰⁵ A narration mentioned by al-Kulaynī suggests that they gained considerable adherents there, namely, that 'Alī b. Asbāḥ al-Kufī came from Egypt to Medina to see al-Jawād so as to describe him to the Imamites in Egypt.106 Throughout the land of the caliphate the Imamite system of sending out agents (wukala') became more developed and managed to save their organization from certain disintegration. The Imam's agents spread in many provinces, like al-Ahwāz107, Hamadān108, Ṣīstān, Bist109, Rayy110, Basra111, Wāsit, Baghdad112, and the traditional centres of the Imamites, Kufa and Qumm.113 They allowed their partisans to work in the 'Abbāsid administration. Thus Muhammad b. Ismā'īl b. Bazī and Ahmad b. Hamza al-Qummi occupied high ranks in the vizierate,114 and Nūḥ b. Darrāj was the qādī of Baghdad and then of Kufa. Because his relatives were the agents of al-Jawād, he hid his faith during his occupation of this post.115 Other Imamites became governors of some 'Abbāsid provinces, such as al-Husayn b. 'Abd Allah al-Nisābūrī, the governor of Bist and Ṣīstān, and al-Hakam b. 'Alyā al-Asaḍī, the governor of Bahrain. Both of these men paid the khums to al-Jawād while hiding their allegiance to him.116

At this stage the underground activities of the agents only aimed at controlling and carrying on the religious and financial affairs of the Imamites, not at endangering al-Ma'mūn's rule. However in the year 210/825 the people of Qumm, most of whom were Imamites, appealed to the caliph to reduce their land-tax (al-kharāj), just as he had reduced the kharāj of the inhabitants of Rayy, but he ignored their appeal. Therefore they refused to pay the kharāj and took control of the affairs of Qumm.117 As a result al-Ma'mūn dispatched three regiments of his army from Baghdad and Khurasan to quash their revolt. The leader of the Abbāsid army, 'Alī b. Hishām accomplished his task. He demolished the wall of Qumm and killed many people, amongst them Yahyā b. 'Umran, who, according to Ibn Shahr Āshūb, was the agent of al-Jawād.118 Moreover al-Ma'mūn collected seven million dirhams from Qumm's inhabitants as a kharāj instead of the normal amount, which had been two million dirhams before the uprising. The reports of al-Ṭabarī and Ibn al-Athīr indicate that some of the leaders of this revolt were exiled to Egypt, among them Ja'far b. Dāwūd al-Qummi.119 But these measures did not end the military activities in Qumm. According to al-Ṭabarī, Ja'far b. Dāwūd escaped from Egypt and rebelled in Qumm in 214/829, but his revolt was subdued and he was arrested and banished again to Egypt.120 Unfortunately the Imamite sources are silent about these military actions in Qumm and their relationship with the Imamites’ organization. But al-Ma’mūn linked these activities with al-Jawād. Thus he endeavoured to end them through the Imam. According to al-Azdī and al-Ṭabarī, during his march to invade al-Rūm, al-Mam’ūn summoned al-Jawād and welcomed him in Tikrit in Ṣafar 215/830, where he married his daughter Umm al-Faḍl to him. He asked him to celebrate his marriage in Baghdad, then to go back with his wife to Medina. But this marriage neither gave al-Ma’mūn the support of the Imamites nor stopped the revolts in Qumm. Ja’far b. Dāwūd managed to escape again from Egypt and rebelled in Qumm in 216/831, where he defeated the army sent by al-Ma’mūn and killed its leader ‘Alī b. ʿĪsā. He continued his resistance until the end of the year 217/832, when the ‘Abbāsid troops ended his uprising and executed him. But afterwards the underground activities of the ‘Alids increased on a wide scale. Therefore al-Muṭaṣim, who succeeded al-Ma’mūn to the caliphate in 218/833, was obliged to summon al-Jawād and Muhammad b. al-Qāsim al-Ṭalqān, so as to investigate their role in the underground activities. The latter, on hearing of al-Muṭaṣim’s decision, escaped from Kufa to Khurasan, whereas al-Jawād was arrested in Medina and taken along with his wife, Umm al-Faḍl, to the caliph in Baghdad, where he was put under house-arrest. He died a few months later in Dhū al-Hijja 220/835. Some Imamite writers claim that his wife Umm al-Faḍl poisoned him at the instigation of al-Muṭaṣim, but al-Muḥīd thinks that he died naturally.

In the last few years of al-Jawād’s Imamate the system and the tactics of the Imamite agents were highly developed. The Imam’s followers in Khurasan allowed themselves to be recruited into the ‘Abbāsid army and participated in subduing the rebellion of the Khurramiyya. According to al-Ṭūsī, in 220/834 they seized a large amount of booty from the rebels, so al-Jawād ordered them to pay the khums either to him directly or to his agent. Al-Jawād himself, on hearing of al-Muṭaṣim’s command to present himself in Baghdad, asked his representative Muhammad b. Al-Faraj to hand the khums to his son ‘Alī al-Hādī as a sign that he was to be his successor.
5. The 'Abbāsids’ Attitude toward the activities of al-Hādī

According to the Imamite sources, the bulk of the followers of al-Jawād accepted the Imamate of his successor 'Alī al-Hādī, who was then seven years old. His age presented no obstacle to their accepting his Imamate, since they had faced the same problem with his father, who had also been seven years old when he took over the office. A few of al-Jawād’s followers, however, supported the Imamate of his son Mūsā, but after a short time they rejoined the rest of the Imamites, accepting the Imamate of 'Alī al-Hādī.127

At this stage the Imamites concentrated their efforts in re-organising the activities of their followers. This was especially necessary considering the fact that the flourishing state of the 'Abbāsid economy had decreased the 'Alids’ opportunities to obtain supporters for further military action.128 Perhaps for this reason the caliph, al-Mu'tasim and his successor al-Wāthiq (227-232/841-846), were more tolerant towards the 'Alids than al-Ma'mūn before them or al-Mutawakkil after them. According to Abū al-Faraj al-Iṣfahānī, the descendants of 'Alī b. Abī Ṭālib and their close kindred (al-Ṭālibiyūn) assembled in Sāmarrā where they were paid salaries by the caliph al-Wāthiq.129 The latter also distributed a large amount of money among the 'Alids in the Hijaz and other provinces.130

After the death of al-Wāthiq certain events had serious consequences for the 'Abbāsid attitude towards the activities of the adherents of the tenth Imam, al-Hādī. Al-Mutawakkil was chosen to the caliphate in 232/837,131 and his installation was seen by the narrators (al-Muhaddithīn al-Āmma) as a major setback for those who favoured the 'Alids. The majority of the latter were from the ranks of the Mu'tazila and the Shi'iites, who formed the progressive and indeed radical element in society. Recognising this, al-Mutawakkil carried out certain measures with the aim of destroying the economic and political foundations of both the Mu'tazila and the Shi'iites.

Firstly, he abandoned the ‘inquisition’ (al-Mihna) against the narrators of the Āmma, which had been implemented by al-Ma'mūn with the support of the Mu’tazilites, and he encouraged these narrators and their adherents to openly adopt anti-Shi'ite slogans.132

Secondly, al-Mutawakkil discharged the vizier, al-Zayyāt, and his staff from their offices and appointed instead al-Jarjarāṭ and Ibn
Khāqān, who were more inclined to go along to with his anti-Shīʿite policy.¹³³

Thirdly, he decided to rebuild the whole structure of the army in two stages. First he began to gradually weaken the power of the Tāhirīds, who were in charge of ruling Khurāsān and of policing Baghdād and the Sawād. He did this by nominating his three sons, al-Muntaṣīr, al-Muʿtazz and al-Muʿayyad, as his successive heirs apparent, and then appointing al-Muntasir as governor in ʾĪfriqiyya and al-Maghrib, al-Muʿayyad as governor in Syria, and al-Muʿtazz as ruler of the eastern provinces, in particular Khurāsān. Simultaneously the caliph divided the army in the capital among his sons and sent them to the provinces to which he had appointed them, so as to prevent any direct conspiracy on the part of the leaders of the army. His second move was to begin to build a new army called al-Shākiriyya, recruiting people from areas which were well-known for their anti-ʿAlīd attitudes, particularly from Syria, al-Jazīra, al-Jabal, Hijaz, and even from the ʿAbnāʾ, who had rebelled against the “inquisition”.¹³⁴

While carrying out these measures, al-Mutawakkil turned towards the opposition to deal with the organised underground activities of the ʿAlīds in general and the Imamites in particular. The intellectual activities of the Imamites in Egypt, which had been encouraged by Iṣmāʿīl b. Mūsā al-Kāzīm, had borne fruit and expanded into the sphere of underground political activities, even penetrating into remote parts of North Africa.¹³⁵ The system of communication of their organization (al-Wikāla) was highly developed, particulary in the capital Sāmarrāʾ, Baghdād, Madāʾin, and the districts of the Sawād.¹³⁶ Furthermore al-Yaʿqūbī’s report seems to indicate that the Imamites had hidden the name of their Imam to the extent that the caliph was not sure exactly who he was¹³⁷ or if he had direct links with Shīʿite underground activities.

Al-Mutawakkil instigated a campaign of arrests against the Imamites in 232/846, accompanied by such harsh treatment that some of the agents of the Imam in Baghdād, Madāʾin, Kūfa and the Sawād died under torture, while others were thrown into jail.¹³⁸ By these measures the caliph caused serious damage to the communication network within the Wikāla. In order to fill the vacuum left by the arrested agents, the Imam had to appoint new agents instead, such as Abū ʿAlī b. Rashīd, who was nominated to lead the activities of the Imamites in Baghdād, Madāʾin and the Sawād, and Ayyūb b. Nūh, who was appointed as the agent of Kufa. Al-Hādī also provided them with new instructions concerning their duties during this critical situation.¹¹⁹

Despite all the Imamite efforts to save their organization, the investigation of the governor of Medina, ʿAbd Allah b. Muḥammad, led to the discovery that al-Hādī was in fact behind these activities. He informed al-Mutawakkil, warning him of the danger of al-Hādī’s presence in Medina. So the caliph summoned al-Hādī to Sāmarrā in 233/848, where he kept him under house-arrest.¹⁴₀ Two years later the caliph discovered that Egypt and the areas near the tomb of al-Ḥusayn in the Sawād were the strongest centres of the underground communications of the ʿAlids. Therefore he ordered that the tomb of al-Ḥusayn and the houses nearby be levelled to the ground. Then he ordered that the ground of the tomb be ploughed and cultivated, so that any trace of the tomb would be forgotten. Furthermore he issued an order prohibiting people from visiting the tombs of any of the Imams and warning them that anyone found in their vicinity would be arrested.¹⁴¹

Al-Mutawakkil also waged another campaign of arrests. Among those taken prisoner was Yahyā b. ʿUmar al-ʿAlawi, who was accused of conspiracy and held in the jail of al-Muṭbaq in Baghdad.¹⁴² At the same time al-Mutawakkil ordered the governor of Egypt to deport the Ṭalibiyūn to Iraq, and he did so. Afterwards in 236/850,¹⁴³ al-Mutawakkil banished them to Medina which had been used as a place of exile for the ʿAlids.

Several remarks suggest that al-Mutawakkil went even further in his policy, aiming in the long term to destroy the economic and social status of the ʿAlids, and issued many orders so as to achieve this end. He confiscated the properties of the Ḥusaynids, that is the estate of Fadak, whose revenue at that time, according to Ibn Ṭawīls, was 24,000 dinars, and granted it to his partisan ʿAbd Allah b. ʿUmar al-Bazyār.¹⁴⁴ He also warned the inhabitants of the Hijaz not to have any communication with the ʿAlids or to support them financially. Many people were severely punished because they did so. According to al-Īṣfahānī, as a result of al-Mutawakkil’s measures the ʿAlids faced harsh treatment in Medina, where they were totally isolated from other people and deprived of their necessary livelihood.¹⁴⁵

The caliph also wanted to remove the Shiʿites from the ʿAbbāsid administration and to destroy their good standing in public opinion. Al-Maṣʿūdī gives an example of this policy: he mentions that ʿIṣḥāq b.
Ibrāhīm, the governor of Ṣaymara and Sirāwān in the province of al-Jabal, was discharged from his office because of his Imamite allegiance, and that other people lost their positions for the same reason.146

According to al-Kindī, al-Mutawakkil ordered his governor in Egypt to deal with the ‘Alids according to the following rules:

1) No ‘Alid could be given an estate or be allowed to ride a horse or to move from al-Fustāt to the other towns of the province.

2) No ‘Alid was permitted to possess more than one slave.

3) If there was any conflict between an ‘Alid and a non-‘Alid, the judge must first hear the claim of the non-‘Alid, and then accept it without negotiation with the ‘Alid.147

By these measures, al-Mutawakkil managed to prevent the Shi‘ites from plotting against his regime, but he failed to end their underground activities. Reports indicate that al-Hādı continued his communications with his adherents secretly, receiving the khums and other taxes from his agents in Qumm and its districts.148 According to al-Mas‘ūdi, al-Mutawakkil was informed about this, and he also heard that in al-Hādı’s house there were arms and letters from his supporters indicating a conspiracy against him. Therefore the house was searched by the caliph’s soldiers, but they did not find any proof, and so al-Hādı was set free.149

The suppression of the Imamites decreased after the assassination of al-Mutawakkil, who was succeeded by his son al-Muntasir in 247/861. He was more tolerant toward them than his father. He issued an order to stop the campaign of arrests and the oppression of the ‘Alids and their adherents, and permitted them to visit the tombs of al-Ḥusayn and the other Imams. He also gave the properties of Fadak back to them.150 But this new attitude on the part of the caliph ceased with the succession of al-Musta’in in 248/862. According to al-Kindī, the Imamites in Egypt were persecuted by its governor, Yazīd b. ‘Abd Allah al-Turkī, who arrested an ‘Alid leader called Ibn Abī Hudra along with his followers. They were accused of carrying out underground activities and deported to Iraq in 248/862.151 Al-Kulaynī also states that the campaign of arrests and pursuits affected the followers of al-Hādı in Egypt. For example, Muḥammad b. Ḥajar was slain and the estate of Sayf b. al-Layth was seized by the ruler.152
Meanwhile in Iraq some of the followers of al-Hādī in Sāmarrā were arrested, and his main agent in Kufa, Ayyūb b. Nūh, was pursued by the qāḍī of the city.

It appears, however, that the Abbāsid oppression did not deter the Shi'a ambition to reach power. Many historians like al-Isfahānī report that 'Alid revolts broke out in 250-1/864-5 in the areas of Kufa, Ṭabaristān, Rayy, Qazwīn, Egypt and Hijaz. These might have been directed by one group, or to be more accurate, by one leader. It is beyond the scope of this work to deal with the details of these revolts, but it is worth mentioning that the rebels employed the Prophetic traditions concerning al-Qā'im al-Mahdī and the signs of his rising to achieve immediate political success. According to Ibn 'Uqda, the leader of this uprising, Yahyā b. 'Umar al-'Alawi, was expected to be al-Qā'im al-Mahdī because all the signs and events predicted by the sixth Imam, al-Sādīq, regarding the rise of al-Qā'im al-Mahdī occurred during the course of that revolution:

قال أبو عبد الله: قد بدأ خرج رجل من آل شخّص
وكان بدأ يمسك الزاوية البيضاء. قال علي بن
الكسيس: فاجتمع أهل بي رواس، وكانوا
قد علدو عمامة بيداءع علي قناعة فامسحها
مهد بن معروف وقت خروج كميل بن عمر.
وقال أبو عبد الله في هذا الغزيرة: وكيف فتركم
فجهف الفرات. وقال أيضًا: كونكم قوم
صنعاء إخوين في خرجونكم من دوركم. وقال
علي بن الحسن، جاءنا كانجوس والتراب ناخردوا
الناس من دورهم. وقال أبو عبد الله أيضًا:
وقيعت السبايع إلى دوركم.

قال علي: فجأت السبايع إلى دورنا. وقال
ابن الحسن: فرآنا ذلك خلقه. وقال
علي بن الحسن: فرآنا ذلك خلقه. وقال
Abu 'Abd Allah: إخْرِجُ رجلٍ أَشْقَرُ ذَوْ سَبَالٍ يَنْصِبُ
لَهُ كَرِيْسَيْ عَلَى بابِ دارِ عمروِ بنِ كُرْيَثٍ،
يَدْعُو النَّاسَ مَيْنَ الْبَرَاءَةِ مَنْ عَلَيْهِ بَيْنِ أَبِي طَالِبٍ
عَلَى السَّلَّامِ وَيَقْتِلُ خَلْقًا مَنْ خَلَقَهُ وَيُقْتِلُ
فِي يوْمَهُ فِرَايْنَا ذَلِكَ كَلِّهُ

This document indicates that the Imamites were expecting the establishment of their state by al-Qā'im al-Mahdī in the near future. Despite the uprising's Zaydite facade, many pure Imamites participated. According to Ibn 'Uqda, the holder of the rebel standard in Mecca was Muḥammad b. Maʿrūf al-Hilālī (d. 250/864), who was among the eminent Imamites of the Hijaz. Furthermore, the leader of the rebels in Kufa, Yahyā b. ʿUmar, who was assassinated in 250/864, attracted the sympathy and praise of al-Hādī's agent, Abū Ḥāshim al-Jaʿfari. In addition al-Masʿūdī reports that a certain ʿAlī b. Mūsā b. Ismāʿil b. Mūsā al-Kāẓim took part in the revolt in Rayy and was arrested by the caliph al-Muʿtazz. Since this man was the grandson of the Ismāʿil b. Mūsā al-Kāẓim who had preached the Imamite doctrine in Egypt, it seems extremely probable that the revolt was essentially Imamite. Moreover, al-Ṭabarānī gives information concerning the underground activities of the Imamites and their role in this rebellion, which the authorities considered purely Zaydite rather than Imamite. He also reports that ʿAbbasid spies discovered correspondence between the leader of the rebels in Tabaristān, al-Ḥasan b. Zayd, and the nephew of Muhammad b. ʿAlī b. Khalf al-ʿAttār. Both of these men were adherents of the tenth Imam, al-Hādī. This led the authorities to the conclusion that the Imamites had direct links with the rebels. So they arrested the leading Imamite personalities in Baghdad and deported them to Sāmarrā. Among them were Muḥammad b. ʿAlī al-ʿAttār, Abū Ḥāshim al-Jaʿfari, and the two sons of al-Hādī, Jaʿfar and al-Ḥasan al-ʿAskari, later to be the eleventh Imam. One can link these ʿAbbasid precautions to the sudden death of al-Hādī in Sāmarrā in 254/868, because the authorities believed him to be behind all these disturbances, and felt that his death would bring them to an end.
The cautious attitude of the authorities towards the Imamites continued during the short Imamate of the eleventh Imam, al-Ḥasan al-ʿAskari (254-60/868-74). He was put under house-arrest and his movements were restricted, since he was obliged to present himself at the palace of the caliph in Sāmarrā every Monday and Thursday. Despite these restrictions, al-ʿAskari managed to communicate with his agents by secret means. It appears that the continuation of the rebellion of the ʿAlids, who extended their penetration into new areas, was behind the restriction of the Imam’s movements. According to al-Ṭusi, the caliph al-Muhtadī arrested some Imamites in 255/869, accusing them of the assassination of ʿAbd Allah b. Muhammad al-ʿAbbāsī, who had been murdered by the rebels in Kufa. Al-ʿAskari was also arrested, but was set free soon after the death of the caliph, al-Muhtadī. Despite the fact that the eleventh Imam managed to carry out his activities without the knowledge of the authorities until his death in 260/874, the policy of house-arrest, which had been imposed upon the Imams by the caliph al-Maʿmūn and had been continued until the time of al-ʿAskari, seems to have led him to search for a method by which he could prevent ʿAbbāsid surveillance being imposed on his son, the twelfth Imam, so that he could disguise his identity and carry on his activities in secret.

6. Conclusion

From the death of al-Husayn onward, the Imams of the Shīʿa followed a more or less passive policy towards the ruling caliphs, but this did not indicate their acceptance of the rights of the Umayyads and then the ʿAbbāsids to the caliphate. Rather they believed that, since these families had come to power through natural means, their downfall would also be according to the will of Allah, that He would indicate their imminent downfall to them and assist them in carrying out His will when the appropriate time had arrived. Towards this end they were always prepared to rise and take their rightful position, because any Imam could be ordained by Allah as al-Qāʾim al-Mahdi. This can be noted in the statement of Imam ʿAlī b. Abī Ṭalib.

wal huln billa had ashes mina hil al-ebst “Allah will choose the Mahdī, whom He wants, from among us, the People of the House.”

Thus al-Ṣādiq, who was strong and capable of leading an uprising might have risen against the caliph if his followers had adhered to his instructions, but schisms appeared amongst their ranks and the Imam’s aspirations came to naught. A considerable body among al-Ṣādiq’s followers were not satisfied with his political methods, and cut themselves off from him in order to struggle for power without his interference. This was manifested in the emergence of the Zaydites and the Ismā‘īlīs, who put forward a new interpretation of the traditions (Ahādīth) concerning al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī and his rising and used it in their struggle for power. This can be seen in the Zaydite and Ismā‘īlī revolts between the years 145-296/762-908, which ended with the establishment of an Ismā‘īlī state and the installation of an Imam with the title al-Mahdī.

The Imams, however, denied the claim of any ‘Alid who claimed that he was al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī promised by the Prophet, but they sympathised with some ‘Alid rebels who were loyal to them. This might encourage us to assume that the Imams had two methods designed to help them reach power. The first was the scholarly, cultural and religious activities which they fostered amongst the people without openly involving themselves in any political activities. Secondly, they secretly supported some Shi‘ite rebels who were loyal to them, hoping that they would hand the power over to them after their success.

The military activities of the various Shi‘ite groups confused the ‘Abbāsid and led them to believe that the Imamite Imams were behind them or at least that the result of their intellectual activities would be militant action. Therefore the ‘Abbāsid authorities forced the Imams to reside in the capital from the year 202/817 under house-arrest. This policy was imposed upon the Imams al-Riḍā, al-Jawād, al-Hādī, and al-‘Askari, and led them to develop the underground system of their organisation (al-Wikāla) so that it could function under these difficult conditions. At the same time this critical situation forced the eleventh Imam, al-‘Askari, to search for a method by which he could prevent ‘Abbāsid surveillance being imposed upon his son, later to be the twelfth Imam, so as to enable him to disguise his identity and carry on his activities beyond the careful watch of the authorities.
CHAPTER III
THE IMAMITES' VIEWS CONCERNING THE CONCEALED IMAM AND HIS BIRTH

1. The Schisms Amongst the Adherents of al-Hasan al-`Askari after His Death.

1.1 Introduction.

The Imamite during the life of the last six Imams of the Twelver Imamites (al-Imamiyya al-Ithna ashariyya) was distinguished by the many splits which occurred after the death of each Imam, who was considered by the Imamites as one of the twelve Imams, over the recognition of his successor. In spite of these repeated schisms, after a hard struggle each Imam was able to maintain the obedience of the majority of the followers of the previous Imam.\(^1\)

Al-Hasan b. 'Alī al-`Askari was born in 232/845 and died in 260/874. According to some later Shi'ite sources, he was poisoned through the instigation of the `Abbāsid caliph, al-Mu'tamid.\(^2\)

During the six years of his Imamate, al-`Askari lived in hiding and prudent fear because of the restrictions imposed upon him by his being surrounded by the spies of al-Mu'tamid. This was the reason for his lack of open contact with the mass of his followers. Only the elite of his adherents were able to communicate with him personally.\(^3\)

The same sources report that in the year 260/874 the eleventh Imam became ill. As soon as news of his sickness reached al-Mu'tamid, he dispatched five of his special servants to al-`Askari's house, ordering them to keep close watch on him. Thereafter the caliph sent physicians and the Qādi al-Qudār in the company of ten men whom he considered trustworthy, to al-`Askari's house to remain with him and observe his condition and the situation within his home at all times. Al-ʿAskari’s malady became worse and he passed away on 8th Rabī’ I 260/1st January 874.

Al-Muʿtamid dispatched Abū ʿĪsā b. al-Mutawakkil to say the prayer for the dead over the body of al-ʿAskari. After this rite was completed al-ʿAskari was buried within the confines of his house in Sirr Man Raʾā (Sāmarrā), next to his father.⁴

According to the early Imamite sources al-ʿAskari did not leave a publicly acknowledged son, nor did he determine upon or install his successor openly.⁵ As al-Mufid says, the Imamites were suffering oppression at the hand of the ʿAbbāsids, while the caliph, al-Muʿtamid, was searching for al-ʿAskari’s son and trying to arrest him by any means possible. Moreover, the views of the Imamite Shīʿa about him were being circulated, and it was becoming known that they were waiting for him to rise. For this reason al-ʿAskari had not revealed his son during his lifetime, not even to the greater portion of his own adherents.⁶

Because the Imamites were distinguished from other Islamic denominatons by the principle of the designation of the Imam by his predecessor they seem to have found themselves in a critical situation after their Imam’s death, since he had not designated his successor openly. Therefore the Imamite jurists had recourse to the traditions of the Prophet and his progeny to determine who was to be the twelfth Imam. They found many traditions to support their various claims. Amongst them were transmissions which stated that an Imam could not die without seeing his offspring who would succeed him; that the world cannot be without a Proof;⁷ that the Imamate cannot pass to two brothers after al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn, and that it will be occupied by one of the progeny of ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn;⁸ that the Imam knows who will succeed him and does not die until he gives his testament to his successor;⁹ and that the Imamate should belong to the eldest son of the preceding Imam.¹⁰ These traditions seem to have been adopted by the greater portion of the Imamites, and their interpretation of these traditions led to various viewpoints, which in turn led to new divisions amongst the Imamites.

Saʿd al-Qummi counted fifteen schisms, whereas al-Nawbakhṭī and al-Mufid enumerated them as fourteen. Al-Masʿūdī thinks that there were twenty sects, while al-Shahrastānī counts only eleven.¹¹ Nevertheless a study of the claims of these factions reveals that there were apparently only five major schisms. However, each of these became further split over the theological and traditional arguments employed to support their claims. At any rate it seems important to set down the major claims of these schisms in order to achieve a clear conception of the Imamites at that time.

1.2 Schism I: the Wāqifa at al-‘Askari

What brought the people of this faction together was their claim that the eleventh Imam, al-‘Askari, was al-Qā‘im al-Mahdí although they differed as to how he became al-Qā‘im.

i) The first faction of this schism deemed that al-‘Askari had not died, but had gone into occultation. They based their assumption on the traditions reported from the previous Imams, which said that an Imam could not die without having a publicly acknowledged son to succeed him, because the world cannot be without a Proof. While the people were not obliged to accept the Imamate of those who were now laying claim to it, they should acknowledge the Imamate of al-‘Askari whose Imamate had been confirmed by the testament of the former Imam. They also maintained that they had a tradition which said that al-Qā‘im had two occultations. Therefore, since al-‘Askari had not left a publicly acknowledged son and since the earth cannot remain for an hour without a Proof, it was right to claim that he had not died but was hidden, and that he was truly al-Qā‘im. This was his first occultation, after which he would rise again. Then, when his rising became known, he would conceal himself once more in his second occultation.

In their discussions with their opponents, they tried to distinguish themselves from the Imamites who had stopped at the seventh Imam, Mūsā al-Kāẓim (183/799), claiming he was al-Qā‘im al-Mahdí, by faulting them for stopping at al-Kāẓim. They pointed out that he had died and left his successor, ‘Alī al-Ridā (202/817) as well as other sons, while al-‘Askari had obviously passed away and left no heir.

ii) The second faction of the Wāqifa at al-‘Askari believed that he had died, but was then raised to life, and was al-Qā‘im al-Mahdí. Basically, the members of this faction established their doctrine on a transmission from Imam Ja‘far al-Ṣādiq, who said that al-Qā‘im was called al-Qā‘im because he would “rise” again after his death. They stated that it was certain that al-‘Askari had died without leaving a successor and without designating anyone as his legatee. Thus there was no doubt about his being al-Qā‘im, nor about his being alive after death, although he concealed himself for fear of his foes. They supported their theories with a saying of Imam ʿAlī b. Abī Tālib, contained in his advice to his follower Kumayl b. Ziyad, “O Allah, indeed You do not leave the earth without a Qāʿīm with proof from You, whether manifest or hidden, for then Your proofs and Your signs would be invalidated.” On the basis of ʿAlī’s words they concluded that al-ʿAskarī was absent and hidden, but that he would rise to fill the earth with peace and justice after it had been filled with tyranny.

iii) Al-Wāqīfa al-lā Adriyya also stopped at al-ʿAskarī. They deemed that he had died and had been the Imam. Although the earth could not be without a Proof from Allah, they were not sure who had succeeded al-ʿAskarī, his son or his brother. Therefore they stopped at the Imamate of al-ʿAskarī, and decided to make no decision until the matter became clear to them.

Unfortunately, the contemporary sources do not mention anyone as representing the three factions of al-Wāqīfa at al-ʿAskarī. However, from the doctrine of the first faction of the Wāqīfa, it seems that its partisans lived in places which were far from Sāmarrā, the city of the Imam. Since they were not present at the moment of his death, they tended to believe that he had not in fact died, but was al-Qāʿīm al-Mahdi.

1.3 Schism II: The Jaʿfarites

The representatives of this schism claimed that the Imam after al-ʿAskarī was his youngest brother, Jaʿfar, but they differed as to how the Imamate had passed on to him, and therefore split into four factions.

i) The first faction believed that al-ʿAskarī had died and that he had held the Imamate by the testament of his father. Since the Imamate can only pass to the eldest living son of the former Imam, the Imamate passed from ʿAlī al-Hādi not to his eldest son Muhammad, who had died before him, but to al-ʿAskarī, who was the elder of the two sons who had outlived their father.

This faction believed that al-ʿAskarī had not left a publicly acknowledged son to take over the Imamate and, therefore, his sole remaining brother, Jaʿfar, was the Imam. In order to support their dogma they were obliged to repeat the Fatḥiyya’s arguments about the Imamate. The latter claimed that Mūsā al-Kāẓim received the Imamate, not from his father Ja'far al-Ṣādiq, but from his eldest brother ʿAbd Allah, according to the tradition which says that the Imamate passes on to the eldest son of the Imam when he dies. Like the Fathiyya, this faction of the Ja'farites accepted the authenticity of the tradition which says that the Imamate will not fall to two brothers after al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn. But they maintained that this could only be applied if al-ʿAskari had left a son. Since al-ʿAskari had passed away without leaving a publicly acknowledged successor, his brother Ja'far was the designated Imam and the Imamate would pass on in his offspring. They also recognised ʿAbd Allah b. Ja'far al-Ṣādiq as the seventh Imam. Consequently Ja'far was thirteenth in the chain of Imams.

ii) The second faction of the Ja'farites contended that the eleventh Imam had himself designated Ja'far as his successor according to the principle of al-Badā'. The same thing had happened in the case of Ismāʿīl, the eldest son of Imam Ja'far al-Ṣādiq. God had clarified His ultimate decision concerning him by taking away his soul and placing his brothers ʿAbd Allah and Mūsā consecutively in the Imamate instead. Similarly, in the case of Ja'far b. ʿAlī, God had entrusted al-ʿAskari with the Imamate, but thereafter He had made it clear that the Imamate should not pass on in the progeny of al-ʿAskari. Therefore He transferred it to his brother Ja'far, who was the Imam after al-ʿAskari's death. Like the previous factions, this faction used the argument and dogma of the Fathiyya to support their viewpoint.

This sect was probably more popular than the first among the theologians, especially in Kufa. Its leader was a Kufi theologian called ʿAlī b. Tahī or al-Ṭalḥī al-Khazzāz, who had been famous amongst the surviving members of the Fathiyya for his skill in theological discussions. He upheld Ja'far's Imamate and encouraged people to take his side. He was supported in his propaganda by the sister of Fāris b. Ḥātim b. Māhawiyya al-Qazwīnī, although she rejected the Imamate of al-ʿAskari and claimed that the Imamate had been transferred to Ja'far from his father, ʿAlī al-Ḥādī. She may have had this claim because her brother, Fāris b. Ḥātim, was killed on the order of al-ʿAskari. It is also possible that the Kufan scholastic family Banū Faḍḍāl, who were active supporters of the Fathiyya, adopted the doctrine of this faction, especially Aḥmad b. al-Ḥasan b. ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. Faḍḍāl, who died in 260/874, and his brother ʿAlī.
iii) The members of this faction claimed that the Imamate had passed on to Ja‘far through the designation of his father. They based their doctrine on a tradition attributed to Ja‘far al-Ṣādiq, which states that the Imamate cannot be held by two brothers after al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn. Since Muhammad, the eldest son of ‘Alī al-Hādî, died during the lifetime of his father, and since the Imamate should belong to those who survive the death of their father, it had not been transferred to Muḥammad. They may have accepted the Imamate of al-‘Askari because he was the eldest son after the death of his father, but they rejected his Imamate after his death, because he had passed away without leaving a publicly acknowledged son as his successor. It was a matter of course to them, they said, that the Imam could not die without leaving a publicly acknowledged and well-known successor, designated by him and entrusted with the Imamate. Therefore the claim of al-‘Askari to the Imamate must be invalid. So it was inevitable that the Imam was Ja‘far, by the designation of his father.

It is worth mentioning that this faction existed within the lifetime of al-‘Askari. When the tenth Imam died in 254/868 the majority of his followers accepted the Imamate of his eldest surviving son, al-‘Askari, as confirmed by the testament of his father, but a minority took Ja‘far’s side. He became more powerful after al-‘Askari’s death, since some of al-‘Askari’s adherents abandoned his Imamate and accepted that of Ja‘far. A leading scholar of this faction was ‘Alī b. Ahmad b. Bashshār, who wrote a book on the Ghayba and disputed fiercely with his opponents. There is some evidence that this faction achieved a certain degree of success by persuading a few of the people who had accepted al-‘Askari’s Imamate to join their side. Al-Ṣadūq and al-Majlisī report a letter attributed to the twelfth Imam, and sent to his agent, ‘Uthmān b. Sa‘īd al-‘Umari. This letter reveals that an adherent of this faction argued with a Twelver called al-Mukhtār, and succeeded in making him accept the Imamate of Ja‘far. The sister of Fāris b. Ḥātim, who was mentioned above, was one of the partisans of this group.

iv) The followers of this faction were called al-Nafisiyya. They believed that the tenth Imam had designated his eldest son Muhammad as his legatee. Then, according to the principle of Badā’, Allah took away his life while his father was still alive. But when Muhammad b. ‘Alī passed away, by the order of his father, he designated his brother Ja‘far as his successor. He entrusted his testament, the books, the secret knowledge and the weapons needed by the community to his trustworthy young slave called Na'īs. And he ordered him to hand them over to his brother Ja'far when his father died. However, when Muḥammad died, the adherents of al-'Askarī discovered the secret arrangement and the role of Na'īs. Since Na'īs was afraid of them and feared that the Imamate might be cut short, he called Ja'far and handed over the trust of Muḥammad b. ʿAlī al-Hādī. Ja'far himself claimed that the Imamate had been passed to him from his brother, Muḥammad.30 The members of this faction denied the testament of al-Ḥasān al-'Askarī, because his father, they claimed, had neither designated him nor changed his testament from Muḥammad. Na'īs was killed by being drowned in a well.31

1.4 Schism III: The Muḥammadiyya

This sect denied the Imamate of Ja'far and al-'Askarī and considered Muḥammad, who had died in the lifetime of his father, as their Imam. They argued that ʿAlī al-Hādī, the tenth Imam, had neither designated nor indicated either al-'Askarī or Ja'far as his legatee. Therefore neither of them had any right to make claims upon the Imamate. Since the Imam could not die without leaving a successor, and since al-'Askarī had passed away and not left a publicly acknowledged or well-known son, his Imamate was invalidated. Ja'far, they added, was not worthy of putting forward a claim because his immorality and sinfulness were infamous. His wicked character could not be prudent fear (Taqiyya) in the face of his enemies, for Taqiyya cannot be practiced by committing sins.

They concluded that since it was forbidden for the Imamate to be nullified, they were obliged to return to the Imamate of Muḥammad b. ʿAlī, since he had left offspring and his acts were distinguished by probity and virtue.32 Others of them even considered him as al-Qā'im al-Mahdī33 and some of them went as far as to deny his death.34

1.5 Schism IV: The Qaṭṭiyya

This faction constituted the greater portion of the Imamites. They believed that al-'Askarī had died and left a son to succeed him, but they differed about the day of his birth, his name, and whether or not he was al-Qā'im al-Mahdī. For this reason they split into six groups:
CHAPTER III

i) The first group maintained that al-‘Askari had died and left a son called Muḥammad. According to Sa’d al-Qummi, they held that his son had come of age, while, according to al-Nawbakhti and al-Shahristani, they believed that he had been born two years before his father’s death. He was the Imam because his father had designated him so, and because it was well-known that al-‘Askari had left no other son. So inevitably he was the Imam and al-Qā’im. But due to fear of his uncle, Ja’far, he went into concealment and this became one of his occultations. This group built their doctrine on a tradition attributed to Ja’far al-Ṣādiq, which says that al-Qā’im’s date of birth is hidden from the people, information concerning him is obscure, and the people cannot know him. Unfortunately little is known about this faction, but al-Ṣadūq, while trying to prove the birth of the twelfth Imam, mentions traditions which are presumably attributed to this faction’s adherents. One of these was called Ya’qūb b. Manfūsh, who claimed that he had visited al-‘Askari and asked him about his successor. Al-‘Askari showed him his son, who was between eight and ten years old, indicating that his son would succeed him. Another was called Ḍaw’ b. ʿAlī al-‘Iltī, who maintained that he had met al-‘Askari in his house where he saw his son, who was then two years old.

ii) The members of this group held the same dogma as the previous faction. They agreed with them on the death of al-‘Askari, but they thought that he had left a successor whose name was not Muhammad but ʿAlī. They said that al-‘Askari had no son except ʿAlī, who had been seen by his father’s trustworthy followers. According to Sa’d al-Qummi this sect had few adherents and they were concentrated within the suburbs of the Sawād of Kufa.

iii) This sect held that the Imam after al-‘Askari was his son, who had been born eight months after his father’s death and had then gone into concealment. They argued that those who claimed that a son was born to him during his lifetime were making false statements, because al-‘Askari had died without leaving a publicly acknowledged son. But the pregnancy had been known to the caliph as well as other people, and for this reason the caliph delayed dividing his share in the estate until the pregnancy was proved invalid. In fact, they said, the son was born eight months after the death of his father and was hidden, and his father had ordered that he be called Muḥammad. They based their doctrine on a tradition attributed to the eighth mam, ʿAlī b. Mūsā al-Ḥādī, which says, “You would test the foetus which is within the womb of his mother, and the suckling child."

iv) The partisans of this faction held that al-'Askari had no sons at all. The arguments about a hidden son, who was born during the lifetime of al-'Askari, were rejected by them, because they had searched for him during the life of the eleventh Imam using various means, but had failed to find him. But since the Imam cannot die without leaving an heir, they claimed that a slave girl had conceived a child belonging to al-'Askari, and that when she gave birth to him he would be the Imam, even if, as they are reported to have said by al-Mufid, the pregnancy should last a hundred years. They established their doctrine on a tradition of al-Sadiq, which states that al-Qa'im is he whose conception and date of birth are hidden from the people.

v) This faction held that the Imam after al-'Askari was his son Muhammad, who was the Awaited One (al-Muntazar). They claimed that he had died but would rise to life with the sword to fill the earth with peace and justice after it had been filled with tyranny and injustice.

This group is mentioned neither by Sa'd al-Qummi nor by al-Nawbakhti. Presumably the latter dealt with it but this discussion was later dropped from his work, since al-Mufid who based his information on al-Nawbakhti's work, mentions this group in al-'Uyûn wa-l-Maḥāsîn.

vi) This group, entitled the Imamiyya by Sa'd al-Qummi and al-Nawbakhti, held that al-'Askari had died and that inevitably Allah's Hujja on earth was his son. He was his sole successor and legatee, charged with the affairs of the Imamate after him in accordance with the method laid down by previous tradition. Thus the Imamate should pass on to his offspring until the Day of Resurrection, but he was absent and hidden by an order. It was prohibited to seek him out before he chose to manifest himself, because his adherents would endanger his life and thier own if they looked for him. In spite of his occultation a few reliable followers could contact him. He was born on 15th Shaw'ban 256/29th July 868.

Basically this group directed their arguments against those factions which supported the Imamate of Muhammad and Ja'far. With the partisans of Muhammad they argued that the Imamate could be held neither by the descendants of Muhammad, who had died during his father's lifetime, nor by his legatee, such as his brother or someone else, because there was no evidence or proof for accepting the Imamate of a son who had died before his father. Perhaps this argument was also directed against the Nafsīyya.

Presumably with the Ja'farites they argued that the Imamate could not pass from brother to brother after al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn, and that the Imamate should fall to the eldest son of the preceding Imam. The eleventh Imam al-ʿAskari, was designated by the testament of his father, so the Imamate had to pass to his offspring.⁴⁴ They also said that it was improper for the faithful to select an Imam for themselves. Allah had to choose him and to manifest him at the proper time.⁴⁵

This faction constituted the majority of the Imamites who had accepted the Imamate of al-ʿAskari, such as Abū Sahl Ismāʿīl b. ʿAlī al-Nawbakhtī, al-Ḥasan b. Mūsā al-Nawbakhtī, Saʿd b. ʿAbd Allah al-Ashʿarī al-Qummī (the author of Kitāb al-Maqālāt wa-l-Fīraq), ʿUthmān b. Saʿid al-ʿUmarī and his son Muḥammad.⁴⁶

1.6 Schism V: The Cessation of the Imamate

This group held that from the moment al-ʿAskari died there was no longer an Imam. Al-Nawbakhtī, al-Mufīd and al-Shahrīstānī considered this group as one faction, whereas Saʿd al-Qummī was presumably more accurate when he divided it into two,⁴⁷ since the partisans of this schism agreed on the death of al-ʿAskari and the cessation of the Imamate, while they differed on the dogma of al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī as follows:

i) The first group deemed that it had been confirmed by successive transmission that al-ʿAskari would die without leaving a successor. For this reason there was no Imam after al-ʿAskari and the Imamate ceased. This, they contended, was reasonable and permitted. Since the cessation of the prophecy after Muḥammad was possible, the cessation of the Imamate was also possible. They established their doctrine on a transmission attributed to the sixth Imam, Jaʿfar al-Ṣādiq, which states that the earth cannot be without a Proof unless Allah becomes angry at the sins of His creatures and retains him from them for as long as He wills. This group did not believe in the rising of al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī.⁴⁸

ii) The people of the second group held the same doctrine as the previous faction, but they separated from them over the dogma of al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī. They said that since al-ʿAskari had passed away without leaving a successor, the Imamate had ceased until Allah raised the Qāʾīm from among the Imams who had died, such as al-
Hasan al-‘Askarî, or from among any of his descendants. Furthermore the rising of al-Qā‘im al-Mahdî was inevitable because this was confirmed by successive tradition. They considered the period after the death of al-‘Askarî and the rise of al-Qā‘im as an interval of time devoid of prophecy and Imamate, like the period between Jesus and Muḥammad. 49

There is some evidence that many people from various countries doubted the existence of the twelfth Imam, such as Muḥammad b. ‘Alî b. Mahzayar al-Ahwâzî from al-Ahwâz, 50 and many of the persons from Banû Ṭâlib in Medina who had been agents of the eleventh Imam. 51

1.7 Conclusion

This historical and theological survey suggests that on the death of al-‘Askarî, the Imamites fell into problems similar to those which had beset them after the death of the seventh Imam, Mūsâ al-Kāzîm. They split into al-Wâqifa, Muḥammadiyya, Ja‘fariyya and Qat‘iyya. Possibly the causes of this split were as follows:

i) Although the bulk of the Imamites accepted the Imamate of al-‘Askarî, they retained their cultural and sectarian backgrounds. For example, al-‘Askarî himself had allowed his adherents to accept the traditions related by the Banû Faḍḍal, who belong to the Wâqifa Mūsâ al-Kâzîm, but had urged them to reject their doctrine. The influence exerted by these cultural ties can be noted in the traditional arguments held by the Imamites after the death of al-‘Askarî, arguments which led to the rise of the Wâqifa at al-‘Askarî and the encouragement of the Ja‘farites.

ii) Despite its developed system the Imamite organization (al-Wikāla) did not widely disseminate the testament of Imam al-‘Askarî concerning his successor amongst the populace and the lower missionaries. The organization may have acted in this way because of the tense political situation. Thus no successor was openly indicated by al-‘Askarî, nor was any well-known to the general mass of the Imamites. For this reason the Imamites who knew nothing about al-‘Askarî’s testament had recourse to the traditions adopted by the majority of the Imamites to determine who was to be the twelfth Imam. The interpretation of these traditions led to various different points of view which, in turn, led to new sub-divisions amongst the Qat‘iyya and the Muḥammadiyya.
iii) The third cause contributing to these divisions was the personal ambition of al-‘Askari’s brother, Ja’far, who claimed the Imamate during the lifetime of al-‘Askari. Ja’far became more powerful after the death of his brother, because he was encouraged by the Faṭḥiyya, in order to vindicate their doctrine, and especially by Banū Faḍdal in Kufa. However Ja’far’s success did not continue, because his followers differed as to how he gained the Imamate, and because their arguments in the field of traditions were weaker than those of the Qaṭʻiyya.

Thus, as al-Mufid and al-Ṭūsī state, all these divisions and splits gradually vanished, except for the Qaṭʻiyya, who became the Twelvers in the fourth/tenth century. 52

2. The question of the birth of the twelfth Imam

The possibility that the twelfth Imam was born and his birth was kept hidden is supported by a number of narrations. The fact that there were already narrations about the twelfth Imam as al-Qā’im al-Mahdi gave rise to other narrations which can only be described as hagiographical. But from the time of al-Ṣadūq onwards, even these were accepted by the Imamites as historical facts. Nevertheless, other early narrations present his birth as a purely historical fact without the embellishment of miraculous reports.

2.1 The Origin of the Mother of the twelfth Imam

The earliest Imamite scholar to give an account of the twelfth Imam’s mother is al-Mas’ūdi. He reports that she was a slave-girl called Narjis. 53 Al-Shahīd (d. 786/1384) states that her name was Maryam b. Zayd al-‘Alawiyya, 54 and other reports give her name as Rayḥāna, Saqīl and Sawsan. 55 It is possible that her name was in fact Narjis and the other names, except Saqīl, were given to her by her owner Ḥakima bint Muḥammad al-Jawād. People at that time used to call their slave-girls by different names as a form of flattery, and Narjis, Rayḥāna and Sawsan are all names of flowers.

The earliest report concerning the nationality of the twelfth Imam’s mother goes back to the year 286/899. This was written down for the first time by al-Ṣadūq, on the authority of Muḥammad b. Baḥr al-Shaybānī, who attributed his narration to Bishr b. Sulaymān al-
Nakhkhās. According to this report she was a Christian from Byzantium who had been captured by Islamic troops. She was sold as a slave and bought by al-Nakhkhās in the slave-market in Baghdad. Al-Nakhkhās sent her to the tenth Imam, ʿAlī al-Hādī, in Sāmarrā. After this, however, the narration begins to lose much of its credibility and becomes hagiographical. It is related that she was Malīka b. Yashshūʿ, the granddaughter of the Emperor of Byzantium, whose mother was a descendant of Simon (Shamʿūn) the disciple of Jesus. When Malīka was in her grandfather’s palace, she dreamt that she saw Jesus’s mother, Mary, and Muḥammad’s daughter, Fāṭima. In this dream Fāṭima converts her to Islam and persuades her to allow herself to be captured by Islamic troops.56

The authenticity of this narration is questionable in many aspects, the most doubtful points being found in the last part.

Firstly there was no major battle between the ʿAbbāsids and the Byzantines after 242/85657 and there is no indication in the sources that the Emperor of Byzantium appealed to the ʿAbbāsids to liberate his granddaughter.

Secondly, the early Imamite authors, particularly al-Qumṭī, al-Nawbakhtī, al-Kulaynī and al-Masʿūdī, who were contemporaries of al-Shaybānī, the narrator of this report, do not refer to it in their works. In addition, al-Kashshi, who was a companion of al-Shaybānī, and the later scholars al-Najāshī and Ibn Dāwūd claim that he was an extremist.58

Thirdly, al-Kulaynī states that al-Qāʾim’s mother was a slave-girl from al-Nawbah, the northern province of Sudān.59 Moreover al-Nuʿmānī and al-Sadūq related other narrations which indicate that al-Qāʾim’s mother was to be a black slave-girl.60 It may be that the later Imamites ignored these transmissions and considered the narration of al-Shaybānī as authentic because the latter makes al-Qāʾim’s mother of noble ancestry and high social status. They would have been particularly attracted by the connection the report establishes between the twelfth Imam, al-Qāʾim, and Jesus, since prophetic traditions state that the two of them will rise together to rid the world of tyranny.61

In the light of these three points the narration of Muḥammad b. Bahr al-Shaybānī can be rejected despite the fact that al-Ṭūsī and Ibn Rustam al-Ṭabarī consider it reliable.62 Possibly the correct account of the origin of al-Qāʾim’s mother is given by al-Mufīd, who states that she was a slave-girl brought up in the house of Hakima, the sister of the tenth Imam. According to his report the Imam saw her one day and predicted that she would give birth to someone with special Divine blessing.\textsuperscript{63} According to al-Ṣadūq she died before the death of her husband, al-Ḥasan al-‘Askari, in 260/874.\textsuperscript{64} But al-Najāshi’s report indicates that she was alive after this year hiding at the house of Muḥammad b. ʕAlī b. Hamza, one of the close associates of her husband al-ʻAskari.\textsuperscript{65}

2.2 The birth of the Twelfth Imam

Since the eleventh Imam died without leaving an obvious son, most of his followers, who held that he had in fact left a successor, based their belief on traditions attributed to the preceding Imams concerning al-Qā‘im al-Mahdī and his occultation.\textsuperscript{66} The following statements, some of which we have already had occasion to relate, are examples of these traditions: The world cannot be void of a Proof, either manifest and well-known, or hidden because of fear.\textsuperscript{67} The Imamate cannot be vested to two brothers after al-Ḥasan and al-Husayn.\textsuperscript{68} According to al-Ṣādiq, the “Master of the Command” (Ṣāhib al-Amr) will have two occultations. One of them will be so prolonged that some will say that he has died and others will say that he has been killed, and finally only a few of his followers will remain faithful to his Imamate. No one will become cognizant of his whereabouts and his affairs except his intimate partisans, who will look after his affairs.\textsuperscript{69} It is worth mentioning that this last tradition had also been recorded before the death of al-ʻAskari in 260/874 by the Sevener Imamites, the Wāqīfa who had applied these traditions to the seventh Imam Mūsā al-Kāzim.\textsuperscript{70}

Abū Sahl al-Nawbakhtī reports that al-ʻAskari had intimate partisans who used to narrate traditions concerning Islamic law on his authority and were his deputies. When al-ʻAskari died in 260/874 all of them agreed that he had left a son who was the Imam. Al-Nawbakhtī adds that they forbade their adherents to ask about his name or to reveal his existence to his foes, who were at that time trying to arrest him.\textsuperscript{71} The ʻAbbāsids’ political pressure, which forced al-ʻAskari to hide the birth of his son from the ordinary Imamites, may also have led the twelfth Imam to transmit different reports concerning the date of his birth, some of which took on a hagiographical form.
Most of the Imamite sources agree that al-'Askari’s son was born on Friday, the 15th of Sha’bān, but they differ about the year of his birth. Al-Qummi gives an account of a group of Imamites who held that al-'Askari had died and left a son called Muhammad, who had already come of age when his father died. But they did not fix the year of his birth. Perhaps this group based their belief in the existence of al-'Askari's son mainly upon the tradition which says that the earth cannot be void of a Proof. Unfortunately al-Qummi does not report any witnesses to the birth of the Imam from this group to support their opinion.

Al-Kulaynī, al-Mufīd and al-Ṭūsī mention four different viewpoints concerning the date of the twelfth Imam’s birth. The first was related by ‘Allān al-Rażī and al-Kulaynī on the authority of ‘Alī b. Muhammad, who states that the twelfth Imam was born in 255/868. Al-Ṭūsī reports two narrations attributed to Ḥakīma bint al-Jawād which support this date.

The second report states that he was born in 258/871. This report is attributed by Ǧawārī b. ‘Alī al-‘Ījī to an anonymous Persian who related that in the year 260/873 he had come to Sāmarrā from Persia to serve in the house of al-'Askari. According to the Persian one of al-'Askari's slave-girls had given birth and he saw the child in the arms of another slave-girl. He estimated his age at about two years. Another transmission, on the authority of Muḥammad b. ‘Alī b. Bilāl, relates that al-'Askari informed him twice about his successor: once in 258/871, then three days before his death in 260/874. The narration attributed to Ǧawārī does not mention explicitly the date of the Imam’s birth nor the time when the narrator gave his estimation, whether it was before or after the death of al-'Askari. Regarding the narration of Ibn Bilāl, although al-'Askari informed him about the existence of his successor in 258/871, this does not indicate or reveal that the birth of his son occurred in that year. In fact it leads us to think that the birth occurred before 258/871.

The third viewpoint was that of a group of Imamites who thought that al-'Askari’s son had been born after his father’s death in 261/874. They claimed that a slave-girl had conceived a child belonging to al-'Askari, and that her pregnancy had been known to the caliph as well as to other people. Thus the authorities delayed the division of his share of the estate until the pregnancy was proved invalid to the caliph. They contended that the Imam was born eight months after his father’s death, and was then hidden. Al-'Askari had commanded that he be named Muhammad. From the historical viewpoint, the account given by this group is completely unconvincing and in itself does not encourage one to believe that al-‘Askari had left a successor. Firstly, al-‘Askari’s slave-girl, Saqîl, who had claimed that she was pregnant by her master, was detained by the ‘Abbâsid authorities for two years until the pregnancy was proved invalid. Secondly, al-Kulaynî reports that Abû Hâshim al-Jâfari once asked the eleventh Imam,

“O master, do you have a son?” He replied, “Yes.” Abû Hâshim said, “If something should happen to you, where should I ask for him?” The Imam said, “In Medina.”

It is well-known that al-‘Askari died in 260/874 and that Abû Hâshim died the following year. Therefore this narration would suggest that the birth occurred before 260/874. Thirdly, al-Mas‘ûdî reports that the twelfth Imam was born two years after the death of his grandfather, al-Hâdî. As the latter died in 254/869, the birth would have occurred in 256/870.

Al-Mas‘ûdî’s narration adds weight to the fourth viewpoint, which places the birth of the twelfth Imam in 256/870. The Imamite sources record many narrations in favour of this date. The most important one, however, is mentioned on the authority of Mu‘allâ b. Muḥammad and Ahmad b. Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allah, who related that al-‘Askari issued a letter to his reliable followers after the assassination of al-Muhtadî, the caliph, saying,

“This is the punishment of him who has sinned against Allah, the Exalted, in regard to his legatees. He thought that he would kill me without offspring. Now he has seen the omnipotence of Allah, the Exalted.”

The narration continues to report that in fact the Imam had a son called Muhammad, who was born in 256/870.

Al-Muhtadî was dethroned and died in Rajab 256/870. Moreover all the Imamite narrators agree that the birth of the twelfth Imam occurred on the 15th of Sha‘bân. So if one links the death of al-Muhtadî in the month of Rajab with the letter of al-‘Askari which was issued in the next month, Sha‘bân, it would seem plausible that the Imam’s birth occurred on the 15th of Sha‘bân in 256/870. Furthermore al-Mas‘ûdî reports an anecdote attributed to Khadija bint Muḥammad al-Jawād to support such a hypothesis. In 262/875 a certain man called Aḥmad b. Ibrāhīm asked her about al-ʿAskārī’s successor, and she confirmed his existence, adding that he had taken over the Imamate on 11th Rabī‘ I 260/874 at the age of four years and seven months,87 which means that he was born on 15th Shaʿbān 256/18th July 870.

It is worth quoting here a narration concerning the birth of the twelfth Imam which was viewed as authentic by the time of al-Masʿūdī, who died in 345/956. Al-Ḥadīq presented it as follows and attributed it to Ḥākim bint al-Jawād, who related,

"Abū Muhammad al-Ḥasan b. ʿAli, peace be upon both of them, called on me with the message, ‘O aunt, break your fast at our house tonight, because it is the fifteenth of Shaʿbān.
Tonight Allah, the Exalted, will manifest the Ḥujja, His Proof on earth.’ (When I went to the house), I asked him who the mother of the child was. He said, ‘Narjis.’ I said, ‘May Allah make me your sacrifice! But there is no sign of pregnancy in her!’ He said, ‘What I am telling you is so.’ Therefore I went in and greeted them. When I had taken my seat Narjis came forward to take off my shoes and said to me, ‘My mistress and the lady of my family, how are you tonight?’ I said, ‘Nay you are the mistress of myself and my family.’ But she denied my speech and replied, ‘What are you saying, O aunt?’ I said to her, ‘O my daughter, tonight Allah the Exalted will give you a son who shall be the Master in this world and in the hereafter’ She became embarrassed and blushed.

‘After I had finished my evening prayer I broke my fast and then went to sleep. At midnight I woke for prayer. I performed my prayer while Narjis was sleeping, without any sign of childbirth. Then I sat down performing the supererogatory prayer. Thereafter I went to bed and got up again, but she was still sleeping. Then she got up, performed her supererogatory prayer and lay down again.’

Ḥākim continued, ‘I went out to see the dawn and found that its first stage was about to appear. But she was still asleep.
So I began to doubt al-ʿAskārī’s expectation. Just then he called out from his place, ‘Do not be in a hurry, O aunt, the matter is approaching.’ I sat down and recited the Qur’anic suras Ḥā Mīm al-Sajda (XL) and Yāsīn (XXXVI). At that moment she got up alarmed. I ran to her and said, 'The name of Allah be upon you, do you feel anything?' She replied, 'O aunt, yes.' Then I said to her 'Gather yourself and procure peace in your heart.' However at that moment we felt sleepy and drowsiness overcame us. After that I got up at the voice of my Master, and when I raised the covering from him I saw him, peace be upon him, prostrate on the ground.\textsuperscript{88} I took him to my bosom and noticed that he was pure and clean.

Abū Muḥammad called out to me and said, 'O aunt, bring my son to me,' and I did so... Afterwards al-ʾAskarī put his tongue in his mouth and gently stroked his eyes, ears and joints with his hand. Then he said, 'O my son, speak.' The child replied, 'I bear witness that there is no god but Allah, He is unique and has no partner, and I bear witness that Muḥammad is the Prophet of Allah.' Then he sent his greetings upon the commander of the faithful (ʾAmīr al-Muʾminīn), and upon the Imams respectively until he stopped at the name of his father. Then he stopped speaking.

"Abū Muḥammad said, 'O aunt, take him to his mother, so that he may greet her, and then bring him back to me.' I took him to her and when he had done so I brought him back and left him there. Al-ʾAskarī said to me, 'O aunt, come to visit us on the seventh day.' The next day I came to greet Abū Muḥammad and raised the curtain to see my Master. But I did not see him. So I asked the Imam, 'May Allah make me your sacrifice! What has happened to my Master?' He replied, 'O aunt, we have entrusted him to the one to whom the mother of Moses entrusted her son.'"

Ḥakīma said, "On the seventh day I came and greeted him and took my seat. Abū Muḥammad said, 'Bring my son to me.' I brought him wrapped in a piece of cloth, and the Imam repeated what he had done on the first day and the child said what he had said before. Then he recited the Qur'ānic verse\textsuperscript{89} And We desired to show favour unto those who were oppressed in the earth, and to make them Imams and to make them the inheritors. And to establish them in the earth, and to show Pharaoh and Haman and their hosts that which they feared from them."\textsuperscript{90}

The hagiographical nature of this account is obvious. However, certain of its elements suggest something about the nature of the birth. It seems that the pregnancy of Narjis was deliberately concealed, and a close relative was brought in to act as midwife only when the birth was due. If this was the case and a son was indeed born to al-ʿAskarī—the likeliest date being 256/870—then the reasons for the concealment of the pregnancy and the birth would be the same as the reasons for the Imam’s occultation.

3. The Reasons for the First Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

The early Imamite works mention three reasons for the occultation of the twelfth Imam, reasons which mirror the new tactics of the Imams in their religious and political activities. Al-Ṣādiq was reported to have said that al-Qāʾim would go into occultation before he rose again, because he would be afraid of being killed. A second reason is mentioned on the authority of the twelfth Imam, who was reported as having informed his partisan Ishāq b. Yaʿqūb—that all his forefathers had paid the oath of obedience to oppressive rulers, but that he had hidden himself in order to rise in arms, and had made no oath of obedience to any oppressive ruler. This reason had already been mentioned by al-Ḥasan and al-Riḍā, who both said that al-Qāʾim alone would not swear fealty to an oppressive ruler. The third reason is mentioned by al-Kulaynī, who states that the occultation was a test set by Allah for his creatures, so as to see who would remain steadfast in acknowledging the Imamate of the twelfth Imam.

These three reasons depict a new phase in the attitude of the Imamites toward their struggle for power. It appears that the quiescent policy of the Imams towards the ʿAbbāsid regime, along with their continued intellectual activities, had led the Imamite organization to a more politically developed situation. This fact encouraged the twelfth Imam to instigate underground political activities against the ʿAbbāsids. At the same time, he knew that certain followers of his forefathers had caused the failure of two bids for power in 70/689 and 140/757 by revealing the activities of the Imams to their enemies, which led to their arrest and the failure of their attempt. Perhaps such incidents obliged the twelfth Imam to live in a state of concealment even from his own followers so as to practice his underground activities through the Imamite organization. and to evade any ‘Abbāsid bid to arrest him. This is indicated by many traditions commanding the Imamites to keep the name of al-Qā‘im a secret.\textsuperscript{96} Al-Kulaynī reports that, after the death of al-‘Askari in 260/874, some people among his adherents asked the agent (wakīl), Abū ‘Abd Allah al-Sālihī, to ask about the name and residence of the twelfth Imam for them. When he did so, the answer was,

“If you reveal the name to them, they will reveal it in public; and if they realize the place of his residence they will lead foes to it.”\textsuperscript{97}

Al-Kulaynī mentions another report which asserts that the occultation of the twelfth Imam was a preparatory step for the overthrow of the state of injustice.\textsuperscript{98} It is relevant to study the plan of al-‘Askari to hide his son and the ‘Abbāsid attitude towards the Imamites after the death of al-‘Askari so as to see why the later felt it necessary to hide his son.

4. Al-‘Askari’s Plan to Hide his Successor

The circumstances which accompanied the birth of al-‘Askari’s son suggest that al-‘Askari wanted to save his successor from the restrictive policy of the ‘Abbāsids, which had been established by al-Ma’mūn. Hence he did not circulate in public the news concerning the birth of his son, but only disclosed it to a few reliable followers, such as Abū Hāshim al-Ja’fari, Ḥāmid b. Ishāq, and Ḥakīma and Khadija, the aunts of al-‘Askari.\textsuperscript{99} Moreover he decided to move his son to a place safer than Sāmarra so that he could carry on his religious and political activities through the Wikāla without suffering the interference of the ‘Abbāsids.

Study of the hagiographical and historical anecdotes concerning the first occultation of the Imam and his reappearance reveals that al-‘Askari hid his son first in Sāmarra and then in Medina, where he lived under the guardianship of his paternal grandmother. According to al-Sadūq, al-‘Askari sent his son to an unknown place forty days after his birth, and then his son was brought back to his mother.\textsuperscript{100} According to al-Mas‘ūdi, three years later, in the year 259/873, al-‘Askari asked his own mother, Ḥadīth to go on the pilgrimage. He explained his critical position to her, gave her full instructions, and sent his son with her. His son had already received from his father the signs of the Imamate, the most esteemed name of Allah, the inheritance and the weapon. Thereafter Ḥadīth and her grandson went to Mecca under the protection of a close friend called Aḥmad b.
Muḥammad b. al-Muṭṭahir.\(^{101}\) It appears that after they had performed the rite of pilgrimage they went to Medina, which was used as the place of concealment for the twelfth Imam.

Many reports incline one to accept the above description of the twelfth Imam’s early life. As we have seen, Abū Haṣḥim al-Ja’farī once asked al-ʿAskarī where he should ask for his successor were he to die. Al-ʿAskarī said, “In Medina.” Another report states that the residence of al-Qāʾīm would be in Medina, surrounded by thirty intimate followers.\(^{102}\) All the traditions concerning the rise of al-Qāʾīm indicate that it will occur in Mecca.\(^{103}\) The Imamite sources record that the twelfth Imam al-Qāʾīm went on the pilgrimage every year.\(^{104}\) Such evidence indicates that the twelfth Imam was in an area not far from Mecca, perhaps Medina.

As part of al-ʿAskarī’s prudent fear, he made his manifest testament only to his mother, Ḥadīth, and did not mention any successor openly to anyone else.\(^{105}\) From all this it seems most probable that the twelfth Imam spent most of his early life in Medina, because al-ʿAskarī recognised the danger which his son would face were he to remain in Iraq.

5. The Abbāsid Attempt to Arrest al-ʿAskarī’s Son

The caliph al-Muʿtāmid continued the ‘Abbāsid policy of putting the Imams under close watch and enforced it even more vigorously with the spread of the traditions concerning the role of the twelfth Imam. On hearing about the deterioration of al-ʿAskarī’s health, al-Muʿtāmid sent five of his most trusted officers, amongst whom was his servant Naḥḥir, to the house of al-ʿAskarī to watch over him. He also ordered the chief judge, al-Ḥasan b. Abī al-Shawārib\(^{106}\), to send ten reliable people to participate in this task. When al-ʿAskarī died on 8th Rabi‘ I 260/ 1st January 874, the caliph sent a contingent to search his house. They sealed off all his estate and then looked for his son to the extent that they even brought women to examine his slave-girls in case any of them were pregnant.\(^{107}\)

Despite the fact that the primary investigation proved to al-Muʿtāmid that al-ʿAskarī died without leaving a son, the vast majority of the Imamites held that he had in fact left one. According to the Imamite works, Ja'far, the brother of al-'Askari, who had already claimed to be the Imam and tried to succeed his brother, revealed to the authorities the Imamites' belief in the existence of al-'Askari's successor. Al-Šadūq reports that a band of people from Qumm, among whom was Muhammad b. Ja'far al-Himyari, arrived at Sāmarrā in ignorance of the death of al-'Askari with letters of inquiry and legal taxes. There they learned about his death and were directed to Ja'far. They met him and wanted to indulge in the ceremonies which they had practiced before on such occasions. They asked Ja'far to tell them about the amount of money they had brought and who had given it to them. Ja'far replied that he was no soothsayer and that the things the Imamites claimed about al-'Askari were mere lies, because Allah alone could know such things. He then told them to hand the money over to him, but they refused to do so, and their quarrel became public. While they were arguing someone came, called them by name and led them to a house. There he showed them someone who was believed to be the agent of the twelfth Imam and who revealed to them how much money they had brought. Therefore they accepted the Imamate of the twelfth Imam. Having done so they were commanded that they should henceforth hand the money to a certain man in Baghdad. According to al-Šadūq, Ja'far went straight to the caliph, al-Mu'tamid, and informed him that the Imamites still believed in the existence of a son of al-'Askari. Al-Mu'tamid immediately had this investigated by sending a band of soldiers with Ja'far to search the house of al-'Askari and the houses of the neighbours. They arrested a slave-girl called Saqīl and demanded that she show them the child, but she denied having given birth to a child. According to al-Šadūq, in order to save the life of the twelfth Imam, Saqīl claimed to be pregnant. Thereupon al-Mu'tamid incarcerated her in his harem for observation. Under the supervision of Nahrīr, the caliph's wives and slave-girls and the wives of the chief judge, Ibn Abī al-Shawārib, observed Saqīl for two years until they felt that further observation was no longer necessary. When disturbances occurred in various parts of the Empire and the vizier 'Ubayd Allah Ibn Khāqān suddenly died, they ignored her completely.

Many reports indicate that while Saqīl was imprisoned the 'Abbāsids carried out a campaign of persecution against the Imamites and that Ja'far was behind it. In spite of the fact that the Imamites lost many people, all attempts on the part of the authorities to arrest the twelfth Imam proved fruitless.

According to al-Mufid, al-‘Askari wanted to deny the ‘Abbāsids the opportunity to find any trace which might endanger the life of his successor. Hence he devised a plan whereby according to his public will he left his estate only to his mother, Ḥadīth. On hearing of the death of her son, she came from Medina to Sāmarrā to take over the estate, but found that it was under ‘Abbāsid control. Furthermore, Ja‘far quarrelled with her about his brother’s inheritance, insisting on his right to the estate. He raised the case with the authorities, who were trying to confirm that al-‘Askari had no son by interfering in it. Hadīth maintained that al-‘Askari had made her his sole heiress, and that according to Imamite law Ja‘far had no right to the estate of his brother. This quarrel went on for two years until the pregnancy of Shaqīl proved false. Although the judge adjudicated in favour of Ḥadīth, Ja‘far’s claim was not disputed because of his influential connections. In the end the estate was divided into two parts, in spite of Imamite law.
CHAPTER IV

THE UNDERGROUND ACTIVITIES OF THE TWELFTH IMAM AS SEEN IN THE ACTIONS OF THE SAFĪRS

1. A Brief Study of the Wikāla Before the Twelfth Imam

As mentioned in Chapter Two, a critical situation the Imams faced, brought about by the ʿAbbāsids, forced the Imams to search for a new means to communicate with the members of their congregation. The Imamite sources indicate that the sixth Imam al-Ṣādiq was the first Imam to employ an underground system of communication (al-Tanzīm al-Sirrī) among his community.¹

The main purpose of the Wikāla was to collect the khums, the zakāt, and other kinds of alms for the Imam from his followers. Although the Wikāla may have had other purposes at that time, the sources rarely record them. Al-Ṣādiq directed the activities of the organization with such care that the ʿAbbāsids were not aware of its existence. As part of his prudent fear (al-Taqiyya), he used to ask some of his followers to carry out certain tasks for the organization without informing them that they were in fact his agents. Al-Ṭūsī reports that Naṣr b. Qābūs al-Lakhmī spent twenty years working as an agent (wakīl) for al-Ṣādiq, without knowing that he had actually been appointed as one.

Al-Ṣādiq’s most important agent in Iraq was ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. al-Ḥajjāj, who continued in this office until his death, after the time of the eighth Imam al-Ridā.² Muʿallā b. Khunays was al-Ṣādiq’s agent in Medina. In 133/750 he was arrested by the ʿAbbāsids and sentenced to death because he refused to reveal the names of the Imamite propagandists.³

Despite the difficulties which faced the Wikāla in its early stages, the areas covered by the agents and their training were extended during the time of al-Kāzīm as activities were intensified. The rite of pilgrimage was used as a means to communicate with each other. Al-Kāzīm’s agent in Egypt was ʿUthmān b. ʿĪsā al-Rawwāsī.⁴ He also had agents in numerous other places, such as Ḥayyān al-Sarrāj in Kufa, Muḥammad b. Abī ʿUmayr in Baghdad, and Yūnis b. Yaʿqūb al-Bajlī in Medina.⁵ Al-Masʿūdī’s report suggests that all the agents received their instructions from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. al-Ḥajjāj, who was then resident in Baghdad.⁶

The agents faced another campaign of arrests in 179/795 instigated by the caliph al-Rashīd. It caused the Imamite organization considerable damage. The agent in Baghdad, Muḥammad b. Abī ʿUmayr, was arrested and tortured in the unfulfilled hope that he would reveal the names and locations of al-Kāzīm’s followers, while his sister was put in jail for four years.⁷ Another agent, ʿAlī b. Yaqqūn, who used to send money and letters to the Imam through an individual called Ismāʿīl b. Salām, was also arrested and spent the rest of his life in prison.⁸ According to the Imamite sources the campaign of arrests led to the arrest of al-Kāzīm himself and to his death in prison.⁹ Sixty other ʿAlīs also died under torture in prison.¹⁰

After the death of al-Kāzīm the members of the Imamite organization found themselves faced with an internal theological and political question involving the doctrine of al-Qāʿim al-Mahdī and his occultation. Al-Kāzīm’s agents, such as al-Rawwāsī in Egypt, Ziyād al-Qindī in Baghdad, ʿAlī b. Abī Ḥamza and Ḥayyān al-Sarrāj in Kufa, and al-Ḥasan b. Qayāmā in Wāsiṭ, had received many traditions attributed to al-Ṣādiq concerning al-Qāʿim al-Mahdī and his occultation, but these traditions did not explicitly state his identity.¹¹ Perhaps for this reason, they applied these traditions to the seventh Imam al-Kāzīm by denying his death and contending that he was al-Qāʿim al-Mahdī, but that he had gone into occultation.¹² Consequently, they rejected the Imamate of his son al-Ridā and split into a new group called the Wāqīfā, using the money of the organization to their own ends. As a result al-Ridā lost a considerable number of trained agents and over 100,000 dinars.¹³ Between the years 183-202/799-817 al-Ridā managed to solve this problem at least partially by clarifying to the members of the Wāqīfa the true nature of al-Qāʿim al-Mahdī, as transmitted on the authority of the previous Imams. According to al-Kashshī, he seems to have been able to persuade some of the members of the Wāqīfa, like al-Rawwāsī and his followers to recognize his Imamate.\textsuperscript{14}

Meanwhile the role of the \textit{Wikāla} was expanded to embrace the new needs and tasks of the congregation. Al-Ridā’s agents were \textquoteleft\textquoteleft Abd al-‘Azīz b. al-Muhtadī in Qumm,\textsuperscript{15} Safwān b. Yaḥyā in Kufa,\textsuperscript{16} \textquoteleft\textquoteleft Abd Allah b. Jandab and \textquoteleft\textquoteleft Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Ḥajjāj in Baghdad.\textsuperscript{17} Along with another eighty agents \textquoteleft\textquoteleft Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Ḥajjāj controlled the leadership of the organization through the time of the ninth Imam, al-Jawād,\textsuperscript{18} who achieved considerable success in protecting the organization from new schisms. Moreover the tactics of his agents developed in new directions especially in widening the sphere of \textit{al-Taqiyya} (prudent fear) by allowing some of his partisans to participate in the administration and the army of the \textquoteleft\textquoteleft Abbāsids.\textsuperscript{19}

During the long Imamate of the tenth Imam, al-Ḥādī (220-254/835-868) new trends emerged amongst the Imamites due to historical circumstances, trends which were later to play a dangerous role during the time of the twelfth Imam.

As was pointed out above (Ch. II, pp 48–53), al-Mutawakkil practiced the policy of al-Ma’mūn, who had made al-Ridā and his son al-Jawād join his courtiers so that their links with their partisans could be restricted and closely watched. Al-Mutawakkil did the same with al-Ḥādī. In 233/847 he summoned him from Medina to Sāmarrā, where he spent the rest of his life.\textsuperscript{20} The absence of direct contact between the Imam and his followers led to an increase in the religious and political role of the \textit{Wikāla}, so that the agents of the Imam gained more authority in running its affairs. Gradually the leadership of the \textit{Wikāla} became the only authority which could determine and prove the legitimacy of the new Imam. For example the ninth Imam, al-Jawād, gave his testament concerning his successor to his chief agent Muḥammad b. al-Faraj. He told him that in case he should die, he should take his orders from al-Ḥādī.\textsuperscript{21} When al-Jawād died in 220/835 the prominent leaders of the organization held a secret meeting at the house of Muḥammad b. al-Faraj to determine the next Imam, who was proved to be al-Ḥādī.\textsuperscript{22}

The agents of the Imam gradually gained a great deal of experience in organizing their partisans into separate units. Several reports suggest that the agents divided their followers into four separate groups according to area. The first included Baghdad, Madā‘in, Sawād and Kufa, the second Basra and al-Ahwāz, the third Qumm and Hamadān, and the fourth the Hijaz, Yemen and Egypt. Each area was entrusted to an independent agent, beneath whom many local agents were appointed. The workings of this system can be observed in letters of instruction attributed to al-Hādı concerning the organization’s administration. It is reported that he sent a letter in 232/847 to his local agent, ʿAlî b. Bilāl, saying:

“I have substituted Abū ʿAlî b. Rashīd for ʿAlî b. al-Ḥusayn b. ʿAbd Rabba. I have entrusted him with this post since he is sufficiently qualified so that no one can take precedence over him. He has been informed that you are the chief (shaykh) of your own area, since I wished to invest you with that area. However, you have to follow him and hand all the revenues to collect over to him.”

In a letter to his agents in Baghdad, Madāʿin and Kufa, al-Hādı wrote, “O Ayyūb b. Nūḥ, I am commanding you to cut off relations between yourself and Abū ʿAlî. Both of you should engage yourselves with what you have been entrusted and ordered to do in your areas. If you do so you should be able to manage your affairs without consulting me. . . O Ayyūb, I am ordering you neither to receive anything from the people of Baghdad and Madāʿin, nor to give anyone amongst them permission to contact me. If anyone brings you revenue from outside your area, order him to send it to the agent of his own area. O Abū ʿAlî, I am ordering you to follow what I have ordered Ayyūb.”23

This system saved the organization from otherwise inevitable damage after the harsh attack of al-Mutawakkil upon its underground political cells in 235/850. In the same way it was saved from the attack of al-Mustaʿīn in 248/862.

It should be noted that during the time of the tenth and eleventh Imams, the leadership of the organization in the four areas, was monopolized by a few individuals. Their tasks later fell to their descendants and remained under their control during the shorter occultation of the twelfth Imam. For example, ʿAlî b. Māzyār was the agent of al-Jawād and al-Hādı in al-Ahwāz24, while his sons were the agents of the twelfth Imam in the same region.25 Ibrāhīm b. Muhammad al-Hamadānī was the agent of al-Hādı in Hamadān,26 while his offspring inherited this post from father to son until the time of the twelfth Imam.27 Another agent was Ismāʿīl b. Ishāq b. Nawbakht,28 whose family later directed the members of the organization in Baghdad, while one of his relatives, al-Ḥusayn b.
Rūḥ, became the third safīr or "representative" of the twelfth Imam.

Among the agents, the most important was ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd al-ʿUmarī, who, as we shall see, was brought up under the auspices of the tenth Imam, al-Hāḍī. He made him first his own agent and then the agent of his son, Imam al-ʿAskarī. After the death of the latter ʿUthmān controlled the whole leadership of the organization as the first representative of the twelfth Imam, and his son Muḥammad later succeeded him to the post, as the second safīr.

The fact that the Imam's activities were underground made it easy for certain people to claim falsely to be the representatives of al-Hāḍī and al-ʿAskarī, and thus to collect money from the Imamites. It seems that this practice was carried out by the extremists (al-Ghulāt) and increased throughout the time of the twelfth Imam at the expense of his rightful agents.

2. The Main Functions of the Wikāla

For the Twelver Imamites the series of Imams ends with the twelfth Imam, who, from the death of his father in 260/874 up to the year 329/940-1, is believed to have lived in occultation. According to al-Nuʿmānī this period was called the "short occultation," al-Ghayba al-Qaṣīra, and according to later scholars the minor occultation, al-Ghayba al-Ṣughrā. It was of decisive importance for the organization and the internal evolution of the congregation. During it the twelfth Imam is considered to have pursued his activities from behind the scenes and to have led his followers by means of four specially chosen representatives. These were called sufārā (sing. safīr) or "ambassadors." The first was ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd al-ʿUmarī, the second his son Muḥammad, the third al-Ḥusayn b. Rūḥ al-Nawbakhtī and the fourth ʿAlī b. Muḥammad al-Sammarī.

A critical study of the history of this period (260-329/874-941) reveals that the main function of the safīrs was to implement certain tasks previously undertaken by the Imams so as to save him from the political pressure of the ʿAbbāsids. His predecessors had suffered this pressure since the time of al-Maʿmūn, especially since it was widely accepted among the Imamites of that period that the twelfth Imam would be al-Qāʿīm bi-l-Amr li-Izālat al-Duwal, that is, "he who is to be in charge of eliminating the governments (of the oppressors by militant means)."
One of the ambassadors’ tasks was to draw complete darkness over the name of the Imam and his whereabouts, not only as regards his foes, but even as regards his followers. Simultaneously the safir had to prove the existence of the Imam to his reliable adherents. This statement can be illustrated by a report of al-Kulaynî. ‘Abd Allah b. Ja’far al-Himyarî once asked the first safir whether or not he had seen the successor of the eleventh Imam. Al-‘Umarî, the safir, confirmed that he had seen him. But he added that people were forbidden to ask about his name, because if the government discovered his name they would certainly try to arrest him. In this way the first safir led the court of the caliph, al-Mu’tamid, to think that the eleventh Imam had died without a successor. According to al-Kulaynî’s report, the conclusion reached by the ‘Abbâsids seems to have released the Imamite from the humiliation which they had suffered throughout the time of the previous Imams. The agents of the twelfth Imam began to carry out their activities without being afraid of the authorities, since they were sure of the non-existence of the twelfth Imam, and thus did not bother to investigate the Imamite’s activities.

The activities of the safirs also aimed at protecting the congregation from any more schisms by proving the authenticity of the Imamate of al-‘Askari’s son. Towards this aim they employed those sayings of the Prophet and the Imams which indicate that the series of Imams will end with the twelfth, who would then go into occultation.

The four safirs carried out another task in the name of the Imam. They received and collected the taxes which the Imamites had previously paid to their Imams. According to the Imamite sources all the safirs performed miracles before receiving the money so that their adherents would believe in their legitimacy. According to the Imamite belief, whoever proclaimed himself a safir and did not work miracles had lied about the Imam and was driven out of the organization.

The Tawqîât (written and signed answers or pronouncements) attributed to the twelfth Imam indicate that he neither gave any statement to elucidate his attitude towards the political and economic situation of his time, nor ordered his followers to implicate themselves in an open political struggle with their rivals, the ‘Abbâsids. In fact, it is reasonable to agree with Muḥammad al-Ṣadr that by acting in this manner the Imam enabled his partisans to pursue their activities without attracting the attention of the 'Abbâsids by statements criticising their rule. Moreover it seems most likely that in following this policy the Imam wanted his agents and propagandists to concentrate their efforts upon strengthening the size and quality of their party, until it developed its political means and ideology to a degree which might enable it to put its goal into action. But the involvement of the agents in an immediate political struggle would have taken place at the expense of an increase in the size and the development of the ideological and political basis of the organization.

3. The Early Career of Uthmān b. Sa‘īd

Most of the Imamite information concerning the activities of the four safīrs is attributed to al-Ṭūsî in his work al-Ghayba. The latter depended mainly on two early missing works, that is, Kitâb fi Akhbâr Abî 'Amr wa Abî Ja’far al-‘Umarîyyayn by Ibn Barîna al-Kâtib, the son of the granddaughter of the second safîr, and Kitâb Akhbâr al-Wakilâ al-‘Arba a by Ahmed b. Nûh. Unfortunately, the work of al-Ṭūsî and other works give very few details concerning the background to the career of the first safîr. We know that the latter was Abû ‘Amr Uthmān b. Sa‘īd al-Umařî from the tribe of Asad. Javad ‘Alî, whose opinion was followed by Rajkowski, thought that the grandfather of Uthmān was ‘Amr b. Hurayth al-Šayrafi al-Kûfî, a well-known Shi‘ite from Kufa who belonged to Banû Asad. According to Javad ‘Alî, since both belonged to the same tribe, both are known by the epithet al-Asadî. But this cannot be accepted because there is no explicit evidence leading one to link the lineage of the two individuals. Nothing is known about the safîr nor of his position in the congregation. Moreover, the year of his birth and the details of his youth have not been handed down.

It is said that at the age of eleven Uthmān b. Sa‘īd was contracted to become a servant in the house of the ninth Imam, al-Jawâd, and that he never left his service. Later he became his gate-keeper and chamberlain. As the Imam’s “right hand”, he enjoyed his entire confidence and was entrusted with the execution of all his commissions. Uthmān b. Sa‘īd occupied this same position of trust throughout the lifetime of al-Hâdi, the tenth Imam, who was watched carefully and suspiciously by the government of the day, so that he even avoided speaking with the individual members of the community. For this reason, al-Hādī presented ʿUthmān to those who found it difficult to consult him directly. He told them that ʿUthman was his trusted associate and a man of honour, and that whatever he did was done in the Imam’s name. Furthermore, al-Kashshāʾ’s account indicates that during the last ten years of the time of al-Hādī, the leadership of the underground organization (al-Wikala) was in ʿUthmān’s hands. He organized its internal affairs and systematized the relations between the centre of the organization and its branches in the remote provinces. When the agent, ʿAlī b. ʿAmr, came to Sāmarrāʾ from Qazwīn with money and contacted Fāris b. Ḥātim, without knowing that the latter had been cursed by the Imam in 250/864, ʿUthmān quickly moved his lieutenants to save the money and prevented ʿAlī b. ʿAmr from having contact with Fāris b. Ḥātim.

ʿUthmān continued to hold this position of trust under the eleventh Imam al-ʿAskarī, who appointed him using the same words as had his father. It is reported that al-ʿAskarī had only informed a few of his followers that ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd was his agent. However, at one point a group of Yemenite Shiʿites brought money to al-ʿAskarī, and he revealed to them that ʿUthmān was his agent and that his son, Muhammad, would be the agent of the twelfth Imam, al-Mahdi. According to another narration al-ʿAskarī presented his successor to forty reliable Shiʿites, such as al-Hasan b. Ayyūb, ʿAlī b. Bilāl, Ahmad b. Hilāl, and ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd. He informed them that they would not see him again and commanded them to obey ʿUthmān during the concealment of the twelfth Imam, because he would be his representative. Moreover, during the last illness of the eleventh Imam, ʿUthmān looked after him and cared for him. According to al-Ṭūsī, he performed the last rites for the dead man, washed the corpse, wrapped him in his shroud and buried him. For the Imamites these are the unmistakeable signs that ʿUthmān was the rightful representative safīr of the hidden Imam. They contended that ʿUthmān did all this on the orders of al-ʿAskarī.

4. The Career of the First Safīr

The first safīr managed to satisfy the prominent Imamites who were already members of the organization that the twelfth Imam was in a state of occultation and thus safe from his enemies, while also convincing them that he was the rightful representative of the Imam.
It appears that his occupation of the leadership of the organization during the time of the tenth and the eleventh Imams encouraged the agents to accept his claim and follow his instructions, without asking him to show a miracle or proof.48 However, the ordinary Imamites, who had nothing to do with the organization, were confused by the occultation of the Imam and, as has been noted,49 held different views concerning the twelfth Imam’s successor. Many Imamites refused to pay the khums to ‘Uthmān b. Sa‘īd unless he showed, by means of a miracle, that he had been rightfully appointed by the twelfth Imam. This is illustrated by a narrative of al-Kulaynī attributed to Sa‘d al-Ash‘arī al-Qummī:

“Al-Ḥasan b. al-Nadr, Abū al-Saddām and a number of others spoke together after the death of Abū Muḥammad (the eleventh Imam) about the agents and decided to search for the new Imam. Al-Ḥasan b. Naḍr came to Abū al-Saddām and said to him, ‘I desire to make the pilgrimage.’ Abu al-Saddām said to him, ‘Delay it this year.’ Al-Ḥasan b. al-Naḍr said to him, ‘I am frightened by my dreams, so I must go.’ He made Aḥmad b. Ya‘lā b. Ḥamadād his executor. The latter had devoted some money to the Imam. Hearing of al-Ḥasan’s decision, he gave the money to al-Ḥasan and commanded him not to hand anything over without proof.

“Al-Ḥasan said, ‘When I arrived at Baghdad I rented a house. Thereafter an agent brought me clothes and money and entrusted them to me. I said to him, ‘What is this?’ He said to me, ‘It is what you see.’ Then another one brought similar goods, and a third one until they filled the house. Afterwards Aḥmad b. Ishāq (the assistant of the sāfi) brought me all the goods he had. Thus I became confused. But later I received a message from al-Rajul (the Imam), peace be upon him, ordering me to take the goods to al-‘Askar (Ṣāmarrah). . . When I arrived there I received a message ordering me to bring the goods (to him). So I loaded them in the baskets of the carriers. When I reached the corridor of his house, I found a black slave standing there. He asked me, ‘Are you al-Ḥasan b. al-Naḍr?’ I said, ‘Yes.’ He replied, ‘Enter.’ So I entered the house, and then I entered an apartment, where I emptied the baskets of the carriers. . . There was a curtain leading to another apartment. Someone called me from behind it, ‘O al-Ḥasan b. al-Naḍr, praise Allah for His grace is upon you, and do not doubt, for Satan would be pleased if you waver.” Thereafter he sent out two garments for me and said, “Take them, because you will need them.” So I took them and went out.”

Sa’d al-Ash’arī reports that al-Ḥasan b. al-Naḍr departed and died in the month of Ramadān, and the two garments were used as his shroud.\(^{50}\)

This event was a clear proof to al-Ḥasan, because both his name and his doubts concerning the validity of the agents’ activities had been revealed to him. Moreover, according to Sa’d al-Ash’arī, the two garments which al-Ḥasan had received were a prediction of his death, which occurred a month later. If one studies carefully the circumstances surrounding al-Ḥasan b. al-Naḍr from the time of his decision to investigate the activities of the agents until his death, one can surmise that the agents arranged them so as to remove his doubts. They would have done so because al-Ḥasan b. al-Naḍr was prominent amongst the Imamites of Qumm,\(^{51}\) and his doubts might have affected the Imamites of his area. So perhaps the agents of Qumm informed the safīr in Baghdad about his arrival there. This can be understood from the act of Aḥmad b. Ishāq and the other agents who brought the clothes to al-Ḥasan’s house and later sent him a letter ordering him to send the goods to Sāmarrā. There, it is reported, he met the Imam, who confirmed for him the validity of the agent’s activities. One can discover from this example and many others not quoted here\(^ {52}\) the means used by the safīr to remove the doubts and confusion of the Imamites brought about by the concealment of their Imam, and to make them obey his instructions.

As has already been indicated the safīr forbade his partisans to ask about the name of the Imam. Perhaps, their silence along with al-‘Askari’s last will in which he bequeathed his endowments to his mother and placed her in charge of his affair without referring to his successor,\(^ {53}\) encouraged the authorities to believe that the Imamites no longer had an Imam and, therefore, that any Imamite activities were useless. In doing so the safīr gained a certain freedom to have communication with the twelfth Imam and his followers. This is illustrated by a statement attributed to the safīr:

“The caliph thinks that Abū Muhammad (al-‘Askari), peace be upon him, died childless. Thus his estate was divided and given to someone, who had no right in the estate but he (the twelfth Imam) kept quiet. These are his agents carrying out their activities without being afraid that someone would stop them for investigation. If the (Imam’s) name is identified, the (authorities) would start searching for (his whereabouts). So, by Allah, do not ask about his name.”

The belief that al-ʿAskarī had no successor was circulated among some sunnī scholars, such as Abū al-Qāsim al-Balkhī (died around 300/912). In his account of the Imamite doctrine, he states, “In our time al-Ḥasan b. ʿAlī died and had no son. Therefore they (the Imamites) became confused.” Gradually this belief was so disseminated among the non-Imamite circles that leading sunnī scholars such as Ibn Ḥazm (d. 456/1063) and al-Shahristānī (d. 548/1153) were encouraged to view it as a matter of fact. Later al-Dhahabi believed that al-ʿAskarī left a son but he disappeared when he was nine years old or less in 265/878, when he entered a cellar (sardāb) in Sāmarrā and was not seen again. In other words the twelfth Imam died during the lifetime of the first safīr. But al-Dhahabi is a later historian, since he died in 748/1347. Moreover he does not give the source of his narration, nor does he state explicitly how al-ʿAskarī’s son died even though he presents his information concerning the concealment of the twelfth Imam in the list of people who died in 265/878 to give the impression that he had passed away in that year. The earliest report concerning the occultation of al-ʿAskarī’s son in the cellar is given by al-Kanjī, who died in 658/1260, but he also does not mention the source of his information. It is therefore most likely that al-Dhahabi based his report upon a belief common among the Imamite masses, that the twelfth Imam had hidden himself in the cellar of his house. This belief spread after the fifth/eleventh century and later became popular among certain scholars, such as Ibn Khaldūn.

Moreover, several reports in the early Imamite sources refute al-Dhahabi’s narration and prove that the twelfth Imam was alive after 265/878. Al-Ṭūsī mentions that many of the Imamites received written answers to their letters from the Imam in the same handwriting as in the letters they used to receive during the lifetime of the first safīr, and al-Ṣadūq lists thirteen agents and forty-six ordinary Imamites from numerous cities who claimed to have seen the twelfth Imam both during and after the time of the first safīr.

From this it is clear that al-Dhahabi’s report is based on popular belief rather than upon sound historical facts. So it would be foolish to give credence to his claims concerning the death and occultation of the twelfth Imam.
5. The Opposition to the First Safīr

As has been noted the occultation of the Imam resulted in the gradual expansion of the role of the safīr. However it also made it easier for a pretender to the deputyship (al-sīfāra or al-niyyāba) to practice his activities among the Imamites at the expense of the Imam’s rightful representative. As we have seen, this was practiced mainly throughout the period of the short occultation by the extremists (al-Ghulāt). That they were extremists is indicated by a number of factors. Firstly, the claimant to the sīfāra believed in the incarnation of God (hulūl). Most of the claimants to the sīfāra from the time of al-Ḥasan al-Shārī up until al-Shalmaghnī claimed first that they were the agents of the Imam. Then when the Imam excommunicated them, they called people on their own account. Extremists had claimed to be the Imam’s representative even before the occultation of the twelfth Imam, but with a slight difference. The claimant would first announce that he was the Gate (Bāb) of the Imam, and then claim that he was a prophet. Al-Kashshī mentions many extremists who did so, such as Muḥammad b. Furāt, al-Qāsim al-Yaqṭīnī and ‘Alī b. Haska.

The third factor indicating that the claimants were extremists is that certain links existed between the extremists active during the time of the tenth and eleventh Imams and the claimants who lived during the time of the short occultation. According to al-Kashshī, ‘Alī b. Haska was the teacher of Muḥammad b. Mūsā al-Shārī, al-Qasim al-Yaqṭīnī and al-Ḥasan b. Muḥammad b. Bābā. The last of these was a close follower of Muḥammad b. Nuṣayr, who led the extremists trend during the time of the eleventh Imam, and then claimed that he was the agent of the twelfth Imam. Moreover, Ibn Nuṣayr was supported by some of Banū Furāt, the descendants of the extremist Muḥammad b. Furāt.

According to al-Ṭūsī, Abū Muḥammad al-Ḥasan al-Shārī was the first to claim falsely to be the Imam’s representative during the short occultation, but the Imamites cursed him and refused to accept him. Then the twelfth Imam issued a Tawqī, in which he excommunicated al-Shārī and announced the falseness of his claim. Although al-Shārī did not achieve immediate success, his following grew in strength and eventually he formed a strong threat to the leadership of the second safīr.
6. The Imam’s Wikāla During the Time of the First Safīr

The main problem facing any historian dealing with the period of the short occultation is that most of the activities of the twelfth Imam and his representatives were carried out underground. Perhaps for this reason, the Imamite scholars such as al-Kulaynī, ʿAbd Allah b. Jaʿfar al-Himyarī, Saʿd al-Ashʿarī and al-Hasan b. Mūsā al-Nawbakhtī rarely mention the names of the Imam’s agents, or refer to their activities or links with each other: However, they do refer to those of their activities which did not attract the attention of the authorities. Therefore, the historical information concerning the underground activities of the agents is to be found scattered throughout the theological and heresiographical works much more than in the histories. Because of the nature of these works the historical information has taken on a heresiographical form. In addition, both questions asked by the Shiʿites and answers of the twelfth Imam and his safīrs were collected during his time, but unfortunately, most of them have been lost. Only a few are extant, especially in works dealing with the concealment (Ghayba). For example the second safīr Abū Jaʿfar Muhammad b. ʿUthmān, collected the pronouncements of his father, but his collection is not extant. However, many anecdotes which assist us in discovering the links among the Imam’s agents and the nature of their activities have been recorded.

6.1 Iraq: The Centre of the Wikāla

After the death of the eleventh Imam, the first safīr had not the slightest reason to remain in Sāmarra, which was then the capital and the headquarters of the troops of the ʿAbbāsid dynasty, which had opposed the Imams from the very beginning. Perhaps for this reason, ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd wanted to carry out the activities of the organization beyond the surveillance of the authorities in the capital. Therefore he moved to Baghdad, where he made the area of al-Karkh, which was inhabited by Shiʿites, the centre for the leadership of the organization. ⁶⁹ A part of ʿUthmān’s prudent fear (al-Taqiyya) was to evade the investigation of the regime by not involving himself in any open political or religious arguments. He also disguised himself as a butter-seller (sammān) and, used to bring money to the Imam in a butter-sack. Consequently he acquired the nickname al-
Zayyāt or al-Sammān.\textsuperscript{70} Al-Kashshārī reports that his name was Hafs b. ‘Amr al-‘Umarī,\textsuperscript{71} which may have been a pseudonym he used when he held underground meetings with other agents.

It has been noted that the twelfth Imam was sent by his father to Medina in 259/873. However, the first safīr made Baghdad the centre of the organization. He followed the traditional geographical divisions of the Islamic provinces in organizing the underground political units (cells) of the organization. Nevertheless, he took into consideration the size of each factional unit, the distance of each area from the capital, and its situation on the main roads.

According to al-Kashshārī, ‘Uthmān b. Sa‘īd was the head of the Wikāla from the time of the eleventh Imam, in the sense that all the revenue sent by the adherents to the Imam through his agents was given in the end to ‘Uthmān, who in turn handed it over to the Imam.\textsuperscript{72} Many agents were situated below the safīr in the ranks of the organization in Baghdad and in the other cities of Iraq, such as Hājiz b. Yazīd al-Washshā, Ahmad b. Ishāq al-Ash‘arī and Muḥammad b. Ahmad b. Ja‘far al-Qattān, the last two of whom were the chief assistants of the first safīr.

Ahmad b. Ishāq was at first al-‘Askarī’s agent for his endowments (awqāf) in Qumm.\textsuperscript{73} However, after the death of al-‘Askarī the sources begin to refer to his activities in Baghdad as assistant to ‘Uthmān b. Sa‘īd in the financial affairs of the organization. Al-Kulaynī reports that in 260/874 some people from the east doubted the validity of the agents after al-‘Askarī’s death and for this reason they came to Baghdad. Along with other agents Ahmad b. Ishāq managed to remove their doubts.\textsuperscript{74} The first safīr may have summoned him from Qumm because he needed his service in Iraq after al-‘Askarī’s death. According to Ibn Rustam al-Ṭabarī, Ahmad b. Ishāq continued his career in the organization in Iraq until his death during the time of the second safīr.\textsuperscript{75}

Muḥammad al-Qattān was the second agent of the safīr in Baghdad. In order to hide his activities he disguised himself as a cotton dealer. The agents used to bring money and letters to him hidden in cotton which he then took to the safīr.\textsuperscript{76} Ibn Rustam reports that in 261-3/875-6 the people of Dīnawar collected 16,000 dinars, which were entrusted to a certain Ahmad b. Muḥammad al-Dīnawarī. At Qarmisin\textsuperscript{77} he collected 1,000 dinars more and some garments. After an intensive search in Baghdad and Sāmarrā, he received in Sāmarrā a letter describing the money and other items and ordering him to take them to ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd and to follow his instructions. The latter ordered al-Dīnawarī to hand over the items to al-Qaṭṭān. It is reported that al-Qaṭṭān had dealings with an agent in Tus called al-Hasan b. al-Fadl b. Zayd al-Yamānī. According to al-Mufīd, al-Yamānī used to deal with al-Qaṭṭān as if he were the safīr. The third agent of the safīr in Baghdad was Ḥājīz. His relations with a large number of agents indicate that he held a high position in the organization. He was perhaps the connecting link between the agents in the eastern provinces and the safīr in Baghdad, especially since al-Ṣadūq and al-Kulaynī mention certain persons from the cities of Balkh and Merv who contacted the Imam and his safīr through Ḥājīz.

While the first safīr seems to have led the affairs of the organization in Baghdad with the help of his three assistants, he may also have directly supervised the activities of his agents in the other main cities, such as al-Madā in, Kufa, Wāsiṭ, Baṣra and al-Ahwāz. In the last of these the leadership of the Wikāla had been in the hands of Banū Mazyār or Mahzayār from the time of the ninth Imam. Al-Kashshī reports that the agent of the Imam in al-Ahwāz, Ibrāhīm b. Mazyār, had collected a large amount of money. On his deathbed he revealed to his son Muḥammad a special secret code and ordered him to hand the money over to the person who would disclose to him his knowledge of this code. Al-Kashshī adds that when Muḥammad arrived at Baghdad, al-ʿUmarī the safīr came to him and divulged to him the exact code, so he handed the money over to him. It is clear from this report that the first safīr had already agreed on the code with Ibrāhīm al-Mazyār so as to save the organization from infiltration and misuse by false agents. According to al-Kulaynī and al-Mufīd, a few days later Muḥammad received a letter of promotion indicating that he was installed in the post of his father in al-Ahwāz. This underground system of communication between the safīr in Baghdad and the agent in al-Ahwāz was similar to other such systems which existed at this stage between the safīr and his other agents in Iraq, such as Banū al-Rakūlī in Kufa.

6.2 The Second Area: Egypt, the Hijaz and Yemen

The main centre for the organization in this area seems to have been Medina. It is reported that al-ʿAskarī had many agents there amongst the 'Alids (al-Tālibiyyīn). However, after al-‘Askari’s death, some of them denied the existence of his son, the twelfth Imam. According to al-Kulaynī, those who held that al-‘Askari had left a son received letters confirming them in their posts, whereas the deniers did not receive such letters which showed that they were dismissed from their posts in the Wikāla. Another report indicates that the principal agent in Medina in 264/877-8 was Yahyā b. Muḥammad al-‘Aridī. Unfortunately, the sources neither explain how the safīr in Baghdad used to contact his agents in Hijaz, nor do they refer to the connecting links among the agents of Egypt, Hijaz and Yemen. However, it is most likely that the agents used the occasion of the pilgrimage to communicate with each other. But it seems that the safīr did not keep in direct contact with his agent in Medina and preferred to employ slaves who were mostly ignorant and irreligious as the connecting link. He did this to keep the attention of the authorities away from such activities.

The agents in Egypt followed the instructions of the agents in Hijaz, especially as regards their contact with the centre in Iraq. Al-Kulaynī reports a narration attributed to al-Hasan b. ʿIsā al-‘Aridī, who was probably the agent in Mecca. He says that after the death of al-‘Askari, an Egyptian came to Mecca with money for the Imam, but was confused because some people held that al-‘Askari had died without a son and that the Imam was his brother Ja‘far, whereas other people informed him that al-‘Askari had, in fact, left a successor. Afterwards he sent a certain person called Abū Ṭālib to Sāmarrā with a letter, probably a recommendation from the agent in Mecca. In Sāmarrā Abū Ṭālib first contacted Ja‘far, asking him for proof so that he could accept his Imamate, but Ja‘far could not produce any. Therefore he went to the Gate (Bāb, deputy), who gave him a strong proof that he was the rightful representative of the new Imam (the twelfth), by revealing to him that his master, the Egyptian, had entrusted him with money to deal with according to his wish. For this reason Abū Ṭālib handed over the money to the Bāb and received a letter in reply to his letter. Perhaps the agent in Mecca had sent forward complete information concerning the case of his Egyptian colleague.

Yemen was a traditional region for Shī‘ite tendencies. Al-Hādī had had agents there since 248/862, and there were agents who had direct contact with ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd during the time of al-‘Askari. According to al-Kulaynī, the chief agent in Yemen during the time of the twelfth Imam was Ja'far b. Ibrāhīm, who was related to a family working in the Imamite organization in Hamadān, Kufa and Yemen.\footnote{91} A report mentioned by al-Najāshi indicates that the connecting link between the agents in Yemen and the first saffīr was ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn al-Yamānī.\footnote{92}

6.3 The Third Area: Azerbayjān and Arrān

The third area was Azerbayjān. According to Muḥammad al-Ṣafwānī,\footnote{93} the agent there was al-Qāsim b. al-ʿAlā, who had held the post from the time of al-Hādī and who continued his activities from the province of Arrān\footnote{94} during the time of the twelfth Imam. The twelfth Imam remained in touch with al-Qāsim until the latter died during the time of the third saffīr, when his post was given to his son al-Ḥasan at the twelfth Imam’s order. Al-Ṣafwānī does not mention the name of the connecting link between the agent of this area and the centre of the organization. However, he states explicitly that al-Qāsim b. al-ʿAlā was in direct contact with the saffīr in Iraq through a messenger, who used to deal with him without revealing his name.\footnote{95}

6.4 The Fourth Area: Qumm and Dīnawar

It is well-known that Qumm was a traditional area for the Shiʿites, the bulk of whom were Arab\footnote{96} and that there were many endowments (awqāf) for the Imams in Qumm. Therefore, it probably received more attention from the first saffīr, who used to keep in direct contact not only with the agent of Qumm but also with the other agents in the province of Jabal. The prominent agent in Qumm was ʿAbd Allah b. Jaʿfar al-Ḥimyari\footnote{97}, who remained in this post during the time of the second saffīr.\footnote{98} Moreover, there were many sub-agents in numerous cities with a considerable Imamite population, such as Dīnawar, whose agent in 261-3/875-6 was Aḥmad b. Muḥammad al-Dīnawarī. The agent in Qurmisīn was Aḥmad al-Mādrāsī.\footnote{99}

6.5 The Fifth Area: Rayy and Khurasān

Al-Kashshī’s account of the situation of the organization during the time of the tenth and the eleventh Imams indicates that the latter had several agents in various cities in Khurasân and the eastern provinces, extending as far as the city of Kabul. Those agents, along with other sub-agents, used to carry out their missions according to the direct instruction of the Imam. For example, al-ʿAskari sent Ayyub b. al-Nab to Nisapur as his agent. However, the penetration of the movement into remote regions of the east, the rise of the Zaydite state in Ṭabaristān from 250/864, and the continual military activities of the Khawārij in Sijistān, which caused a great deal of trouble for Imamites, all helped make it difficult for al-ʿAskari to supervise directly the activities in each area. Therefore al-ʿAskari issued a letter ordering the activities of the agents in Bayhaq and Nisapur to be linked with those of the agents in Rayy so that the two former cities could only receive his instructions from the agent in Rayy, who was to take his orders directly from ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd in Sāmarrā. According to this letter al-ʿAskari appointed Ishāq b. Muḥammad as his agent in Nisapur, commanding him to pay the dues to Ibrāhīm b. ʿAbda, his agent in Bayhaq and its districts. The latter in turn was commanded to hand the dues to the agent of Rayy, Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar al-Rāzī or to the person appointed by al-Rāzī. At the end of his letter the Imam pointed out that all the khums and other taxes which were sent by his followers should be given to ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd, who would then hand them to him. Such a statement reveals that ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd was at the top of the organization before the death of al-ʿAskari in 260/874.

After the death of al-ʿAskari the first safīr followed the system of communication which had been practiced before. Several anecdotes reveal that he directed the activities of this area through the agent in Rayy, al-Rāzī, who in turn directly supervised the activities of the agents in Bayhaq, Nisapur, and perhaps Hamadān. There were many sub-agents of different ranks below the main agent in each city. Al-Najāshi reports a narration which elucidates this system. He mentions that al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad al-Hamadānī, Biṣṭām b. ʿAlī and ʿAzīz b. Zuhayr were sub-agents in one place in Hamadān and carried out their task under the instructions and commands of al-Ḥasan b. Hārūn b. ʿUmrān al-Hamadānī. Al-Najāshi does not explain how the latter used to contact the safīr. Al-Kulaynī, however, reports that Muḥammad b. Hārūn b. ʿUmrān al-Hamadānī, the brother of the agent of Hamadān, made his shops an endowment (waqf) to the twelfth Imam and wanted to hand them over to his agent, whose identity was unknown to him. Thereafter Muhammad
b. Ja'far al-Rāzī, the agent of Rayy, received an order to take these shops as waqf\textsuperscript{105} in his capacity as wakil for the whole of Iran. This narration reveals that there was a strong link between the agent of Rayy and the agent of Hamadān and that the latter was below al-Rāzī in the ranks of the organization.\textsuperscript{106} Since the agents in this area held different ranks within the organization, it is most likely that this system existed in the other areas of the organization as well.

7. The Death of the First Safīr

Despite the important role of the first safīr, 'Uthmān b. Saʿīd, no one gives the date of his death. Modern historians have tried to supply plausible dates. Hāshim al-Hasanī thinks that the deputyship (al-sifara) of 'Uthmān b. Saʿīd continued until the year 265/879,\textsuperscript{107} but he does not give any source for this information. In contrast Javad Alī states as follows:

"Twenty years after the withdrawal of the twelfth Imam, in the year 280/893, the first safīr died, according to a tawāqīt, said to have been addressed by the hidden Imam to the son of the first safīr and the Shi'ite congregation, in which after expressing sentiments of condolence on the death of such a pious man, the Imam appointed his son Abū Ja'far (Muḥammad) as his successor."\textsuperscript{108}

However, Javad Alī relied on al-Ṭūsī, who only indicates that the narrator, Muhammad b. Humām, heard the narration from Muhammad al-Rāzī in 280/893; he does not cite any date for the death of the first safīr.\textsuperscript{109} Furthermore, it seems that the first safīr did not remain in office for a long period, because al-Ṭūsī reports that when Muhammad b. 'Uthmān (Abū Ja'far) succeeded his father, a certain Ahmad b. Hīlāl al-Abārtaṭī, whose death occurred in 267/880-1,\textsuperscript{110} denied that Abū Ja'far was the safīr of the twelfth Imam after his father.\textsuperscript{111} Hence the death of the first safīr must have occurred after 260/874, the date of the death of the eleventh Imam, and before 267/880.

According to Ibn Barīna, 'Uthmān b. Saʿīd was buried on the western side of Baghdad in the Darb Mosque. This mosque takes its name from its position at Darb Jibla, an avenue in the Maydān
Al-Ṭūsī confirms Ibn Barīna's report when he states that he saw the grave in a place which he used to visit every month between the years 404/1013 and 433/1040.
CHAPTER V

THE UNDERGROUND ACTIVITIES OF THE SECOND SAFIR OF THE TWELFTH IMAM

1. The Designation of the Second Safir, Abū Ja'far

The second safir was Muhammad b. ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd al-ʿUmarī. His kunya was Abū Ja'far. He carried out his activities first as the agent of the twelfth Imam and then as his safir for about fifty years, having been the principal assistant of his father, the first safir, from the time of the eleventh Imam, al-ʿAskarī. According to al-Ṭūsī, when the first safir died, Abū Ja'far carried out the last rites for the dead man, washed the corpse, clad him in his shroud and buried him. For the Imamites, these are the unmistakable signs that Abū Ja'far was acting as the representative and the safir of the hidden Imam. According to them he did all this at the order of the first safir. Moreover he was promoted to the office of the sīfāra both by the designation of al-ʿAskarī and of the first safir, ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd, according to the order of the twelfth Imam.¹

After his father's death, Abū Ja'far received a letter of condolence attributed to the twelfth Imam, who offered his sympathy at his father's death and pointed out that he had been installed in his office.²

However, some of the principal agents of the organization had serious reservations and doubts about his designation, as did Muḥammad b. Nuṣayr, the leader of the extremist trend, the Ghulāt. So Abū Ja'far did not succeed to his office without encountering certain difficulties.

1.1 Ibn Hilāl

Ahmad b. Hilāl al-ʿAbartā'rī was one of those who denied the validity of Abū Ja'far's designation. He was born in the year 180/796 in ʿAbartā', a village in the district of Askāf near Nahrawān, and died in the year 267/880. It is clear from the numerous references to his name in the chain of transmissions (isnād) of the Imamite narrations that he was a well-known theologian who had narrated most of the Shi‘ite books of traditions (usūl). Beginning in 204/819 he had related several traditions indicating that the twelfth Imam would be al-Qā‘im, having first gone into occultation. Al-Kashshā’ī reports that he was a pious mystic and an eminent scholar, and some biographers respectfully mention the fact that he undertook fifty-four pilgrimages to Mecca, twenty of them on foot. According to a letter attributed to the twelfth Imam, Ibn Hilāl was one of the most important scholars in Iraq during the time of the first safīr and possessed an amount of money belonging to the Imam, which he refused to pay to the second safīr. The Imamite reports of his refusal to obey Abū Ja‘far’s instructions are confused and contradictory so it is rather difficult to discover the true state of affairs. According to al-Najāshī Ibn Hilāl had already been cursed by al-‘Askarī, who had spoken against him on several occasions. Sa‘d al-Qummi states that he abandoned Shi‘ism and embraced the naṣb doctrine, whereas al-Ṭūsī accused him of holding an extremist doctrine (ghulw).

It is clear that the different accusations made against him are attempts to define his beliefs rather than explanations of his dispute with the second safīr. Al-Ṭūsī mentions a report attributed to an agent called Muḥammad b. Humām, which states that Ibn Hilāl denied neither the existence of the twelfth Imam nor the validity of the office of the first safīr. When Ibn Hilāl was questioned about this by the Imamites, he replied that the Imam had personally installed the first safīr. ‘Uthmān b. Sa‘d, and made this known to all the faithful, but he had not done any such thing for Abū Ja‘far. Because of Ibn Hilāl’s attitude towards the second safīr he was expelled by the Imam in a letter distributed amongst the agents in Iraq which warned that the mystical practices of Ibn Hilāl grew from hypocrisy and dissimulation.

Despite the fact that the eminent agents of the organization already knew the cause of Ibn Hilāl’s excommunication, some of the Imamite narrators in Iraq who were not agents were astonished at the excommunication of such a pious mystic, and so they rejected the pronouncement. In fact the considerable support for Ibn Hilāl may have been brought about by the Iraqi narrators who did not know about the dispute between Abū Ja‘far and Ibn Hilāl concerning the siftāra. They asked the agent al-Qāsim b. al-‘Alā to inquire about the pronouncement against Ibn Hilāl, and he put this question in writing to the Imam via the second safīr. The Imam replied:

"Ibn Hilāl was an incorrigible sinner and Allah will not forgive his sins. He behaved like a stubborn and arrogant person. Moreover, he has kept for himself money given for the Imam and refused to carry out our commands unless they suit his wishes. However we kept our composure until Allah fulfilled our prayer by taking away his soul. Concerning his case, we had informed a few of our close associates (mawālī) during his time and ordered them to reveal it to the intimates among our adherents. . . There is no excuse for any of our followers to doubt the statements of our confidantes (ithuqātunā), because we reveal these statements to them."\(^{11}\)

This document shows clearly that Ibn Hilāl had died, but that in spite of the Imam’s strong criticism of him, the second safīr could not completely eliminate the danger he had stirred up for his office. Al-Kashshī reports that a group of people remained firm in their loyalty towards Ibn Hilāl and doubted the authenticity of the above pronouncement.\(^{12}\) In fact the loyalty of this body to Ibn Hilāl was mainly based not upon his inward spiritual faith, but upon his external and personal mystic acts. According to the Imamite doctrine, the worship of Allah is invalid without the recognition of and obedience to the Imams.\(^{13}\) Hence the mystic acts of Ibn Hilāl were invalid, because he refused to recognize the second safīr, who had been installed by the Imam himself.

According to al-Ṭūsī, the influence of Ibn Hilāl continued until the time of the third safīr, Ibn Rūḥ, who circulated another Tawqī’ on the authority of the Imam against Ibn Hilāl:\(^{14}\)

"Although there are those among the Imamites who do not understand how such a great and pious man could have been excommunicated, what is piety if it please Allah to transform good deeds into sins? Al-Dihqān\(^{15}\) was also a pious man in the service of the Imam, yet Allah eventually changed his faith into impiety because of his arrogance. This also happened to Ibn Hilāl."\(^{16}\)

In fact it is hard to attribute this Tawqī’ to the time of the third safīr, Ibn Rūḥ (305-326/917-937), because during that time there is no trace of the influence of Ibn Hilāl’s claim upon the Imamites. It is most likely that Ibn Rūḥ circulated this pronouncement against Ibn Hilāl on the order of the second safīr while he was still working as an agent.
beneath him, especially if one bears in mind that Ibn Hilāl died in 267/880, a long time before Ibn Rūḥ held the sifāra. It would appear that Ibn Hilāl’s challenge had vanished before the death of the second safīr in 305/917.

1.2 al-Bilālī

According to al-Ṭūsī, a second opponent to Abū Ja‘far’s claim to the sifāra was Abū Tāhir Muhammad b. ʿAlī b. Bilāl, who was commonly called al-Bilālī. He was well known in Imamite circles as a narrator of traditions. Furthermore he was amongst the principal agents in Baghdad and had close relations with both the tenth and the eleventh Imams. The latter described al-Bilālī to Ishāq b. Ibrāhīm al-Nisābūrī with this phrase: “He is reliable, trustworthy and is acquainted with what he must do.” Moreover, according to al-Kulaynī and al-Šadūq, al-ʿAskarī twice revealed to al-Bilālī the birth of his son, the twelfth Imam: firstly in 258/871 and then three days before his death.

However, al-Bilālī denied that Abū Ja‘far was the safīr and claimed that he himself was the agent of the Imam. He kept the money of the Imam in his own hands and refused to relinquish it to Abū Ja‘far. Al-Bilālī’s claim led to a serious split amongst the Imamites, since a considerable body of Imamites accepted his claim and followed him, such as his brother Abū al-Ṭayyib and Ibn Hirz. But al-Ṭūsī neither fixes the date of this split nor the duration of al-Bilālī’s claims.

It is most likely that al-Bilālī’s claim lasted only for a few years after the death of the first safīr, by which time Abū Ja‘far had proved himself to be the rightful safīr of the Imam. Al-Ṭūsī reports that Abū Ja‘far arranged a secret meeting between al-Bilālī and the twelfth Imam to prove to him that he was acting on his behalf. Abū Ja‘far took him to one of his houses where, it is said, they met the Imam, who ordered al-Bilālī to hand the money over to Abū Ja‘far. Al-Ṭūsī’s report reveals that al-Bilālī’s importance in the organization was such that Abū Ja‘far had to arrange this secret meeting with the Imam in Baghdad to put an end to the doubts raised by al-Bilālī, doubts which had led to a split among the agents. According to al-Ṭūsī, shortly after this meeting Abū Ja‘far went to al-Bilālī’s house, where his close supporters like Ibn Hirz and Abū al-Ṭayyib were assembled. Abū Ja‘far asked al-Bilālī, “O Abu Ṭāhir (al-Bilālī), I ask you by Allah, did the Ṣāḥib al-Zamān (the twelfth Imam), peace be upon him, not command you to hand the money (of the Imam) which you have over to me?” Al-Bilālī replied, “Yes.” Then Abū Ja’far left the house.²⁴

It is clear from this report that by these two steps Abū Ja’far managed to refute al-Bilālī’s claim. Al-Tūsī mentioned one person who abandoned his support of al-Bilālī and took Abū Ja’far’s side, and perhaps other supporters did likewise, because the existent sources do not refer to any trace of this split during the last years of the second safīr’s time in office, a fact which probably indicates that it had ended.

1.3 Muhammad b. Nuṣayr

A third rival to Abū Ja’far for the office of the sīfāra was Muhammad b. Nuṣayr, who was not an ordinary Imamite, but belonged to the extremists, (al-Ghulāt). It has been noted that some of the extremists, first during the time of the ninth Imam (such as Ja’far b. Wāqid, Abū al-Ghamr and Hāshim b. Abī Hāshim), then during the time of the tenth and eleventh Imams (such as ‘Alī b. Haska al-Ḥawwārī al-Qummī and his students al-Qāsim al-Sha rānī al-Yaqūnī, al-Ḥasan b. Muḥammad b. Bābā al-Qummī and Muḥammad b. Mūsā al-Sharīqī or al-Sharīrī), had claimed that they were the agents or the Gates (Abwāb) of the Imam and had collected money from the ordinary believers. They also preached extremist ideas aimed at abolishing the Islamic rites, that is, the prayer, fast, zakāt and pilgrimage.

According to al-Kashshī their roots lay in the extremist doctrines of Ibn Abī al-Khaṭṭāb,²⁵ the contemporary of the sixth Imam al-Ṣādiq. However, the presence of the Imams had limited the activities of the extremists, since the Imams used to have direct contacts with their followers and circulated open letters of excommunication against false agents. But the occultation of the twelfth Imam enabled the Ghulāt to extend their role as agents or Gates (Abwāb) at the expense of the safīr, since the safīr could not refute their claim by declaring publicly that he was the true Imam’s safīr, a declaration which might put his life and the Imam’s life in danger. For this reason, when al-‘Askārī died, Muḥammad b. Mūsā al-Sharīrī claimed – as has been noted – that he was the Gate (Bāb) of the Imam.

According to al-Tūsī, after the death of al-Sharīrī, Muḥammad b.
Nuṣayr al-Numayrī aspired to the office of the safīr. This shows that both men may have been representatives of a single trend. According to al-Kashshī, Ibn Nuṣayr had already claimed that he was the Bāb of the tenth Imam. Al-Ṭūsī’s account suggests that he had abandoned this claim during the lifetime of the eleventh Imam, al-‘Askarī. It seems that only after the death of the first safīr did he dispute the legality of Abū Ja’far as the safīr and claim that he was the Bāb of the twelfth Imam. Therefore Abū Ja’far cursed and excommunicated him. Having been excommunicated, Ibn Nuṣayr tried to make Abū Ja’far change his mind, but he did not even receive him, so the Imamites excluded him from their community.

Ibn Nuṣayr was encouraged in his claim by Muhammad b. Mūsā b. Furāt, who belonged to the well-known family of Banū Furāt. He was a well-known muhaddith in Kufa and Baghdad and seems to have been the first man from Banū Furāt to hold an important administrative office in the ‘Abbāsid government. With the support of Banū Furāt, Ibn Nuṣayr was able to circulate his claim amongst the Imamites, and, because of the participation of the two of them, their sect was known as “al-Numayriyya al-Furātiyya”. The vast majority of their followers who came from Madā’in, and were called al-Ishāqīyya after one of their leaders, Ishāq b. Muhammad al-Āḥmar.

It appears that Ibn Nuṣayr’s claims neither weakened Abū Ja’far’s position nor attracted any of his followers to Ibn Nuṣayr’s side, so the latter’s influence must have been limited mainly to the extremists. According to al-Nawbakhtī a certain Ahmad was supposed to have been designated as the successor of Ibn Nuṣayr, but a Nuṣayrī work refers to a certain Muhammad b. Jundab as Ibn Nuṣayr’s successor in the view of the majority of the Nuṣayriyya. It is said that he was in turn followed by Muhammad al-Junbulānī. But this occurred at a later stage after the death of the second safīr in 305/917, so it is beyond the topic of this section. However, it is worth mentioning that, from the time of second safīr onwards, the followers of Ibn Nuṣayr separated themselves totally from the direct control of the second safīr. Abū Ja’far, who in the Imamite view was the only representative of the hidden Imam. Moreover the Nuṣayriyya gave more importance to the role of the Bāb than to the Imam himself, which was proof enough to place them outside the circle of the Twelver Imamites.
2. The Activities of Abū Ja'far, the Second Safīr

2.1 The Career of Abū Ja'far

Despite the difficulties faced by Abū Ja'far because of the false agents Ibn Hilāl, al-Bilālī and Ibn Nuṣayr, he continued to direct the underground activities of the organization, extending its role amongst the Imamites. At the same time he followed in the first safīr's footsteps by trying to prove the existence of the concealed Imam to the reliable Imamites. He sought to circulate amongst them the idea that the Imam's occultation had taken place because of divine intervention, that it was a vindication of the traditions related by the previous Imams, and that he, Abū Ja'far, was the rightful safīr of the hidden Imam. Furthermore, he sought to make it possible to continue his duties without being harassed by his encouraging the belief of the authorities, originally fostered by the first safīr, that al-‘Askarī had died without leaving a successor. He hoped that the government would therefore relax, content in the belief that an uprising was unlikely, because the Imamites no longer had an Imam to rally and lead them.

The dual plan of Abū Ja’far as regards the existence of the hidden Imam can be seen in several narrations. At one time, a certain Ḥamdān al-Qalānsī asked Abū Ja'far about al-‘Askarī's successor. Abū Ja'far replied, “Al-‘Askarī has died, but he has left amongst you a successor whose neck is like this”, and he indicated the size of his neck as a sign that al-‘Askarī's son had attained maturity. According to al-Ṣadūq, Abū Ja'far made the same statement to the well-known scholar ‘Abd Allah b. Ja’far al-Ḥimyarī, when the latter asked him about al-‘Askarī's sons. Furthermore on another occasion Abū Ja'far informed him as follows:

“The Śāhib al-Amr (the Imam) attends the pilgrimage every year and sees the people and knows them, while they see him but do not recognise him.” He added that he had seen the Imam at al-Ka’ba holding its drapes and praying, “O Allah, avenge me against my enemies.”

However, despite the fact that Abū Ja'far revealed the existence of the twelfth Imam to al-Ḥimyarī, he warned him against trying to discover his name. The authorities were content that al-‘Askarī had died without leaving a successor, but if they were to come to know the name of the Imam and his whereabouts, they would search for him and endanger both his life and the life of his agents.
reports indicate that the second safīr instructed other agents similarly.

A careful study of the activities of the agents reveals that the second safīr managed in fact to keep the existence of the hidden Imam secret from the Abbāsids until the early years of the reign of al-Mu'taḍid (278-89/891-901). Perhaps this was due to the wise instructions issued to his agents by Abū Ja'far who, as a part of his prudent fear (Taqiyya), carried out his activities unnoticed and in secret. Like his father before him he disguised himself as a butter-seller and acquired the nickname al-Sammān.⁴⁰ He used pseudonyms in his underground meetings with some of his agents. According to al-Kashshī, Abū Ja'far's name was Muhammad b. Hafs al-'Umarī⁴¹, whereas his real name was Muḥammad b. Ṣadīq b. Sani'd, and it might be that the first name was a pseudonym. Furthermore a careful study of the chain of transmitters (asānīd) of the Prophetic traditions and the sayings of the Imams shows that there is no reference to his name as a narrator, whereas most of the Tawqī'āt (written and signed answers or pronouncements) attributed to the eleventh and twelfth Imams concerning legal matters came on the authority of Abū Ja'far⁴². This fact reveals that he did not wish to implicate himself in any open discussions of religious matters, so that he could hide his real position amongst the Imamites from the government and convey communications between the hidden Imam and his followers, free from the interference of the authorities.

2.2 The Agents of the Second Safīr in Baghdad

It has been noted that the first safīr had three agents in Baghdad, Aḥmad b. Ishāq, Muḥammad b. Aḥmad al-Qaṭṭān, and Ḥājīz al-Washshā'. It appears that the responsibilities of the second safīr, Abū Ja'far, were greater than that of the first, since according to al-Tūsī he had ten people beneath him in Baghdad to run the affairs of the organization. Amongst them was al-Ḥusayn b. Rūḥ al-Nawbakhtī, who later became the third safīr.⁴³ Al-Tūsī does not name the other agents, but it is most likely that the three agents of the first safīr were amongst them, since these three served the organization in Baghdad during the time of the second safīr, who had direct contact with them.⁴⁴

Al-Qaṭṭān was the most active amongst the agents in Baghdad.
According to al-Şadūq, he had seen the Imam. Al-Kashshī describes his reliability when he relates that, “After Abū Ja'far, there was no one on earth closer to the origin (the Imam) than he”, because he used to be the direct mediator between the Imam and the Imamites via the second safīr, although the Imamites had no knowledge whatsoever of his relationship with Abū Ja'far. Perhaps for this reason a certain agent called al-Hasan b. al-Faḍl, who used to deal with al-Qaṭṭān concerning legal affairs, thought that he was the safīr.

The available sources make it rather difficult to detect the names of the rest of the agents in Baghdad, particularly if one bears in mind the fact that Abū Ja'far continued in his office for about fifty years. It is therefore probable that some of the agents, like Ḥāmid b. Ishāq, al-Qaṭṭān and Ḥājiz, had died and been replaced by other agents. Ibn Rustam al-Tabarī reports that Ahmad b. Ishāq died in Hilwān on his way to Qumm, but he does not fix the date of his death. According to al-Ṣadīq, when Ḥājiz died his office was filled by Muhammad b. Ja'far al-Asādī al-Rāzī. Al-Qaṭṭān seems to have continued his activities after the years 279-282/891-894, when the government tried to arrest him after discovering the existence of the twelfth Imam. He also carried out his activities during al-Mu'tadid’s regime (279-289/891-901), but there is no reference to him after that period, which may indicate that he died around that date.

Al-Ṭūsī gives several accounts of the last will of the second safīr in 305/917 which includes the names of the eminent agents at that time. He reports:

"During Abū Ja’far’s last illness, the heads of the Shi'a congregated around him. Among them were Abū 'Ali b. Humām, Abū 'Abd Allah b. Muḥammad al-Kātib, Abū 'Abd Allah al-Baqtānī, Abū Sahl Ismā'īl b. 'Ali al-Nawbakhtī, Abū 'Abd Allah al-Wajnā, and other leaders. They asked him, "If something happens to you, who will succeed you?" He said to them, "This is Abū al-Qāsim al-Husayn b. Rūh b. Abī Bahr al-Nawbakhtī. He will be in charge of my office and will be the safīr between you and the Sahib al-Amr (the Imam), because he is his agent and is honest and trustworthy. So consult him in your matters, and depend on him in your needs, because I was ordered to announce this proclamation."

According to another narration Ibn Rūh and Ahmad b. Ja'far b. Matīl were amongst those who attended this meeting. The agents thought that, in the case of the death of the second saffir, either Ja`far b. Ahmad b. Matīl or his father would succeed him, because of their close relations with him.

These two reports disclose the names of the chief agents of Baghdad around the year 304-5/916-7 and the fact that the agents Ahmad b. Ishāq, Hājiz and al-Qattān, who had been in office in Baghdad from the time of the first saffir, had died, as has already been mentioned. Likewise they show that some of the other agents from the time of the first saffir were still living and had been promoted to high ranks, like al-Baqťānī and al-Wajnā.

2.3 The Relationship of the Second Saffir to the Agents in the other Provinces

Apart from his agents in Baghdad, Abū Ja`far had other agents in various provinces, who were mediators between the provincial Imamites and the twelfth Imam in legal inquiries and the collecting of the khums.

He had three principal agents in Iraq. His agent in Kufa was Ahmad b. Muhammad al-Zajawzī, whose family had controlled this office since the time of the first saffir and who was to hold this office during the time of the third saffir. According to al-Ṭūsī and al-Najashi, the twelfth Imam also had contacts in Kufa with two people from the family of Zurāra: Muhammad b. Sulaymān (237-300/851-912), and his uncle `Alī b. Sulaymān, who died around the year 313/925. It seems that they were in fact cooperating with al-Zajawzī and were working under his instruction in their areas. The family of Zūrāra had been well-known for their allegiance to the Imams from the time of their great-grandfather Zūrāra b. A`yun (d. 150/767), the companion of the Imams al-Bāqir and al-Ṣādiq. His grandson Sulaymān had been the agent of the tenth Imam, al-Hādi, both in Kufa and Baghdad. Furthermore, Ahmad, the son of Muhammad b. Sulaymān, worked during the time of the third saffir under Ahmad al-Zajawzī, which indicates the close relationship between the latter and the family of Zūrāra.

In al-ḥuwāz the deputyship of the Imam was still in the hands of Muhammad b. Ibrāhīm al-Mahzāyār. It is said that he received an order from the Imam to follow the instructions of the second saffir. According to al-Ṣaḥāq one member of this family, Muḥammad b. `Alī b. Mahzāyār, doubted the existence of the twelfth Imam. His case was raised with the Imam, who issued a letter in which he confirmed that Allah would remove his doubt and lead him to recover his faith.\footnote{61}

The second safir extended his activities to new areas. According to al-Ṣadūq his main agents in Wāṣīt were Muhammad b. ʿAbd Allah al-Ḥāʾirī and al-Ḥasan b. Muḥammad b. Qaṭāt al-Ṣaydalānī. The latter was the Imam’s agent for endowments (wakīl al-waqf) in Wāṣīt, and was contacted by the safir through Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad b. Muḥammad.\footnote{62} Al-Mawṣil was another area in which the second safir gained partisans, and al-Tusi mentions a certain Muḥammad b. al-Faḍl al-Mawṣilī, who had accepted Abu Jaʿfar as the safir of the Imam.\footnote{63} Abu Jaʿfar himself succeeded in attracting some influential people to his side in that area. Al-Irbilī reports that al-Husayn b. Ḥamdān (from the famous ruling family, the Ḥamdānīs) became the governor of Qumm in 296/908. After he had been dismissed from his office, he contacted the second safir in Baghdad. He paid him the khums on all the money he had earned while in office as a sign of his obedience to the twelfth Imam. As a result of his belief, the rest of his family also converted to the Imamite doctrine.\footnote{64}

In Sāmarrā the agent was Abū al-Qāsim al-Ḥasan b. Aḥmad. According to al-Ṣadūq, he had direct contact with both the second safir and the Imam.\footnote{65} Meanwhile all the affairs of the Imamites’ institutions in Iran were controlled by the agent of Rayy, Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad al-Asadī al-Rāzī. He had direct contact with the second safir and previously he had been answerable only to the first safir. The other agents of the Iranian provinces were instructed to pay the legal taxes to him. He continued in this office until his death in 312/924.\footnote{66} According to al-Tūsī, at this time al-Qāsim b. al-ʿAlā was the agent of the second safir in Azerbaijan. He continued in his office until the time of the third safir, Ibn Rūḥ.\footnote{67}

The second safir carried out extensive secret activities with his agents, whom he used to meet in various districts of Baghdad. During the period of the caliph al-Muʿtadid (279-289/892-901) the agents from the remote provinces like Qumm used to contact the second safir and convey money and goods to him through traders who had no knowledge of the relationship between those who sent the goods and Abū Jaʿfar as the second safir. On the contrary they brought these goods from Qumm to Abū Jaʿfar thinking that he was involved with the traders only commercially.\footnote{68}
In his relations with his agents Abū Ja'far was careful to leave no trace which the authorities could use against him and which would jeopardise both his own life and that of the Imam. Al-Ṣadūq reports a secret meeting between Abū Ja'far and Ibn Matīl, one of the ten agents in Baghdad. Abū Ja'far took Ibn Matīl to a ruin in al-’Abbāsiyya in Baghdad, where he read a letter written to him by the twelfth Imam and then tore it to pieces. To evade any government spies Abū Ja'far also did not implicate himself in any direct contact with agents from remote provinces. He used to order any person who brought letters or money to put them in a certain place, and he would give him no receipt.

Another narration indicates that the second safīr had established a complicated system of communications between himself and the agents in the Imamite areas. There seems to have been a secret code reserved for the safīr and his agents, while the messengers were sometimes ignorant of both the contents of their messages and the code. For example, Abū Ja'far once sent messages to Sāmarrā with one of his reliable partisans, but the messenger inserted a letter amongst the other messages without the safīr’s knowledge. In Sāmarrā he received answers to all the letters except his own.

The second safīr sometimes dealt directly with certain agents with whom he had previously communicated indirectly. The career of Muhammad b. ʿAli al-Aswād is a good example of such a case. According to al-Ṣadūq, al-Aswād used to bring the legal taxes for the Imam to Abū Ja'far, who commanded him to hand them over to the well-known scholar al-ʿAbbās b. Maʿrūf al-Qummī, and did not offer him any receipt. However, we later find al-Aswād dealing directly with the second safīr and the third safīr, who both received in person the money which al-Aswād had collected from the Imamites.

3. The Effect of the Shīʿite Revolutionary Activities upon the ʿAbbāsids’ Attitude towards the twelfth Imam

3.1 The events of the second safīr’s career suggest that he instructed his agents to avoid any act which might lead the government of the day to think that the Imamites still had political aspirations or that they had an Imam leading them secretly. Despite the fact that he directed the Imamites to maintain this policy, the political activities of the other Shiʿite groups, particularly the Zaydites, the Qarāmiṭa and the Ismāʿīlīs, complicated the Imamites’ relations with the `Abbāsids and made it difficult for them to keep the existence of the twelfth Imam totally concealed from their opponents. When the Zanj revolution (255-270/866-883) was taking place the situation of the Imamites was critical. The leader of that revolution, `Alî b. Muhammad, traced his lineage to the brother of Imam al-Bāqir, Zayd b. `Alî. For this reason a considerable group of `Alids joined his side and participated in his uprising from the year 257/871.\textsuperscript{76} In spite of the fact that the eleventh Imam, al-`Askarī, had openly announced that the leader of the Zanj was not a member of the People of the House (Ahl al-Bayt),\textsuperscript{77} the authorities considered this revolution to be linked with the `Alids. According to al-Ṭabarī, the collapse of the Zanj revolt in 270/883 was followed by governmental propaganda against the `Alids in general. This attitude can be discerned in the poem of Yahyā b. Muḥammad al-Aslamī, who praised the `Abbāsid leader al-Muwaffaq in 270/883 with this verse:

\begin{quote}

وَيَتَّلَى كِتَابُ اللَّهِ فِي كُلِّ مسَجِد وَيَتْلُى دَعَاهُ الْطَّالِبِينَ خَاصَّةً

\end{quote}

And the Book of Allah is recited in every mosque, and the Ṭāliḥīyyīn invite people to their cause in vain.\textsuperscript{78}

It is most likely that the `Abbāsid antagonism towards extreme Shi`ite groups extended also to the Imamites. According to al-Ṭūsī, the Imamites were too frightened to express their doctrine openly between the years 270-273/883-887.\textsuperscript{79}

Another factor which strained relations between the Imamites and the `Abbāsids was the discovery of the underground activities of the two Ismā`īlī parties, the original Ismā`īlīs and the Qarāmīṭa.\textsuperscript{80} Like the Imamites, the Ismā`īlīs had reported the Prophetic traditions stating that \textit{al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī} would go into occultation as a preparatory action for his rising.\textsuperscript{81} However, they interpreted some of these traditions in a manner which would support their struggle to gain immediate success in North Africa (al-Maghrib). Thus they understood the tradition which states that \textit{al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī} will appear when the sun rises from the place of its setting to mean that the \textit{Qāʾim} would rise in the west (al-Maghrib).\textsuperscript{82} Furthermore they applied other traditions narrated by the Imamites about \textit{al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī} to their own concealed leader, who had organized his followers into a strong underground movement and had commanded them to extend their activities into new areas by military means to prepare for his rising as al-Qā'im al-Mahdī. According to Sād al-Ash'arī the number of the Qaramita increased in the villages around Kufa, and according to al-Nawbakhti, they gained about 100,000 partisans there. Afterwards they expanded their propaganda on the western shores of the Gulf and Yemen, where a large number of Arabs accepted their cause, thus helping them to become powerful. As a result of all this they announced their rebellion, which according to al-Tabari occurred in the suburbs of Kufa in 278/891.

In the occultation of the twelfth Imam the Isma'īlis seem to have found a good opportunity to use the Imamite masses in their political struggle. According to Ibn al-Athir, the Qaramita missionary Yahya b. al-Mahdi went to Bahrain, which had a large Shi'ite population. In 281/894 he contacted an eminent Shi'ite leader, 'Ali b. al-Mu'alla b. Ḥamdān, and informed him that he had been sent by al-Mahdi to inform his followers that his rising was at hand. 'Ali b. al-Mu'alla was satisfied with the message and revealed it to the Shi'ites in the town of Qatif and other villages of Bahrain. They in turn accepted it and promised that they too would support al-Mahdi if he rose. By such means the Qaramita succeeded in circulating their propaganda among the Arab tribe of Qays and began to collect the khums. By using the same methods, they expanded their activities among the tribes of Asad, Tayy and Tamim in the Sawad; while in the desert of the Samawa, the tribe of Banu al-Ulaysh, which used to protect the trade route between Kufa and Damascus, also joined their side.

It is worth mentioning that the Qaramita took into consideration the sectarian beliefs and economic situation of the people with whom they worked. Therefore we find that their propaganda spread mainly among people who already had Shi'ite inclinations, such as the Qarmatyyun, who had participated in the Zanj revolt, and also among the people of the Sawad, who wished to join the side of any rebel in order to improve their social and economic conditions.

There is evidence that the Qaramita permitted their followers to kill their opponents and confiscate their property. The Imamites seem to have been aware of the danger of such a principle, since the 'Abbasid government might accuse them of holding the same principle and it could be easy for it to attack them under this pretext. Since both the Qaramita and the Imamites were Shi'ites and lived in the same areas, practicing the same religious rites, expecting the rise of al-Qā'im al-Mahdī in the near future, it was difficult for the government to differentiate between them without extensive and careful investigation.

3.2 The twelfth Imam wanted to protect his followers from the influence of the Qarāmiṭa and make the government of the day differentiate between the Qarāmiṭa and his own adherents. Perhaps this is why he is said to have sent a letter to his second safīr, in which he denounced and cursed Muhammad b. Abī Zaynab and his followers (the Qarāmiṭa). He declared that he had no relations with them and ordered his followers neither to have any discussion with them nor to attend their gatherings. The second safīr circulated the pronouncement of the Imam among the Imamites via his agent Ishāq b. Yaʿqūb.92 It seems most likely that the Imamites obeyed the instructions in the pronouncement. According to Ibn al-Athīr, a group of people from Kufa revealed to the Abbāsid authorities the underground activities of the Qarāmiṭa in their area and informed them that they were inventing rules contrary to Islamic law, according to which it was permissible to murder any Muslim other than those who paid them an oath of allegiance.

Ibn al-Athīr also reports that later a group of Tālibiyūn fought beside the government against the Qarāmiṭa in Kufa.93 It is plausible that in both of these instances these groups were Imamites, and that these steps were part of their plan to make the Abbāsids realize in a practical way that they were not responsible for the Qarāmiṭa’s activities.

However, there is evidence that the Abbāsids paid no attention to the Imamite claims.94 The period of al-Muʿtaḍid (279-289/892-901) was distinguished as one of oppression and pursuit for the Imamites. It was well known among the Sunnī scholars like al-Ashʿarī that the Imamites had achieved a consensus in respect of the prohibition of any militant revolution unless the Imam himself appeared and ordered them to such action.95 But the propaganda of the Qarāmiṭa concerning the rise of al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī seems to have encouraged the government to link their activities with the occultation of the twelfth Imam and to consider them as a preparation for his rising. They were certainly encouraged in this direction by the fact that the cousin of the twelfth Imam, Muḥsin b. Jaʿfar b. ʿAlī al-Hādī involved himself in the Qarāmiṭa’s rebellion in Damascus.96
This critical situation gave the opponents of the Imamites a vital weapon, which the viziers used not only against the Imamites but also against their own colleagues who were anti-Shīʿite. In 278/891 the caliph, al-Muʿtāmid, ordered the arrest of a member of the Imamite family Banu Furat who had held the office of Dīwān al-Sawād. The family members hid themselves, but Abū Ḥamad b. Muḥammad b. Furāt was still arrested. In the same time al-Muʿtāmid appointed ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān, who was well-known for his anti-ʿAlid attitude, to the office of the wizāra. If one can link the uprising of the Qarāmīta in 278/891 with these two steps — taking into account the attitude of ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān — one can claim that ʿUbayd Allah’s appointment was part of the precautions taken by the ʿAbbāsids against Shīʿite activities in general.

Afterward, al-Muʿtāmid carried out a careful investigation of Shīʿite underground cells in general. In 282/895 he discovered that Muḥammad b. Zayyad, the head of the Zaydite state in Tabaristān, was sending 32,000 dinars every year to Muḥammad b. Ward al-ʿAtṭār so that he could distribute the money among the ʿAlids in Baghdad, Kuḥfa, Mecca and Medina. The continual investigations of al-Muʿtāmid caused the arrest and murder of many ʿAlids; according to al-Iṣfahānī they were not Qarāmīta, but were simply persecuted under that pretext.

As a result of these measures, the authorities realized that the Imamites had their own organization. According to al-Kulaynī the spies of the vizier ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān discovered that the Imamites still had an Imam who guided their activities secretly. Al-Kulaynī reports:

"Al-Husayn b. al-Ḥasan al-ʿAlawi said that two intimates of Baḥr Ḥasanī (the servant of the caliph) were talking and one of them said, 'Why, he (the twelfth Imam) is collecting money and has agents, wukalā'. Afterwards they named all the agents in all the districts. Then they reported this information to the vizier ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān, who endeavoured to arrest them. But the caliph (al-Muʿtāmid) told him to search for the place of this man (the Imam), because this matter was important. ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān said, 'Let us arrest the agents.' But the caliph said, 'No, but infiltrate among them some spies who are unknown (in their service to the government), and ask them to give money to the agents. Then arrest anyone who accepts the money.'
Al-Kulaynī does not mention the date of this incident, but we know that ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān continued in the service to the caliph al-Muʿtadid until the year 288/900, so this incident must have taken place between the years 282-288/895-900.

It is clear from this report that the ʿAbbāsid spies had reached the conclusion that the eleventh Imam al-ʿAskari had in fact left a successor, who directed the underground activities of his agents; but they were unsure of his place of residence. So they tried to arrest some of his agents and partisans, hoping that by interrogating them they might also arrest the twelfth Imam. For this reason, the caliph ordered that spies be sent with money to infiltrate amongst the agents. However, it seems that the safīr's network was so strong and worked so efficiently that his agents from near and far knew at once that the caliph and his vizier planned to act against them. Before the plan to arrest the agents of the Imam could be executed an order to stop the collection of taxes had gone out to almost every agent. When a spy infiltrated as far as the main agent in Baghdad, Muḥammad al-Qaṭṭān, and informed him that he had money and wanted to send it to the Imam, al-Qaṭṭān pretended that he knew nothing about this matter. The other agents acted similarly. It appears that the caliph failed to obtain any information from his spies. Therefore he decided to try to gather information by arresting the Imamites who came to visit the tomb of al-Ḥir, where al-Ḥusayn was buried, and the tombs of Quraysh, where the seventh and the ninth Imams were buried. However, according to the Imamite sources, this plan was revealed to the Imamites, and an order was sent out to both the families of Banū Furāt and al-Barsiyyīn, warning them not to visit the tombs of Quraysh in Baghdad.

According to al-Rāwandī, a report came to the caliph revealing that the twelfth Imam was staying in the house of his father in Sāmarrā. The caliph did not want knowledge of his information to reach the hands of the Imamites, so he himself dispatched three of his personal soldiers to Sāmarrā. He described the house of al-ʿAskari to them and commanded them to enter it and kill whomever they found inside, but he did not reveal to them the name of the person whom they were going to murder. However, the twelfth Imam managed to evade the soldiers, and they returned to the capital.

The hostile ʿAbbāsid attitude towards the agents of the second safīr continued after ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān's death in 288/900. His office was given to his son al-Qāsim. The latter was well-known in his hatred toward the Imamites and the Shi'ites in general. Throughout his service in office he followed the same policies of his father towards the Imamites and showed more malevolence. Al-Tusi gives a report supporting this point: Muhammad b. 'Abd Allah of Qumm, who had seen the Imam and had obvious Imamite inclinations, attracted the attention of the vizier al-Qasim b. 'Ubayd Allah. On several occasions he tried to murder him, so he finally fled to Egypt. According to Ibn al-Jawzi, al-Qasim arrested many, innocent 'Alids on the pretext that they had Qarmatian inclinations, and they remained in jail until 291/903.
The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

The continual campaigns of arrest carried out by the 'Abbasids and the ill-effects of the Qaramiya uprisings made the Imam and his agents even more careful. According to Abu Sahil al-Nawbakhti the correspondence between the Imam and the safir stopped about this time, probably in order to erase any traces which might lead the authorities to them. As another precautionary measure from the reign of al-Mu'tadid onwards the Imam changed his place of residence several times. Reports mentioned by al-Tusi indicate that, in an unspecified year, a certain agent told Abu Sawra that he was going to the Maghrib to meet the Imam. Someone else saw him in Syria and another met him in Egypt. Yet another report states that the Imam was resident in the mountains near Mecca about the year 293/905. According to the second safir, the Imam used to perform the pilgrimage every year. All these narrations would seem to indicate that the Imam did not stay in one place for more than a short time, perhaps fearing that the authorities would discover his identity and plot against his life.

3.3 The Qaramiya's use of the Prophetic traditions predicting the rise of al-Qa'im al-Mahdi in their struggle to gain immediate political success may have made the Imamites give greater emphasis to the physical signs which would precede the rise of al-Qa'im as mentioned in the Prophetic traditions and the statements of the Imams. Al-Kulayni, who was a contemporary to the second safir, and his student al-Nu'man narrate, as has been mentioned before, five signs which must precede the rise of the real al-Qa'im al-Mahdi: (1) al-Sufyani will rise in Syria and dominate it for only nine months. (2) At the same time a rebel called al-Yamani (al-Qahtani) will start a rebellion and advance towards Mecca. (3) Afterwards the pure soul, a descendant of al-Hasan, will revolt in Medina. Its inhabitants will kill him and send his head to al-Ṣufyānī. (4) He will dispatch an army against Medina, but God will cause it to sink into the ground in the vicinity of the city. (5) Thereupon in the morning an outcry in the sky will announce the full name of al-Qāʾīm al-Mahdī, who accordingly will rise in Mecca. These events will take place consecutively within one year.\textsuperscript{114}

It is clear from the Imamite presentation of these signs that they considered them a refutation of the claims of the Ismāʿīlī leader who called himself al-Mahdī after his rising in 296/908.\textsuperscript{115} The emphasis which was given to these signs served to prevent the ordinary Imamites from involving themselves in Shiʿīte activities with which the Imamite organization (al-Wikāla) was not involved. This view is confirmed by the fact that around this period many traditions were being related and attributed to the previous Imams warning the Imamites not to participate in any revolution before the rise of al-Qāʾīm.\textsuperscript{116}

The circulation of these traditions led people to feel that they should live peaceably and not involve themselves in any activities which might lead to revolution. This conclusion along with the five signs of the rise of al-Qāʾīm, encouraged some Imamites to put forward the idea that the establishment of the state of the People of the House (Ahl al-Bayt) is the responsibility of al-Qāʾīm himself and that any militant decision must be delayed until the rise of al-Qāʾīm. In fact these traditions were intended as warnings against taking part in militant activities led by false claimants. But because of the way people interpreted them, very little attention was given to the traditions which encouraged the people to prepare for the rise of the twelfth Imam after his occultation. It is reported that the tenth Imam said, “If your Imam goes into occultation, expect freedom from grief (to come from) beneath your feet.”\textsuperscript{117} It is clear that the above statement of al-Hādī meant that it is the responsibility of every follower of the hidden Imam to prepare for the rise of their Imam by their own efforts.

It is most likely that this quiescent approach was encouraged by the Imamite scholars, whose role increased during the time of the second safīr.\textsuperscript{118} These people trained the ordinary Imamites to follow the instructions of the narrators during the occultation of the Imam. They were aided in achieving this aim by a statement attributed to the twelfth Imam: “Concerning the occurrences which will happen, consult the narrators of our traditions, because they are my proof towards you, and I am the Proof of Allah."

It appears that by such methods the Imamite narrators were able to prevent the Imamite masses from taking part in the militant activities of the Qarāmiṭa.
However, this quiescent attitude, which was only a precautionary measure taken against the Ismā'īlīs, developed later into the fundamental approach towards the question of the rise of al-Qā'īm.

4. The Death of Abū Ja'far

It is reported that the second safīr prophesied the time of his death and prepared his own gravestone upon which Qur'anic verses and the names of the Imams were inscribed. He died in 305/917 and was buried in his house on the road leading to Kufa, on the western side of Baghdad.

118
CHAPTER VI

THE CAREER OF THE
THIRD SAFĪR, AL-NAWBAKHĪTI

1. Al-Nawbakhti’s Activities During the Time of the Second Safīr

The third safīr was Abū al-Qāsim al-Ḥusayn b. Rūh b. Abī Bahr al-Nawbakhtī. He remained in the office in the years 305-326/917-937, although the date of his birth is not known. According to Ibn Shahr Āshūb, al-Nawbakhtī was a close associate of the eleventh Imam, al-ʿAskarī, and was his Gate (Bāb), but it is difficult to accept such a report because al-ʿAskarī died in 260/874 and al-Nawbakhtī died in 326/937.

There are several reports indicating that al-Nawbakhtī was a native of the traditional Shīʿite city of Qumm. Al-Kashshi and Yahyā b. Abī Ṭayy (d. 630/1232) called him al-Qummī. Moreover al-Nawbakhtī was fluent in the Persian dialect of the people of Ābah, one of the suburbs of Qumm, and this suggests that he belonged to the branch of Banū Nawbakht resident in Qumm. However, he had emigrated to Baghdad during the time of the first safīr. According to al-Ṭūsī, he was brought up in Baghdad under the guardianship of Muḥammad b. ʿAlī Bilāl, who later denied that Abū Jaʿfar al-ʿUmarī was the second safīr of the twelfth Imam. Al-Nawbakhtī joined the service of the second safīr and became his agent (wakīl). Despite his youth al-Nawbakhtī was distinguished by his shrewdness, particularly in his relations with opponents. Perhaps it was this quality which enabled him to climb quickly in the ranks of the organization.

Al-Nawbakhtī spent several years working as an agent for the second safīr, who used to pay him a salary of 30 dinars a month. He also received financial support from high Shīʿite officials and viziers like Banū Furāt. The second safīr employed him to look after his properties and made him the connecting link between himself and the other leaders of the Imamites. According to al-Ṭūsī, al-Nawbakhtī was the intermediary between the second safīr and the two agents of Kufa, al-Zajawzī and Abū Ghālib al-Zurārī. His service in the Wikāla helped him in contacting high Shi‘ite officials of the Abbāsid administration, particularly his relatives Banū Nawbakht and also Banū Furāt. By the year 298/910 he had become highly respected by the people. At that time an interesting occurrence took place which reveals his importance. Al-Ṣadūq narrates that an ‘Alid called al-‘Aqiqī went to visit the vizier ‘Alī b. APSHOTTAH asking him to solve his financial problems, but the vizier would not listen to him. Therefore al-Nawbakhtī sent a message to al-‘Aqiqī and solved his difficulties. This narration gives some indication of the social position of al-Nawbakhtī while he was still an agent of the second safīr.

2. The Installation of the Third Safīr

As we have already seen, (106-7) the ten eminent agents in Baghdad expected that Ja‘far b. Ahmad b. Matīl would take over the office of the second safīr when he died. But on his death bed, when the agents were all gathered together, he appointed Ibn Rūḥ al-Nawbakhtī, saying that the twelfth Imam had ordered him to do so.

At that time the Imamites put forward different reasons for the designation of Ibn Rūḥ al-Nawbakhtī. Umm Kulthūm, the daughter of the second safīr, thought that Ibn Rūḥ was promoted to the office of the deputyship (ṣifāra) because of his close relationship with her father. She reports that her father even used to reveal to him what had occurred between himself and his slave-girls. However, according to the agent Ibn Qurd, the other nine agents in Baghdad, especially Ibn Matīl, were closer to the second safīr than Ibn Rūḥ. It seems most likely that Ibn Rūḥ had personal qualifications which made him a suitable safīr. Indeed we have a report attributed to Abū Sahl al-Nawbakhtī to support this point. The latter was asked by some Imamites as to why he had not been promoted to the sifara instead of Ibn Rūḥ. He answered,

“They (the Imams) know best about whom they have selected for this office. I am a person who meets opponents and argues with them. If I had known what Abū al-Qāsim (Ibn Rūḥ) knows about the Imam, perhaps in the course of my arguments, having found myself under the attack of enemies to give them well-founded reasons for the existence of the concealed Imam, I would have pointed out his whereabouts. But if Abū al-Qāsim had the Imam underneath his garments, and if his flesh was being cut into pieces to make him reveal his whereabouts, he would not yield or reveal his presence to his foes."

This document indicates that Ibn Rūh was promoted to the sifāra mainly because of his loyalty and the shrewdness which he had shown on several occasions. Therefore we cannot accept the opinion of Sachedina, who thinks that the appointment of Ibn Rūh as sāfīr to the twelfth Imam, "must have been influenced by another eminent member of the Nawbakht family, namely Abū Sahīl Ismā'īl b. ʿAlī. He was one of those leading Imamites, who were present in the last days of the second agent to bear witness to the designation of Abū al-Qāsim as the agent."

In fact, there are also many points to encourage us to disagree with Sachedina’s opinion. First, the installation of all the twelve Imams in the office of the Imamate from Imam ʿAlī b. Abī Ṭālib until the time of the twelfth Imam, had been carried out neither by the interference of their followers nor by election. As has been demonstrated repeatedly throughout this work the fact is that the promotion of each new Imam occurred according to the personal stipulation (al-Ta yīn bi-l-Naṣṣ) of the preceding Imam in his last will. Moreover the installation of the first and second sāfīrs had followed the same method. They were promoted to the office of the Wikāla by the order of the Imam and there is no evidence to prove that Ibn Rūh was not similarly appointed. Second; none of the ten eminent agents, who were present at that meeting, expected to participate by election, nomination or other means in the appointment of Abū Ja'far’s successor. On the contrary, they attended the meeting so as to know who would be stipulated as the third sāfīr by the order of the Imam himself. Third, the second sāfīr had ordered his personal servant, Dḥakā, that in the case of his death, he should hand his staff and the treasure chest over to Ibn Rūh. ¹⁵ Fourth, if we take into consideration the fact that the rest of the ten agents recognised the promotion of Ibn Rūḥ, especially Ibn Matīl, who was expected to be the third sāfīr, ¹⁶ and the fact that al-Shalmaghānī, even after his own aspiration to the office of the Sīfāra recognised Ibn Rūḥ as the sāfīr, ¹⁷ it is clear that

121
Ibn Rūh must in fact have been appointed by the Imam himself and neither Abū Sahl al-Nawbakhtī nor his family did influence the Imam’s decision.

3. The Activities of Ibn Rūh al-Nawbakhtī

According to al-Dhahabī, after the death of the second safīr in 305/917, his successor Ibn Rūh went to the headquarters (Dār al-Niyāba) of the organization, where he met the eminent Imamites such as the servant of the second safīr, Dhakā. The latter prepared the things which his master had entrusted to him, that is, the staff and the treasure chest containing the seals of the Imams, and handed them over to Ibn Rūh as he had been instructed. Thereafter Ibn Rūh together with the other agents went to the house of Muḥammad b. ʿAlī al-Shalmaghānī, his close associate who later became his rival.

From the very beginning, Ibn Rūh proved his ability to lead the organization successfully. His shrewdness enabled him to avoid the consequences of participation in the sectarian discussions which took place at the palace of Ibn Yasār, one of the high officials of al-Muqtadir, the caliph. He used to attend those discussions only as a listener. According to al-Tusi, Ibn Rūh was so cautious that he even discharged his servant because he had cursed Muʿāwiya. Perhaps he took this step to avoid the danger posed by the vizier, Ḥāmid b. al-ʿAbbās (306-311/918-923), who was well-known for his hatred of Shiʿites generally.

There is evidence that the ten agents of the second safīr continued their activities under al-Nawbakhtī. Among these agents were Jaʿfar b. Aḥmad b. Maṭūl, Abū Abd Allah al-Kāṭib, al-Ḥasan al-Wajnāʾ, Muḥammad b. Humām, ʿIsā b. Ishāq al-Nawbakhtī, Aḥmad b. Maṭūl, Muḥammad al-Aswad, and al-Madāʾinī. Two other names also appear in the lists of the agents in Baghdad: al-Shalmaghānī and Aḥmad b. Ibrāḥīm al-Nawbakhtī. The latter was a narrator of traditions and the husband of Umm Kulthūm, the daughter of the second safīr, and Ibn Rūh employed him as his personal secretary. The former was appointed as an agent by Ibn Rūh after he had become the safīr.

Through his ten agents in Baghdad Ibn Rūh directed the activities of the Imamite agents and their underground political cells in the other provinces. He sent his first letter of instructions to the agent of al-Ahwāz, Muḥammad b. Nafīṣ, on 5th Shawwāl 305/23rd November 917, in which he confirmed him in his office. He appointed his agent al-Shalmaghānī to supervise the underground Imamite cells among the people of Banū Bistām in Baghdad and made him the mediator between himself and the agents of Kufa, Abū Ja'far al-Zajawzī and Aḥmad b. Muhammad b. Sulaymān al-Zurārī. Al-Shalmaghānī continued his supervision of the agents of Kufa and Baghdad until the year 312/923, when Ibn Rūḥ discharged him from his office and excommunicated him after he had taught the incarnation of God in human form.

According to al-Tūsī, Abū ‘Abd Allah al-Ḥasan al-Wajnā, one of the ten agents in Baghdad, practised his activities in Nisibin and Mosul. In 307/919 he met a certain individual called Muhammad b. al-Faḍl al-Mawṣili who denied that Ibn Rūḥ was the safīr of the twelfth Imam. He tried to convince him that Ibn Rūḥ was truly appointed as safīr by the Imam, but al-Mawṣili argued that, if Ibn Rūḥ was so, he must show miracles as the first and the second safīrs did before. In order to content him, al-Ḥasan al-Wajnā brought him to Baghdad, where he saw with his own eyes Ibn Rūḥ’s miracles which prompted him to recognize him as the rightful safīr.

This report reveals that al-Ḥasan al-Wajnā was appointed by the third safīr to direct the Imamites’ activities in the province of Jazīra. In Wāsiṭ, al-Ḥasan b. Muhammad b. Qatāt al-Saydalānī, the Wakīl al-Waqf during the time of the second safīr, and Ibn Matīl, who had worked as the connecting link between al-Saydalānī and the second safīr, continued their activities during the time of Ibn Rūḥ.

As has already been noted, some reports reveal that because of the persecution of the Imamites which had been carried out by the caliphs al-Mu'taḍid (279-89/892-902) and al-Muktafi (289-95/902-8) and their attempts to arrest the Imam, he changed his place of residence from Sāmarrā to the Hijaz. This situation naturally led to difficulties as regards the methods of communication between him and his agents. Furthermore information concerning the relations between the third safīr and his agents in the other provinces is rare and obscure. However, there is evidence that the Imam continued to practise his activities from Mecca. Al-Tūsī relates that a certain Yaḥb b. Yūsuf al-Ghassānī saw a group of men from different provinces come to the house where the Imam lived and correspond with them through an old serving woman. Some of those men were from Baghdad. Al-Ṣadūq reports that the agent al-Ḥasan al-Wajnā met the Imam at the same house in 314/926, which indicates that the residence of the Imam was in the Hijaz during the time of the third safīr. But there is no available reference to the names of the agents in Mecca and Medina.

The Imam also had agents in Egypt who recognized the sifāra of Ibn Rūḥ. According to al-Ṭūsī, al-Qāsim b. al-ʿAlā was still the agent in Azerbaijan. He directed the Imamite activities through two assistants, that is Abu Ḥāmid ʿUmrān b. al-Mufallās and Abū ʿAlī b. Jaḥdar, and also used to look after the personal domain which the eleventh Imam, al-ʿAskari, had endowed to the twelfth Imam. Correspondence between al-Qāsim b. al-ʿAlā and Ibn Rūḥ took place through a messenger who used to come to Azerbaijan. After the death of al-Qāsim his son al-Ḥasan was promoted to the office by the order of the Imam.

In Iran, Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar al-Asadī al-Rāẓī, the agent of Rayy, had been instructed by the second safīr to supervise the activities of the agents of the other Iranian provinces. He continued this supervision during the time of the third safīr. But after the death of al-Rāẓī in 312/924, the method of communication between the agents in Iran and Ibn Rūḥ changed from indirect correspondence via al-Rāẓī to direct contact between Ibn Rūḥ and the agents. Al-Ṣadūq reports several narratives in support of this point. For example, ʿAlī b. al-Husayn b. Bābawayh, the leader of the Imamites in Qumm, made direct contact with the third safīr via the agent in Baghdad, al-Aswad. An agent from Balkh, Muhammad b. al-Ḥasan al-Sayrafi, did likewise. He collected the tax dues (gold and silver) from the Imamites of Balkh and handed them over to Ibn Rūḥ in Baghdad, and he continued his direct contact even during the time of the fourth safīr, al-Sammārī. In the same way al-Husayn b. ʿAlī al-Qummi received ten gold ingots from Ibn Jāwshir, who asked him to hand them over to Ibn Rūḥ, so he did so. These reports indicate that the position of Ibn Rūḥ as the safīr of the twelfth Imam became well-known amongst the Imamites, in contrast to that of the first and the second safīrs, whose office had been kept secret. For this reason some ordinary Imamites were encouraged to ignore the agents of their areas and contact the third safīr directly.

Ibn Rūḥ was highly esteemed by the ʿAbbāsid court during the time of the caliph of al-Muqtadīr(295-320/907-932). This can be attributed to the influence of Ibn Rūḥ’s family, Banū Nawbakht, in the ʿAbbāsid administration, an influence which had begun during the time of the caliph al-Manṣūr (d. 158/774) and lasted until the time of al-Muqtadir. Ibn Rūḥ himself participated in the Abbāsid administration. According to al-Jahshayārī, he was at one point in charge of the personal domain of the caliph (Diwān al-Ḍiyāʿ al-Khāṣṣa). Therefore we find some agents, such as Abū Ghālīb al-Zurārī, paying respect to Ibn Rūḥ because of the economic and political influence of his family. Abbās Iqṣāl illustrates Ibn Rūḥ’s influence by reporting that, during the time of the vizier Ḥāmid b. al-ʿAbbās (306-311/918-923), Ibn Rūḥ’s house became the place for the meetings of administrators, nobles, and deposed viziers, especially Banū Furāt. Most likely Ibn Rūḥ exercised his influence upon the Shiʿites, who were working in the administration, encouraging them to employ their brothers in faith in the Ḥabbāsid administration and offer financial help to the needy among the Shiʿites in general. Certain references indicate that these instructions were put into action by ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. Furāt. According to Ibn Khallikān, he used to support 5,000 people financially. When he was a vizier he appointed the agent Abū Sahl al-Nawbakhtī as governor of the Mubārik district of Wāsit and Muḥammad b. ʿAlī al-Bazawfārī as governor of the district of al-Ṣulḥ and al-Muzārahāt in Wāsit. Simultaneously Muḥsin b. al-Furāt appointed the Baghdad agent al-Shalmaghānī as deputy to certain governors in other districts.

Participation in the administration enabled the agents to study the economic and political situation of the government and facilitated communications through their administrative positions.

Despite Ibn Rūḥ’s great influence he seems to have been put in a critical situation by the militant activities of the other Shiʿites, particularly the Qarāmīta. These were used by his rivals as a pretext to cause his arrest. In 311/923 a caravan of Baghdādi pilgrims, including some relatives of the caliph al-Muqtadir, were attacked and captured by the Qarāmīta, an act which caused the people of Baghdad to be very upset. Since the Qarāmīta were Shiʿites, this gave the enemies of the Shiʿites, like Naṣr al-Ḥājib the chamberlain, an excellent weapon against the vizier Ibn al-Furāt. Naṣr claimed that because Ibn al-Furāt was Shiʿite, he had encouraged the Qarāmīta to attack the pilgrims. Moreover, the masses were provoked to shout in public that Ibn al-Furāt and his son Muḥsin were the “greater Qarmaṭī and the lesser Qarmaṭī”. In 312/924, as a result of these events Ibn al-Furāt and his son were discharged and then murdered. Al-Tūsī reports that Ibn Rūḥ was arrested in 312/924, but does not give any reason for his imprisonment. Al-Dhahabī claims that his arrest was caused by the inflammatory propaganda against the Qarāmite. He was accused of corresponding with the Qarāmite in an effort to have them besiege Baghdad. According to Ibn 'Arib, Ibn Rūh was arrested because he failed to hand over to the government the money which he owed it. This reveals that some officials may have falsely accused Ibn Rūh of corresponding with the Qarāmite in order to facilitate his arrest. In any case, Ibn Rūh spent five years in jail until the caliph, al-Muqtadir, released him in 317/929.

Ibn Rūh recovered his previous respect and reputation, renewed his direct supervision over the Imamite activities, and once again received money from the Imamites. Many of his relatives, such as Ishāq b. Ismā'īl (d. 322/933), Aḥmad b. Abbās (d. 324/935) and al-Ḥusayn b. Aḥmad b. al- Abbās, had managed to maintain high offices in the Abbāsid administration, so his influence increased. Many influential officials and deposed viziers like Aḥmad b. Muqla sought his acquaintance in order to pave the way for their advancement in the Abbāsid administration. For example, the vizier Ibn Muqla spent 20,000 dinars on estates and endowed them as awqāf for the Tālibiyūn in 319/931. But later he lost his office and therefore asked Ibn Rūh to help him. Ibn Rūh contacted his relative al-Ḥusayn b. 'Aḥmad b. al-‘Abbās al-Nawbahī, who was the secretary (kātib) of Amīr al-Umarāʾ. Ibn Rā‘īq, and asked him to support Ibn Muqla in his efforts to recover his office, which were successful in 325/936.

At the same time that the third safīr was wielding his powerful influence in official circles, he was faced with the serious deviation of his main deputy, al-Shalmaghānī, who began to make claims outside Islamic beliefs.

4. The Third Safīr and al-Shalmaghānī

Muhammad b. Aḥmad b. Abī al-‘Azāqir al-Shalmaghānī, who was brought up in the village of Shalmaghān situated in the suburbs of Wāsiṭ, became one of the reciters (qurrāʾ) of the Qur’an in Wāsiṭ. Afterwards he moved to Baghdad where he joined the ‘Abbāsid administration, working as secretary (kātib). He was also an Imamite scholar (fuqāḥā) and wrote eighteen works dealing with Shi‘ite law and theology, among which is his book al-Ghayba. His writings were highly esteemed by the Imamites before his deviation.

It has been noted that after the promotion of Ibn Rūh to the sīfār, he appointed al-Shalmaghānī to direct the activities of the Imamites.
in Baghdad, especially those of Banū Bistām, and those of the two agents of Kufa, al-Zajawzjī and al-Zurārī. Al-Shalmaghānī continued directing the Imamites' activities in Baghdad and Kufa for many years. He was well-known for his impatient political ambitions, and he may have lost hope of gaining power in the near future by following the instructions of the twelfth Imam to the letter. Therefore he decided to ignore the twelfth Imam's instructions and started searching for other groups to achieve his political ambitions. According to Ibn Hawqal, al-Shalmaghānī paid allegiance to the Iṣmāʿīlī Mahdī. However, Ibn Hawqal is the only narrator of this occurrence, and he gives neither the date of al-Shalmaghānī's deviation, nor the reason he later abandoned his Iṣmāʿīlī ties. It is most likely that he turned away from the Ismāʿīlīs to the underground movement of the Ghulāt because he found in their belief in the incarnation of God (hulūl) in human form the best means to put his political and economic ambitions into action.

According to al-Shalmaghānī's belief, throughout the course of history God has been incarnated in human form. In other words, God was incarnated first in the body of Adam and thereafter transmigrated to the bodies of the Prophets. After the Prophet Muhammad, He transmigrated to the bodies of the Imams until the time of the eleventh Imam, and then He appeared in the body of al-Shalmaghānī himself. Simultaneously Allah had created His foe Iblīs, who was also incarnated and who transmigrated throughout the course of history into a series of wicked human forms. According to al-Shalmaghānī, Allah's purpose in His incarnation and transmigration was to prove His existence and His excellence.

Al-Shalmaghānī did not leave the Imamite organization immediately after his deviation nor did he announce the incarnation of God in his own body. Several reports suggest that he used his office as a deputy of the safīr, Ibn Rūh, to train gradually the agents who were below him to accept his heretical teachings. The agent Muhammad b. Humām reports that he heard al-Shalmaghānī saying, "The truth (God) is one, but His forms are several. One day He takes on a white form, another day a red one, and on another a blue one." Ibn Humām reports, "This was the first statement which caused me to reject al-Shalmaghānī, because this was the doctrine of the people of the incarnation of God (al-Ḥulūliyya)." According to another report al-Shalmaghānī managed to persuade some agents together with their families, especially the agents of Banū Bistām, to accept the doctrine of the incarnation of God and the transmigration of souls. Afterwards he divulged to them that the soul of the Prophet had transmigrated into the body of the second saffīr Abū Ja'far, the soul of 'Alī b. Abī Ṭalib had transmigrated into the body of the third saffīr Ibn Rūḥ, and the soul of Fātimah, the Prophet's daughter, had transmigrated into the body of Umm Kulthūm, the second saffīr's daughter. At the same time al-Shalmaghānī told the sub-agents not to divulge this secret, because it was the true faith.56

It appears that Ibn Rūḥ discovered the deviation of al-Shalmaghānī through a female missionary, Umm Kulthūm, who used to supervise the Imamite activities among the females of Banū Bistām. He ordered her to stop her relations and her secret meetings with them. He told her that al-Shalmaghānī had impressed his deviation so deeply on their hearts that they would even accept it if he were to claim that Allah Himself had become incarnated in his body; then he would follow in al-Hallaj’s footsteps and claim that he was Allah.57 The precise date of this incident is unknown. However, according to Ibn al-Athīr the deviation of al-Shalmaghānī began during the early time of the vizierate of Hāmid b. al-ʿAbbās, between the years 306-311/918-923.58 This is consistent with al-Tūsī’s report, which indicates that the deviation of al-Shalmaghānī must have occurred before 312/924.59

After discovering al-Shalmaghānī’s heretical ideas, Ibn Rūḥ discharged him from his office and caused knowledge of his heresy to become widespread, first among the people of Banū Nawbakht and then among others.60 Afterwards he ordered the agents to sever their relations with him. It seems that the agent of Kufa, Muhammad b. Aḥmad al-Zajawżi followed this order, because al-Tūsī reports that he considered anyone possessing the book al-Taklīf by al-Shalmaghānī as extremist.61 But the agents of Banū Bistām in Baghdad refused Ibn Rūḥ’s order and continued to receive instructions from al-Shalmaghānī. For this reason Ibn Rūḥ disclosed al-Shalmaghānī’s situation to all the Imamites and excommunicated him along with all those who paid attention to him.62

Ibn Rūḥ’s announcement reveals that a considerable body of the agents in Baghdad and the ordinary believers had been influenced by al-Shalmaghānī. After his excommunication, he began propagating the idea that he and not Ibn Rūḥ was the rightful representative (saffīr) of the twelfth Imam.63 Through this claim and his belief in the incarnation of Allah in the bodies of the Prophets and the Imams, al-
Shalmaghānī tried to monopolize the economic and political positions of the organization. Later he even advanced the claim that Allah was present in his own body, and that Iblīs was localized in the human form of the twelfth Imam, since the latter was known as al-Qā‘im. Here al-Shalmaghānī was claiming that al-Qā‘im (“the one standing”) meant Iblīs, who had refused to prostrate himself before Adam when other angels had done so. He also claimed that ʻAlī b. Abī Tālib was Allah, and that He had sent Muḥammad to be His Prophet, but that the latter had betrayed Him. Therefore ʻAlī gave Muhammad a period of truce lasting about 350 years, at the end of which Islamic law would be changed. Then the law would have a new interpretation, e.g. Paradise would be the acceptance of al-Shalmaghānī’s claim and allegiance to him, while Hell would be the rejection of his doctrine. Moreover, he aimed at eliminating the main claimants to the caliphate, particularly the ʻAlīs and the ʻAbbāsids, and considered himself the rightful claimant to all religious and political authority.

The political ambitions of al-Shalmaghānī are obvious in his materialistic interpretation of the Qur’anic verses concerning Hell and Paradise to serve his own ambitions. These are especially apparent with reference to two points. Firstly, he fixed a date for the change of the Islamic Shari‘a; 350/967. By this “prophecy” he was attempting to mobilise people to support him in his preparation for the “coming age”. Secondly he concentrated his propaganda among the high officials of the ʻAbbāsid army and administration and gained a considerable number of followers, like ʻAbdāl b. Muḥammad b. ʻAbdūs, ʻAbdās, ʻAbdāh, ʻAbdān, ʻAbdār, ʻAbdār b. ʻAbdān, the author of the book al-Tashbīḥat, Ibn Shabīb al-Zayyāt, Abū Ja‘far b. Bistām and Abū ʻAlī b. Bistām, all of whom were secretaries (kuttab) of the state. In 312/924 al-Muḥsin b. al-Furāt, the son of the vizier Ibn al-Furāt, joined his side and enabled his followers to penetrate the ʻAbbāsid administrative circles. Moreover, al-Husayn b. al-Qāsim b. ʻUbayd Allah b. Wahb, who held the vizierate between the years 319-20/931-2, was one of the partisans of al-Shalmaghānī.

It has already been noted that the third safullah was imprisoned in 312/924. Al-Shalmaghānī seized this opportunity to expand his activities among the Imamites, who had not yet received an answer from the Imam himself concerning the claims of al-Shalmaghānī. Therefore the Imam sent via Ibn Rūḥ this pronouncement concerning his attitude towards the claims of al-Shalmaghānī:
Muḥammad b. ʿAlī, known as al-Shalmağhānī, is one of those upon whom Allah has hastened His judgement and to whom He has granted no respite. He has deviated from Islam and separated himself from it. He has become an apostate from the religion of Allah, making claims which indicate the denial of Allah, the Most Glorious and High, fabricating lies and falsehoods, and pronouncing untruths and great transgressions. Those who associate another with Allah are in far error and clearly suffer great loss. For indeed we declare ourselves free (of any relationship with al-Shalmağhānī) before Allah, may He be exalted, and His messenger and his family, may the blessings of Allah, His peace, His mercy and His benediction be upon them according to His benevolence; while we curse him (i.e. al-Shalmağhānī), may the curses of Allah be showered successively (upon him) externally and internally, secretly and publicly, at every time and in every circumstance. And (may the curse of Allah be) upon those who agree with him and follow him, and also upon those who, having heard our announcement, continue to pay allegiance to him.

So inform them (the Imamite agents) that we shall guard and take precautions against him, as was the case with those who preceded him and held similar views, like al-Sharafī, al-Numayrī, al-Hilālī, al-Bilālī and so forth. For the traditions of Allah are conformable to us. In Him we place our trust, and from Him we seek assistance. He is sufficient for us in all our affairs and is the best of Guardians.

According to al-Tūsī the agent Muḥammad b. Humām received this pronouncement from Ibn Rūḥ while he was in prison. He spread it personally among all the agents in Baghdad and sent it to the agents in the other cities until it became well-known among the ordinary Imamites.

According to Ibn al-Aṭīr, Ibn Rūḥ disclosed al-Shalmağhānī's claim even to the ʿAbbāsids. As a result in 313/925 the vizier al-Khāqānī tried to arrest him, an attempt which brought about the imprisonment of many people who had inclined towards him. However he disappeared and escaped to Mosul, where he took refuge from the ruler Nāṣir al-Dawla al-Hasan b. ʿAbd Allah b. Ḥamdān. He lived there in a village called Ma alṭāḥāyā in the vicinity of Mosul. However, he did not break off communication with his followers in Baghdad. According to al-Najāshi, during his concealment in the village of Ma‘althāyā, al-Shalmaghānī narrated his books to a certain Abū ʿAbd Allah al-Shaybānī. He was an Imamite Muḥaddith who lived in the Nawbakhtiyā district of Baghdad, but he later turned away from the Imamite school.

In 316/928 al-Shaybānī returned secretly to Baghdad in order to be in direct contact with his followers, whose activities had spread widely among the officials of the Abbāsid administration, a development which can possibly be regarded as a step toward his objective of obtaining power. Al-Husayn b. al-Qāsim b. ʿUbayd Allah b. Wahb, the partisan of al-Shalmaghānī, was promoted to the vizierate in 319/931 and his name was stamped on the coin beside the name of the caliph al-Muqtadir. As a vizier Ibn Wahb enabled his partisans to assume high positions, but after a year he was discharged. Later the new caliph al-Qāhir (320-322/932-934) exiled him to al-Riqqah in Syria because of his allegiance to al-Shalmaghānī. He also arrested his comrades, especially the Banū Bīštām, and seized their property. This campaign continued until al-Shalmaghānī himself was arrested in 323/934. Along with a few of the leading personalities of his movement, like Ibn Abī ʿAwn, he was tortured and executed, and the corpses were burnt at the police headquarters (Dār al-Shurta) on the western side of Baghdad.

Ibn Rūḥ’s influence and authority among the “Abbāsids increased after the persecution of al-Shalmaghānī, who was their common enemy. Thus Ibn Rūḥ recovered his high influence and became close to the caliph al-Rādī (322-29/934-40). Moreover it appears that Ibn Rūḥ’s cooperation with the “Abbāsids against al-Shalmaghānī led the caliph al-Rādī to think that his activities with the Imamites had no connection with the twelfth Imam and would probably cease in the near future. Al-Ṣūlī reports:

Al-Rādī sometimes mentioned that the Imamites used to hand the *khums (al-amwāl) over to Ibn Rūḥ but we refuted this accusation, and claimed that it was a lie. So he said to us, “What is wrong with that? By Allah, I wish that there were a thousand people like him to whom the Imamites might bring their possessions so that Allah might impoverish them. I do not mind if they (Ibn Rūḥ and others) become rich through receiving their possessions (i.e. those of the Imamites).”

131
Ibn Rūḥ died on the 18th of Sha'bān 326/20 June 938, and was buried in al-Nawbakhtiyya district in the western side of Baghdad. He was succeeded by Abū al-Ḥasan ʿAlī b. Muḥammad al-Sammarī.
CHAPTER VII

THE FOURTH SAFIR AND THE COMPLETE OCCULTATION OF THE TWELFTH IMAM

1. The Career of the Fourth Safir (326-329/937-941)

Al-Tusi reports that Ibn Ruh designated Abū al-Hasan ʿAlī b. Muḥammad al-Sammarī as his successor. According to al-Ṭabarsi, this designation was by the stipulation and order of the twelfth Imam himself.

His surname is derived from the name of al-Sammar or al-Ṣaymar, situated in one of the districts of Baṣra, where the relatives of al-Sammarī used to live. According to al-Masʿūdī many members of this family, like al-Hasan and Muḥammad, the sons of Ismāʿīl b. Sālih and ʿAlī b. Ziyād, had large estates in Baṣra. They devoted half of the income from these estates to the eleventh Imam, who used to receive it every year and correspond with them. Moreover, some of al-Sammarī’s relatives were agents of the twelfth Imam. Among these was ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. Ziyād, who had also been an agent to the tenth and eleventh Imams and who wrote a book called al-Awṣiyya to confirm the Imamate of the twelfth Imam. He was the brother-in-law of the vizier Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad, a relationship which enabled him to achieve an important office in the ʿAbbāsid administration. According to al-Kulaynī, the twelfth Imam divulged to him in a letter that his death would occur in 280/893, when it actually occurred.

These points indicate that al-Sammarī came from a family whose members were well-known for their Shiʿite beliefs and their service to the organization. In fact, such a background was necessary to enable al-Sammarī to reach the office of the sīfāra with little opposition, especially if one takes into consideration the prolonged occultation of the twelfth Imam, which shook the faith of a considerable body of the Imamites.

However, the sīfāra of al-Sammarī was too short-lived to cause any remarkable changes in the relations between him and the other agents. Although nothing is known about the details of his activities,
The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

a report mentioned by al-Sadūq makes it clear that the agents recognised him as the rightful safīr and handed the khums over to him.8

Al-Sammarī died on the 15th of Sha‘bān 329/15th May 941 and was buried in al-Khaljani street in the quarter of al-Muḥawwar.9 According to Yāqūt, this quarter was situated to the north of the village of Burāthā, on the western side of Baghdad.10

A week before the death of Al-Sammarī the following pronouncement (Tawqī‘) was issued by the twelfth Imam:

May Allah give good rewards to your bretheren concerning you (i.e. on your death), for indeed you shall die after six days. So prepare your affairs, and do not appoint anyone to take your place after your death. For the second occultation has now occurred, and there can be no appearance until, after a long time when Allah gives His permission, hearts become hardened and the world becomes filled with injustice. And someone shall come to my partisans (Shī‘a) claiming that he has seen me; but beware of anyone claiming to have seen me before the rise of al-Ṣufyānī and the outcry from the sky, for he shall be a slanderous liar.11

Six days after the announcement of this document the principal agents congregated at the death-bed of the fourth safīr and asked him who was to take charge of his office. Al-Sammarī replied, “To Allah belongs the matter which He shall accomplish” (Li-llāh amr huwa bālīghukh).12 This was the last statement heard from al-Sammarī, the fourth safīr. Thereby direct communication between the safīrs and the twelfth Imam was brought to an end. In other words the short occultation had ended and the second occultation or, according to the later sources, the major occultation had begun.

2. An Analysis of the Tawqī‘ of the Fourth Safīr

The pronouncement of the twelfth Imam illustrates five points:

Firstly, it reveals that the fourth safīr, al-Sammarī, would die six days after the issue of the Tawqī‘. According to the Imamite reports, al-Sammarī did die on the mentioned day. It is worth pointing out that the twelfth Imam is also said to have predicted the times of the deaths of the three previous safīrs.13 For the Imamites this prediction was strong proof that the Tawqī‘ had been issued by the Imam.
himself.

Secondly, the Imam ordered the fourth safīr not to designate anyone to succeed him or to be in charge of his office, “wā-lā tūsi ʾilā ahad fa-yaqūm maqāmak baʿd wafātik.” 14 This clearly indicated the end of direct communication between the Imam and his safīrs and agents. Hence the Imam in the Tawqīṣ denies that he will have any personal safīr during the second occultation before his return:

And someone shall come to my partisans (Shīʿa) claiming that he has seen me; but beware of anyone claiming to have seen me before the rise of al-Ṣufyānī and the outcry from the sky, for he shall be a slanderous liar. 15

The highly developed activities of the organization, which continued for about 69 years between the years 260-329/874-941 were ended by the death-bed statement of the fourth safīr as regards his successor: God would do what He wished in this matter, “Li-illāh amr huwa bālighuh.” 16

Thirdly, the Tawqīṣ announces the beginning of the second, or the complete occultation (Fa-qad waqa at al-Ghayba al-Thāniya aw al-Tāmma), 17 which al-Nuʿmānī describes as the period of confusion, al-Hayra. 18 Al-Mufīd calls it the longer occultation (al-Ghayba al-Ṭulā), whereas the later Imamites refer to it as the major occultation (al-Ghayba al-Kubrā). 19

Fourthly, there can be no appearance of the Imam until Allah gives him His permission. His return will take place when it becomes far from the expectation of the people because of the hardening of their hearts and the filling of the world with tyranny. 20

Fifthly, the Tawqīṣ indicates that the appearance of the Imam will be preceded by two inevitable signs, that is the rise of al-Ṣufyānī, who according to early traditions will rise and dominate Syria, and the outcry in the sky in the name of the Imam.

After quoting the Tawqīṣ Rajkowski states as follows:

... this document is a clear indication that the leaders of al-Shīʿa al-Qaṭʿiyya had lost hope in the speedy arrival of al-Mahdī and thought that the moment of al-Zuhūr might still be very distant; so that it was no longer possible to keep up the pretences of direct communication between the successive Ambassador and the Ṣāhib al-Zamān. It was better to leave the Shiʿites without an official mediator, and rely only on al-Mahdī’s invisible protection and inspiration. 21

135
Rajkowski seems to be suggesting that the eleventh Imam died heirless and the leading Imamites invented the idea of the occultation (al-Ghayba) and claimed that the safīrs had direct communications with al-‘Askari’s successor. Rajkowski’s theory seems to have inspired Jihād al-Hasani to hold similar views concerning the role of the four safīrs. He says,

...by resorting to the claim of being agents for the concealed Twelfth Imam, the four Twelver agents were apparently able to put themselves forward in the position of the leadership though they were not from the line of descent of the Prophet.\(^{22}\)

The hypothesis of these two authors might be sound if there were no clear proof that al-‘Askari had left a successor or that traditions were circulating in Imamite circles before 260/874 indicating that the series of the Imams would end with the twelfth Imam, who would be al-Qā’im.\(^{23}\) However, it has been demonstrated that it was highly probable that the eleventh Imam had showed his son to about forty of his adherents among whom were the first two agents, ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd and Muhammad b. ʿUthmān.\(^{24}\) Furthermore, the evidence has strongly suggested that the eleventh Imam sent his son to Medina in 259/873,\(^{25}\) where he stayed during the time of the first safīr. Moreover, the Imamite organization, the Wikāla, was established during the time of the sixth Imam al-Ṣādiq. Had it appeared suddenly after the death of al-‘Askari without the spread of traditions before 260/874 predicting the Ghayba and without the explicit appointment of ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd and his son Muḥammad (Abū Jaʿfar) by the eleventh Imam as the agents of his son the twelfth Imam,\(^{26}\) one could agree with Rajkowski’s statement and with Montgomery Watt, who says:

...the Imamite theory of twelve Imams did not come into being of its own accord, as it were, following upon certain events known to all. The theory was an interpretation of selected events, and was deliberately created by politicians to further their own — perhaps very worthy — ends.\(^{27}\)

We have already mentioned that the Imamites consider Wilāya (allegiance and obedience to Ahl al-Bayt) as the fifth pillar of Islam. According to them, the practice of all the other pillars (the prayer, zakāt, fasting, pilgrimage) is invalid without the recognition of the rights of the Imam.\(^{28}\) They report many traditions stressing the necessity of the existence of an Imam until the Day of Judgement, such as the well-known saying attributed to ‘Ali b. Abi Ṭālib:

Allah, I know that knowledge (al-‘Ilm) cannot disappear completely, its sources cannot cease, and You cannot leave Your earth without a proof (Huṣṣa) of You for Your creation, either manifest and unobeyed or afraid and unknown (i.e. in a state of occultation). Otherwise Your proofs (huṣṣā) would be (sent) in vain, and Your followers would go astray after You have guided them.²⁹

Al-Saffār (d. 290/902) reports that al-Bāqir interpreted the Qur’anic verse, “Indeed you are a warner and for every people there will be a Guide.” (al-Ra‘ad, XIII, 7), as follows: The “warner” is the Prophet, peace be upon him, and in every time there is someone who will guide others to what the Prophet brought. These guides are first the Prophet of Allah, then the Guided ones (al-Hudāt); that is, ‘Ali and the Imams (the “legatees”, al-Awsiya’).³⁰

Al-Kashfi reports a tradition attributed to the eighth Imam, al-Ridā: “The Imam cannot pass away unless he sees his successor, except for al-Qā‘im.”³¹

All of these traditions depict the Imamite belief in the necessity of the continuity of the Imāma. Any break in its continuity would mean its overthrow as a principle of the religion. The short occultation did not signify the non-existence of the twelfth Imam, because he continued to carry out his activities via his four saḥfiṣ until the year 329/941. Thus, regardless of the “creations of politicians,” it is quite clear that the first occultation of the twelfth Imam occurred within a religious environment where this event had come to be expected.

As we have noted, the ‘Abbāsid authorities wanted to restrict the activities of the Imams, so they included them amongst their courtiers and placed them under house arrest, so that they could no longer practice their activities amongst their followers. Restrictions were placed upon the Imams from the time of al-Ridā and were greatly increased during the Imamate of the eleventh Imam, al-‘Askarī.³² As a result, the Imams devised a policy to save their last successor from a similar situation. They realized that any son born to the eleventh Imam would be hidden from the eyes of the ‘Abbāsids so that he could carry out his activities incognito. To this end they encouraged the transmission of traditions (hadīth) predicting an Imam who would be hidden from sight and would implement his policies in secret amongst his followers; and this would be the twelfth Imam. Such steps were taken so as to prepare the Imamites to accept the saffs as the Imam’s intermediaries.

In the light of this explanation, it is worth mentioning a few of the traditions which were reported by al-‘Asfari, who died in 250/863, that is, ten years before the death of al-‘Askari:

i) Al-Baqir said to his companion Abū al-Muqdam, “O Abū al-Muqdam, what would you do if an occultation (sabta) occurred between the Haramayn (i.e. Mecca and Medina) . . . My father used to say that would happen and that Allah does what He wills . . .”

ii) The Prophet is reported to have said, “I and eleven of my descendants and you, O ‘Alī, are the axis of the earth, its pegs and its mountains . . . When my eleven descendants pass away, then chaos and disorder will occur among the people.”

iii) The Prophet is reported to have said, “(There will be) from my descendants eleven leaders (who will) be noble and receive and understand (knowledge). The last of them will be al-Qā‘im, who will fill the world with justice after it has been filled with tyranny.”

These and other traditions were spread in both Imamite and Zaydite circles. Al-‘Asfari, who was a member of al-Zaydiyya al-Järūdiyya, was himself awaiting the rise of al-Mahdi in the near future and used to carry his sword with him. As already mentioned, he once said that he carried his sword so that he would always be ready to fight along with al-Mahdi.

According to al-Ṣadūq these traditions and others predicting the occurrence of the Ghayba were the main reason for the Imamite acceptance of the Ghayba and for their being satisfied that the series of the Imams should stop at the twelfth. For the Imamites the acceptance of the Ghayba is a matter of obedience to the orders of the Imams.

3. The Imamite Learned Men’s Attitude Towards the Second Occultation

As has already been indicated, during the period of the short occultation (260-329/874-941) more than two generations of Imamites were brought up under the careful supervision of the agents and with the teachings of the Imamite narrators (al-Muhaddithūn), in order that the new generation would recognize that religious authority derives from indirect communication with the hidden Imam, via his four safi. Their arguments and instructions concerning the hidden Imam were based mainly on the traditions attributed to the previous eleven Imams before the year 260/874, including the traditions narrated by al-‘Ash’ari. Although the Imamites split into fifteen groups and held different views concerning the successor of al-‘Askari at the time of the first safi, the teaching and the underground activities of the second safi met with success. His followers (al-Imamiyya al-Qat’iyya) carried out intensive propaganda to prove the existence of the twelfth Imam and the necessity for his occultation without specifying the date of his reappearance: “concerning the release from suffering (i.e. the rise of the Imam) it is in the hand of Allah and those who try to fix certain times for it are liars.” Thus the teachings and doctrine of the followers of the second safi dominated Imamite circles, whereas the other groups disappeared. During the time of the third and the fourth safis we find the new generation of Imamites more obedient to the safis and willing to accept their statements as the statements of the twelfth Imam. They were all the more willing because, as we have noted, all the pronouncements (tawzi‘i) issued to the four safis and attributed to the twelfth Imam were written in the same handwriting and in the same style. The identical handwriting explains the consensus among the Imamites to be obedient to the last pronouncement of the fourth safi, by which the first occultation came to an end and the second began.

There is evidence that when the last pronouncement of the twelfth Imam proclaimed the end of direct communication with the fourth safi, the agents ceased their underground activities and in particular refrained from collecting the khums. In other words the Imamite underground organization (al-Wikala), which had been established during the time of al-Ṣadiq (d. 148/765), was dissolved by that pronouncement. Henceforth anyone claiming to be the safi of the Imam was considered an unbeliever and imposter. For this reason the Imamites cursed Muḥammad b. Ahmad b. ‘Uthmān al-Ṣumrā, known as Abū Bakr al-Baghdādi, the nephew of the second safi, when he claimed that he was the safi of the twelfth Imam. Al-Tūsī gives an example of how the agents refrained from collecting the khums:

Ahmad b. Muḥammad b. al-Ḥasan b. al-Walīd al-Qummi came to Basra as the representative of his father and the group (i.e. the agents in Qumm). The Imamites questioned him concerning rumours that he was the deputy of the Imam. But he denied them, saying: “I have no right in this matter” So they offered him money as a test, but he rejected it and said, “It is forbidden for me to take it, because I have no right in this matter (i.e. the deputysip of the Imam), and I have never made such a claim.”

Perhaps these two examples are a further evidence that the theory of the occultation of the twelfth Imam was not “the creation of politicians” to further their own ends. In fact, there were some people motivated by political and worldly aspirations, such as al-Shalmaghānī and Ābū Bakr al-Baghdādī, whose followers held that they were the safīrs of the hidden Imam. However, the Imamites totally rejected their claim.

The agents’ decision to end their activities led the Imamite narrators (al-Muhaddīthūn, al-Ruwāt) to the belief that since no new safīr had been appointed, the second occultation which they called the “period of trial and confusion” had begun. They supported their conclusion with traditions attributed to the previous Imams indicating that al-Qāʾīm would have two forms of occultation before his rising, one of them being short and the other long. Al-Nuʿmānī may have been the first scholar to give this particular interpretation to existing traditions. After quoting nine traditions predicting the two forms of Ghaybas and attributed to al-Ṣādiq on the authority of seven of his disciples, al-Nuʿmānī comments:

The authenticity of these traditions mentioning that al-Qāʾīm has two occultations has been proved – Praise be to Allah. For by bringing about the occultation He has authenticated the statements of the Imams.

As for the first occultation, it is that during which there were safīrs between the Imam and the people. safs who had been appointed by the Imam and who carried out their activities while living amongst the people. This is the short occultation, whose days have come to an end and whose period has passed away.

The second occultation is the one during which the safīrs and the mediators have been removed for a purpose intended by Allah and planned for in the creation. In other words, throughout this period testing, examination, trial, sifting and purification will be the lot of those who claimed (to be Imamites), just as is stated in the Qur’an: It is not (the purpose) of Allah to leave you in your present state till He shall separate the wicked from the good. And it is not (the purpose of) Allah to let you know the unseen. (Al-Imrān III, 179). . . This explains our statement that the Imam has two occultations and that we are living in the second.\textsuperscript{41}

Al-Nu‘mānī’s interpretation of the two Ghaybas became the foundation for most explanations put forward by the Imamite jurists from the time of al-Sadūq (d. 381/991) in Kamal al-Dīn wa-Tamām al-Ni ma and al-Khazzāz al-Rāzī al-Qummī (d. 381/991) in Kifayāt al-Athār fī al-Nusūs alā al-Ā’imma al-Ithna ‘Ashar through the period of al-Majlisi (d. 1111/1700) in Biḥār al-Anwār.

However, a contemporary scholar, Sachedina, writes as follows:

It is plausible to maintain that the division of the Ghayba into short and long is the innovation of the Imamite jurists. In support of this division, traditions were either invented or interpreted to accommodate the situation as it appeared to them.\textsuperscript{42}

But Sachedina’s hypothesis does not bear scrutiny, because the belief in two Ghaybas did not come newly into being after the death of the fourth safīr in 329/941, nor was it invented by al-Nu‘mānī and those scholars who followed his footsteps, such as al-Ṣadūq, al-Khazzāz, al-Mufīd (d. 413/1022) and al-Ṭūsī (d. 460/1067). They merely clarified the consistency between the two concealments of the twelfth Imam and the traditions predicting their occurrence.\textsuperscript{43} From the historical viewpoint there are several reports which reveal that the traditions speaking about two concealments already existed prior to the year 329/941 when the second occultation began and that they were used by the Wāqifā and the Imamites.

The Wāqifā who stopped at the seventh Imam Mūsā al-Kāzim (d. 183/799) contending that he was al-Qā’im al-Mahdī, had narrated these traditions. Among the Wāqifite narrators is Abū Muḥammad ‘Alī b. Ahmad al-‘Alawī, who wrote a book in support of Wāqifite doctrine called Fī Nusrāt al-Wāqifā. He mentions this tradition attributed to al-Ṣādiq:

The Sāhib al-Amr (i.e. al-Qā’im) will have two occultations, one of which will be longer than the other. Finally people will say that he has died and others will say that he has been killed. Only a few of his followers will continue to support his Imamate, and no one will know his whereabouts and his affairs except his servant.\textsuperscript{44} As we have seen (p.58), one group of the Imamites held that the eleventh Imam had not died in 260/874, but had merely disappeared and would return and be recognized, only to disappear again before finally rising as \textit{al-Qā'im}.\textsuperscript{45} According to al-Nawbakhtī (d. ca. 310/922) this group based its claim on the generally accepted narration which states that \textit{al-Qā'im} will have two concealments.\textsuperscript{46} Agha Buzurg reports that such traditions were included by al-Ḥasan b. Mahbūb al-Zarrad in \textit{Kitāb al-Mashyakha},\textsuperscript{47} and by al-Fadl b. Shadhān (d. 260/873) in \textit{Kitāb al-Ghayba},\textsuperscript{48} but these works are not extant. Fortunately, al-Kulaynī, who lived during the short occultation, has included three of these traditions in \textit{al-Kāfī}. According to one of these traditions, al-Ṣādiq said:

\textit{Al-Qā'im} will have two concealments, one of them short and the other long. In the first only his intimate partisans will know his whereabouts, while in the second only his close associates will know his whereabouts.\textsuperscript{49}

These traditions predicting the two concealments of the twelfth Imam which are reported by al-Ḥasan b. Maḥbūb, al-Fadl b. Shadhān and al-Kulaynī were not invented by the Imamite narrators as is Sachédina's belief. On the contrary, such traditions were the main reason why Imamite scholars like Ibn Qubba\textsuperscript{50} and al-Nuʿmānī put forward the claim that the twelfth Imam was \textit{al-Qā'im al-Mahdī}, since they applied them to the historical circumstances which accompanied the career of the twelfth Imam from 260/874 until the discontinuation of his direct communication with his followers after the death of his fourth saffī in 329/941. Thus al-Nuʿmānī, after narrating such traditions, states,

Considering the large number of traditions predicting the concealment transmitted through the centuries, if the concealment had not occurred the very principle of the \textit{Imāma} would be invalid. However by its occurrence Allah the Exalted has proved the authenticity of the Imams' warnings about the occultation and the correctness of their belief in it which they held generation after generation. In so doing, Allah obliged the Shīʿa to accept it.\textsuperscript{51}
4. The Attitude of the Ordinary Imamites towards the Second Occultation

Despite the fact that the Imamite narrators like al-Nu‘mānī accepted the second occultation of the twelfth Imam and contented themselves with the traditions going back to before 260/874 which predicted its occurrence, the vast majority of the ordinary Imamites disagreed with them. They argued that if the Imam was born in 256/870, he was 73 years old by the end of the first occultation in 329/941, and this accords with the life span of a normal person. They concluded that he had probably died, since death is the natural end for a person living to such an age. Al-Nu‘mānī describes the confusion among the Imamite populace as follows:

The majority of the Imamites asked regarding the successor of al-Ḥasan, “Where is he?”, “How could this happen?”, “For how long will he be concealed?” and “How much longer will he live, since he is now about 73 years old?” Some of them believed that he was dead. Other groups denied his birth or even his existence, and mocked those who believed in him. Some merely found it difficult to accept the prolongation of his concealment because they could not imagine that it was within the power of God. . . to prolong the age of His wali (i.e. the Imam) . . . and cause him to reappear afterwards.52

According to al-Nu‘mānī the bulk of these groups abandoned their belief in the hidden Imam. In fact those who continued to hold a firm belief in his Imamate were a small minority belonging to the circles of narrators, like Ibn Qubba and al-Nu‘mānī himself, who based their belief on the traditions of the Imams.53

Many scholars shared the perplexity of the Imamite masses over the prolonged occultation of the twelfth Imam. According to Ibn al-Nadim, Abū Sahl Ismā‘īl b. ʿAlī al-Nawbakhtī was the first to hold the opinion that the twelfth Imam had died during his occultation, that his son had succeeded him, and that the Imāma would continue in his progeny until Allah resurrected the twelfth Imam.54 The attribution of this statement to Abū Sahl may be sound, because in his defence and vindication of the concealment of the Imam written around the year 290/902, he does not expect the concealment to last beyond the life span of an ordinary person. He writes,
Until the present time there has been one of his hidden and reliable adherents, who claims that he is the Imam’s Gate (Bāb) and the intermediary for his commands and orders to his followers. The period of the occultation (of the Imam) has not become so prolonged that it is exceptional and beyond the length of the concealments of those who went into concealment before him.53

Muhammad b. al-Hasan b. Aḥmad b. ʿAlī al-Ṣalt al-Qummī was another Imamite scholar baffled by the discontinuation of direct communication with the Imam because of his prolonged occultation. Thus he went along with a philosopher from Bukhara in doubting the Imam’s existence.56

Several remarks made about twenty years after the beginning of the second occultation (around the year 352/963) suggest that confusion and despair over the immediate return of the twelfth Imam became a dominant feature in Imamite circles. Moreover harsh attacks on the concealment of the twelfth Imam by such Muʿtazilites as Abū al-Qāsim al-Balkhī57 and such Zaydites as Abū Zayd al-ʿAlawī58 and al-Sāhib b. ʿAbbād59 increased this confusion among the Imamite populace from Nisapur to Baghdad, so that many Imamites abandoned their belief.60

The confusion over the prolongation of the occultation along with the attacks from opposition groups encouraged the Imamite narrators to justify the Ghayba by composing works. At first they gathered their material from traditions attributed to the Prophet and the Imams. Such works are exemplified by al-Nuʿmānī’s Kitāb al-Ghayba and al-Sadūq’s Kamāl al-Dīn. The latter explains that he composed his work while he was living in Nisapur, because concealment of the Imam caused perplexity and bafflement among the majority of the Shiʿa who used to visit him and consequently they had gone astray. Their number included even the well-known Qummī scholar Muhammad b. al-Salt. This situation provoked him into writing a work quoting the authentic narrations attributed to the Prophet and the Imams on this issue. According to him, these narrations had already been assembled in al-Uṣūl al-Arbaʾīnī and had been written down before 260/874 by the followers of al-Ṣādiq and the other Imams.61 He also devotes a chapter to people who lived to be more than 100 years old in order to vindicate the advanced age of the twelfth Imam during his occultation.
By the end of the 4th/10th century, it seems that the argument based on traditions and employed by al-Kulaynī, al-Masʿūdī, al-Nuʿmānī, al-Ṣadūq and al-Khazzāz were no longer sufficient. Hence the Imamite scholars resorted to theological arguments (ʿIlm al-Kalām) and used them extensively to vindicate the Imam’s concealment. Al-Mufid (d. 413/1022) was perhaps the pioneer in this period. In his work al-Fusūl al-ʿAshara fī al-Ghayba he tries to prove the existence of the hidden Imam on the basis of two principles: the necessity of the existence of an Imam at every period of time and the infallibility of this Imam. Al-Mufid’s treatment of this subject became the framework for later Imamite scholars like his pupil al-Karajaki (d. 449/1057), al-Murtada and al-Tūsī. In al-Ghayba, the last of these advances both the traditional and the theological arguments for vindicating the complete occultation of the twelfth Imam. However that may be, the theological approach goes beyond the historical approach of the present work and pertains to a later period.

5. The Application of the Epithet al-Mahdī to the Twelfth Imam

The traditions used by the Imamites during the short occultation to support the view that the twelfth Imam was the one who will rise with the sword (al-Qaʿīm bi-l-sayf) were the same traditions talking about the twelfth Imam as the expected Mahdī. In other words, the two ideas, al-Qaʿīm and al-Mahdī, were already combined and applied to the twelfth Imam at the time of the Prophet. But, as we have already seen (pp 21-23, 30) the Imams due to certain reasons revealed it only to a few of their followers instructing them not to publicize it. In spite of this Sachedina holds that

... the Mahdīism of the twelfth Imamite Imam was a later development in the theory of the Imamate of the hidden Imam, which combined the already known belief in the coming of al-Mahdī to restore justice and equity with the prolonged occultation of the twelfth Imam.

Sachedina reached this conclusion after examining the Kutub al-Ziyarāt which was included by al-Majlīsī in his work Bihār al-Anwār. According to Sachedina the earliest work of this literary genre is related on the authority of the twelfth Imam himself in reply to a letter written by Abd Allah al-Ḩimyarī (d. 290/902). Sachedina says,

In this Ziyarah which I have carefully examined, there is no mention of the title al-Mahdī at all. The twelfth Imam is not addressed as the Mahdī, the one promised by the Prophet. This is the first Ziyarah mentioned in this section of the Book on the Shrines. 66

From the historical point of view there are several points in Sachedina's thesis which are open to question.

Firstly, according to sayings attributed to al-Bāqir and al-Jawād, all the Imams hold the title al-Qā'im, inferring that they have been entrusted with the execution of Allah's order (Kullunā Qā'imun bi-Amr Allāh); in addition, they all hold the title al-Mahdī, whose duty is to guide people to the Religion of Allah (kullunā Nahdī ilā Dīn Allāh). 67 For this reason, we find that in the books on pilgrimage or Ziyara, all the Imams are addressed as al-A'imma al-Rashidūn al-Mahdiyyun. 68 Consequently the twelfth Imam must hold the title of al-Mahdī in this meaning, even though here the word has quite a different meaning from the epithet al-Qā'im al-Mahdī, the one promised by the Prophet who will rise with the sword. 69

Secondly, in the Imamite works there is a certain consistency between the signs indicating the rise of al-Qā'im and his performance of his duty on earth following his return and those pointing to the rise of al-Mahdī. This can be noted in such statements as the following:

وانت، المهدی می انتقرا به لدنی واظهر به دولتی وانتقم به من اعدائی واعبد به طوعا وشكرها
وذا اقامت القائم سارفیه بالسید و البیه وذالک انا به لام بنشیعتنا لم بیشه 21 بهم منت بعد 6 اجلها 70

It becomes clear from numerous statements of this nature that the Imams used two different titles when referring to one person. A tradition attributed to al-Ṣādiq makes the identity between the two figures explicitly for when he was asked by his follower Abū Sā'id al-Khurasānī, "Are al-Mahdī and al-Qā'im one and the same person?" He replied "Yes." 71 Hence we find that al-Nu'mānī sometimes refers to the twelfth Imam as \textit{al-Qā'im} and sometimes as \textit{al-Mahdī} without imagining that such an application of the two terms would lead to confusion among the Imamites. It is clear that the two titles refer to the same person since al-Nu'mānī also reports a narration attributed to al-Bāqir revealing that \textit{al-Mahdī} is \textit{al-Qā'im bi-l-Sayf}:

When the \textit{Qā'im} of the People of the House (\textit{Ahl al-Bayt}) rises he will distribute equally among the people and deal justly with his subjects. He is called \textit{al-Mahdī} because he will be the Guide to secret matters.\textsuperscript{72}

For this reason al-Nu'mānī refers to the twelfth Imam as \textit{al-Qā'im al-Mahdī}.\textsuperscript{73} Moreover it is clear that the expected Mahdī acquired this title because he will be ‘guided’ by Allah and will guide men to undertake a spiritual transformation of society, just as he acquired the title \textit{al-Qā'im bi-l-Sayf} because he will rise by militant means to put into practice this transformation, namely the establishment of a truly Islamic State based entirely upon the \textit{shari'a} as interpreted and implemented by the Prophet and his rightful successors, the Imams. This can also be seen in al-Mufid's interpretation of the doctrine of return (\textit{al-Raj'a}):

I say that Allah the Exalted will return some of the dead people to the present world in the physical forms which they had before. He will do this to honour one group and to debase another, to grant superiority to the faithful over the deniers, and to judge between the oppressors and the oppressed. This will take place after the rising of \textit{al-Mahdī} of the Family of Muhammad.\textsuperscript{74}

Moreover most of the \textsuperscript{5}Alids who had been inspired by the Prophetic tradition predicting the rise of \textit{al-Mahdī} held the title \textit{al-Qā'im al-Mahdī} when they rose in arms, like Muhammad b. Ja'far al-Sādiq, who rose in 199/814.\textsuperscript{75}

Thirdly, al-Kulaynī and al-Mas'ūdī, both of whom lived during the period of the short occultation, report a tradition which explicitly refers to the twelfth Imam as \textit{al-Mahdī}: \textsuperscript{5}Alī b. Abī Tālib said,

I thought about a child who will be from my flesh, the eleventh from my line of descendants. He is the \textit{Mahdī} who will fill the earth with justice and equity when the height of injustice and tyranny in the world has been reached. He will live in a state of occultation as a result of which a group of people will go astray and another will remain faithful.\textsuperscript{76}
Al-Ṣādūq (d. 381/991) includes similar traditions referring to the twelfth Imam as al-Mahdī and as al-Qā’im. He also cites the text of a visit (ziyara) to the twelfth Imam during his occultation which is attributed to the second safīr, Abū Ja’far, (d. 305/917), who addresses the twelfth Imam as al-Huijja al-Qā’im al-Mahdī.

In the light of these points one can conclude that after the twelfth Imam went into occultation for the first time, the Imamite scholars considered him as al-Qā’im al-Mahdī, the one who will rise with the sword. This was a strongly supported belief by the time of the occurrence of the second or complete occultation.

6. The Effect of the Complete Occultation on the Position of the Imamite Fuqahā’

The occurrence of the second occultation of the twelfth Imam, followed by the immediate dissolution of the Imamite Wikāla after the death of al-Sammārī, the fourth safīr in 329/941, left a serious vacuum in the Imamite leadership. This situation allowed the Imamite jurists (al-Fuqahā’) to extend their activities. They reached a consensus that the concealed Imam would be alive until the moment of his rising in arms, irrespective of the length of his concealment. They based their view upon such traditions as that attributed to al-Sādiq, who says to his adherent Hāzim, O Hazim, the Sāhib al-Amr (al-Qā’im) has two occultations and will rise after the second one. Anyone who comes to you claiming that he has purified his hands in the soil of his grave (i.e. the grave of al-Qā’im), do not believe him.

But in reality they found themselves in need of a leader to save the congregation from possible disintegration, and there was no one to undertake this task except themselves. By the last quarter of the fourth/tenth century the ordinary Imamites were accepting the statements of the jurists as the actual statements of the twelfth Imam, but they did not consider their authority equal to his. In other words the fuqahā’ were considered the spokesmen for the Imam’s views concerning Islamic doctrine and law. But they were not in charge of the office of the Imāma because as is explained by authors such as al-Ṭūsī and al-Majlisi, it is not possible for anyone to hold the position of Imam before the rise of al-Qā’im.
For this reason the eminent leaders of the Imamites, al-Mufid (d. 413/1022) and al-Tusi (d. 460/1067), refused to give themselves authority over the half of the khums which was set aside for the Imam. Al-Mufid held that any faithful follower who wanted to pay the Imam’s share should put it aside and either keep it in a safe place or bury it. In case of his death, he should turn it over to a trustworthy person to give to the Imam when he rises. As for the other half of the khums, which is called sadat share, it should be divided into three shares and distributed equally among the needy members of the Prophet’s family, i.e. the orphans, the poor and the penniless travellers.

Al-Mufid’s view was also held by such later scholars as al-Tusi, Abū al-Salah and Ibn Zahra al-Halabī. This consensus among the Fuqahā’ concerning the khums continued until the 7th/13th century. But since the twelfth Imam’s occultation prolonged, the believers did not know what to do with the Imam’s share in the khums, which they have been trusted with by their predecessors. By the beginning of the 7th AH/13th century the Imamite Fuqahā’, in particular, al-Muhaqiq al-Hillī wanted to solve this problem. He began receiving the Imam’s share in the khums and spent it on religious activities serving the Shi‘ite cause. This step taken by the later Fuqahā’ marked a break with the authority of the earlier Fuqahā’. It was a factor along with other previous factors for the extension of the role of the Fuqahā’ after the second occultation which can be seen in the following points:

Firstly, the prolongation of the occultation of the twelfth Imam enabled the Imamite fuqahā’ to develop their role from mere narrators of traditions into mujtahidūn. It has been noted that as regards legal statutes (al-Ahkām) the fuqahā’ used to consult the twelfth Imam via his four representatives during the time of the short occultation (260-329/874-941). In other words their main function was to narrate the traditions of the Imams, and they continued to perform this function in the early years of the second occultation. Thus they rejected the arguments based on reason (‘Aql) put forward first by Ibn ‘Aqīl al-‘Umanī (in the first half of the fourth/tenth century and then by Ibn al-Junayd al-Askāfī (d. 381/991). Both of these figures refined Imamite jurisprudence, put forward new ideas, separated the discussions about principles (usūl) from those about subordinates (furū‘) and based their method on the basic principles of jurisprudence. Their method was rejected by the Imamite Fuqahā’ because it might lead to wrong inference in finding the religious rules.
They considered it a sort of wrong analogy (qiṣṣaṣ fāsid) similar to that which was established and implemented by non-Shīʿite jurists.

The prolongation of the twelfth Imam’s concealment, which was attacked by Zaydite scholars and others, led the Imami jurists to introduce rational arguments in order to defend their belief in the existence of the twelfth Imam.65 Men who had been mere narrators of traditions became scholastic theologians (Mutakallimūn). This change in the role of the Fuqahāʾ can be seen in al-Mufid’s works. His works mark a break with earlier Imamite writing like al-Saffar and al-Kulaynī’s works which are purely collections of traditions, whereas al-Mufid’s are mainly treatises written in defence of the Imamite doctrine, in particular, the belief in the twelfth Imam’s occultation. Al-Mufid also was a narrator of traditions (Muḥaddith), but since he gave priority to the theological issues he was named the speaker of the Shiʿites (Mutakallim al-Shiʿa). Moreover with the passing of time new situations arose to which the shariʿa had to be applied, and since direct communication with the twelfth Imam had come to an end, someone had to be found to give an answer to these questions. Thus the Imamite Fuqahāʾ expanded their role by undertaking Ijtihād66 to answer such questions and to fill the vacuum which had been brought about by the concealment of the twelfth Imam. Al-Mufid may have been the first jurist to practice Ijtihād. Then al-Tūsī (d.460/1067) gave a definite shape to it.67

Secondly, in light of the first point it is clear that during the last quarter of the fourth/tenth century the Imamite Fuqahāʾ acquired authority to give legal judgements (faiwā) to a much greater extent than those who had been contemporary with the beginning of the second occultation and the dissolution of the underground organization. It has already been noted that after the death of al-Sammarī in 329/941 the Imamite agents and such fuqahāʾ as Muhammad b. Ahmad b. al-Walīd were expecting the Imam’s reappearance with the sword in the near future, and for this reason they refused to receive any of the khums supposing that it was forbidden for them to do so.68 But ever since the time of al-Mufid the fuqahāʾ have granted themselves authority to receive the sadat share of the khums in order to distribute it amongst the needy of the Prophet’s kindred. Since nothing was stipulated concerning the direct deputyship of the twelfth Imam,69 the Imamite fuqahāʾ gradually gained enough authority to act as his indirect representatives. They based their new position on traditions which lay down the role they were to have while the Imam was in hiding. Below are the main traditions which have been used in supporting the authority of the \textit{fuqahā’}:

i) The twelfth Imam issued a pronouncement (\textit{Tawqī’) in reply to Ishāq b. Ya’qūb via his second \textit{safīr}:

As for the events which will occur, turn to the narrators of our traditions, because they (the narrators) are my proof to you, while I am the proof of Allah to them.\textsuperscript{90}

ii) Al-Ṭabarsi mentions this tradition attributed to the eleventh Imam:

It is obligatory for the populace to follow the jurist who refrains from committing wrong, mentions his faith, opposes carnal desire, and obeys Allah’s command.\textsuperscript{91}

iii) Al-Ṭabarsi reports another transmission on the authority of the tenth Imam concerning the role of the \textit{fuqahā’}:

After the occultation of your \textit{Qā’im} a group of the ‘\textit{ulamā’} will call people to believe in his (\textit{al-Qā’im’s}) Imamate and defend his religion by using proofs sent by Allah, so that they might save the weak-minded faithful from either the deceptions of Satan and his followers, or the deceptions of the anti-‘Alids (\textit{al-Nawāsib}). If none of these ‘\textit{ulamā’} remain, then everyone will stray from the religion of Allah. However, as the pilot holds the rudder of the ship, the ‘\textit{ulamā’} will hold firmly onto the hearts of the weak-minded Shi‘ites, preventing them from straying.
Those ‘\textit{ulamā’} are the most excellent in the view of Allah the Exalted.\textsuperscript{92}

It is clear from the above traditions that the \textit{fuqahā’} must possess two qualities before they can acquire the right to be the deputies of the Imam without direct stipulation. Firstly they should be knowledgeable in the law. Secondly they should be just. Then, irrespective of their family, whether they are from the progeny of al-Ḥusayn or not, they are entitled to be deputies. It is worth repeating that the four \textit{safīrs} of the twelfth Imam were not descendants of ‘Alī. This may indicate that the twelfth Imam wanted to train and raise his followers to accept, after his complete occultation, the leadership of the just and knowledgeable \textit{fuqahā’}, even if they were not ‘Alids. Moreover, it can be noted that after the beginning of the complete occultation, the majority of able fuqahāʾ were not from the progeny of ‘Alī. Among such fuqahāʾ were al-Nuʿmānī (d. 360/970), al-Ṣadūq (d. 381/991), al-Mufīd (d. 413/1022).

151

In short the authority of the fuqahāʾ became so well-established amongst the Imamites that a considerable number of the later fuqahāʾ, such as al-Muhaqqiq al-Hillī (d. 676/1277) granted the faqīh complete authority over the deputyship of the hidden Imam.93 He gave himself as a faqīh the right to deal with the Imam’s share of the khums while the early fuqahāʾ like al-Mufīd only gave themselves authority over the part of the khums (sadat share) intended for the orphans, the poor, and the penniless travellers of the Prophet’s kindred. Al-Hillī argues that if the first half of the khums (the Imam’s share) is obligatory, then it must be distributed even during the Imam’s occultation, because that which Allah has made obligatory cannot be abrogated on account of the occultation of the Imam. He continues to assert that the one who is charged with distributing the share of the Imam according to the needs of the Prophet’s kindred must hold the deputyship of the Imam in legal matters i.e. that he must be one of the just Imamite fuqahāʾ.94

The extension of the authority of the Imamite fuqahāʾ as a result of the prolongation of the Imam’s occultation was a positive factor contributing to the unity of the Imamite community. It has been noted that after the death of each Imam, the Imamites split into various factions. This trend reached its peak on the death of the eleventh Imam in 260/874, when his followers divided into fourteen groups. But after the occultation of the twelfth Imam, the fuqahāʾ became united in their attempt to establish their own religious and political authority. The force which united them was the belief in the Imamate of the concealed Imam. As a result, Shiʿism was saved from splitting into further factions. Consequently, the number of its followers increased. The death of a faqīh who believed in the Imamate of the hidden Imam did not lead to a split amongst the faqīh’s followers, and they usually accepted the leadership of another Imamite faqīh. Thus all the fourteen factions which had grown up among the followers of al-ʿAskarī disappeared around the year 373/983 except for the one group which supported the Imamate of the twelfth Imam, who was in a state of complete occultation.95
CONCLUSION

The conclusion of the present work can be summarized as follows:

i) The problem of the nature of the Ghayba of the twelfth Imam is an old one in the history of Shi‘ism and is closely connected with the question of the Imama. From the beginning the Shi‘ites held that the Prophet could not have left his community without a leader to supervise the interpretation of the shari‘a and its implementation in society. On the contrary, he had appointed ‘Ali as his successor and stipulated that the leadership of the community should pass to al-Hasan and al-Ḥusayn, and thereafter to the eldest son of each subsequent Imam from the line of al-Ḥusayn until the rise of al-Mahdi.

However, the Imams were unable to rule the whole community after the death of the Prophet. Since political power had been usurped by others, the Imams were forced to seek to regain it according to those methods which they felt to be sound and legal, even though the political and economic resources of their opponents were stronger than their own, especially after the martyrdom of al-Ḥusayn. None of the Imams after al-Ḥusayn involved themselves directly in any obvious political activities or took part in direct incitement to revolt. In fact it seems that they restricted their activities to three major areas:

a) They encouraged the dissemination of Prophetic traditions amongst the people to acquaint them with the right of the People of the House of the Prophet (Ahl al-Bayt) to lead the community and to show them that their exclusion from actual political leadership did not mean that they were content to adopt a purely spiritual stance, nor did it imply tacit support of the government of the day. Indeed they were totally committed to their struggle to regain control, but only when circumstances indicated the probable success of their rebellion, and when they were sure of the support of a sufficient number of faithful followers to aid the revolution and to implement Islam according to the Imamite approach.

b) From the Imamate of al-Ṣādiq the Imams circulated Prophetic Ḥadīth amongst the Imamites themselves concerning the rise of an Imam from Ahl al-Bayt who would establish the righteous state. This Imam would be al-Qā'im al-Mahdī, who was mentioned in the Prophetic traditions. He would first go into a state of concealment from which he would continue to direct the affairs of the Imam. Then he would go into total occultation. But the majority of the traditions did not specify which Imam this would be, nor did they stipulate a definite date for his uprising. This obscurity allowed some Ālids to use these traditions to support their own political aims, without heeding the instructions of the Imam as regards the correct circumstances for the concealment and rising of al-Qā'im al-Mahdī. A clear example of this is seen in the case of the Ismāʿīlīs, who broke away from the Imamites and continued to carry out their activities secretly between the years 145-296/762-908, until one of them managed to reach power in the year 296/908, claiming the title al-Mahdī.

The Zaydites also used these traditions in their attempts to gain control, but lacked the precaution and careful planning of the Ismāʿīlīs and the Imamites. In fact the obscurity of these Ḥadīths, related from al-Ṣādiq was one of the reasons that some Imamites believed that the concealed Imam was Mūsā al-Kāzīm, who would rise as al-Qā'im al-Mahdī. These people were called the Waqīfīs.

c) The early Imams believed that any of them could be al-Qā'im al-Mahdī if the conditions were right but after the failure of their intended revolt in 140/757, they decided that it would be ill-advised to fix a particular date for another uprising. In this way the Imams hoped to encourage their followers in religious activities which would pave the way for more political matters at the appropriate time. At the same time they also secretly encouraged their most faithful followers, who found that they had no option but to rebel against unjust and tyrannical rulers. One of the results of these policies was the establishment of the Wikāla during the Imamate of al-Ṣādiq as a means of supervising the activities of the Imamites and guiding them towards the final aim of the Imams, namely the establishment of a truly Islamic state based entirely upon the sharī'a as interpreted and implemented by the Prophet and his Household.
ii) The ʿAbbāsid authorities were aware of the danger posed by the Shiʿites and especially by the Imamites. So they tried to turn the attention of the people away from the rights of Ahl al-Bayt (the People of the House) by fabricating Prophetic traditions which stated that the Imam after the Prophet was al-ʿAbbās and not ʿAlī. Simultaneously, they worked to divide the Shiʿites internally by appointing men from the Jarīriyya to certain sensitive posts, so that the Jarīriyya could investigate the Imamites and spread propaganda against them. After the failure of this policy, from the time of al-Maʿmūn the ʿAbbāsids instituted a new plan which was intended to curtail the revolutionary activities of the Shiʿites. Part of this plan was to make the Imams their courtiers so that they could watch their every move. This can be observed in the policy of al-Maʿmūn, who brought al-Riḍā from Medina to Merv and appointed him his heir apparent, keeping him under house arrest. Al-Maʿmūn followed a similar policy with the ninth Imam al-Jawād. Later the ʿAbbāsid caliphs followed al-Maʿmūn’s lead in their attitude towards the tenth Imam, al-Hādi, and his son al-ʿAskarī, both of whom were kept under house arrest in Sāmarrā for most of their lives. It thus became extremely difficult for the Imams to have normal relations with their followers, except their closest associates with whom they held secret meetings.

It seems likely that the house arrest of the later Imams led them to expand the role of the organization, the Wikāla, and to entrust the safīr with more authority to supervise the Imamites’ activities. From the time of al-Jawād onwards, the Imam began to guide the activities of his followers through his safīr. The ordinary Imamites found such a situation strange and had to be educated to accept such indirect communication with the Imam. However the role of the safīr during this period is not as obvious as his later position during the first occultation of the twelfth Imam, because the Imam’s whereabouts were well-known and his position clear.

It also seems that the continuation of the house arrest encouraged the Imams to find a means which might release them from its restrictions. From the years 245-250/859-64 onwards statements related on the authority of al-Hādi and al-ʿAskarī, indicating that an unnamed twelfth Imam would go into concealment, were circulating amongst the Imamites. Furthermore al-Hādi and al-ʿAskarī ordered their close agents to follow the instructions of ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd al-ʿUmarī and his son Abū Jaʿfar (i.e. the first and the second safīrs). It appears therefore that outwardly and historically the Imam’s first concealment grew from the desire of his fathers to evade the surveillance of the government of the day, so that he could safely perform the duties of the Imam.

iii) An attempt has been made in this study to prove that the eleventh Imam, al-‘Askari, left a single male successor, whose name was Muhammad and who was smuggled by his father from Sāmarra to Medina in 259/873. He was the twelfth Imam and his concealment began during the years 260-329/874-941. This was regarded as his first occultation, during which he continued to carry out his activities without disclosing his identity or his whereabouts, except to his four safirs and certain select followers.

The first occultation was distinguished by the widening of the role of the Wikāla. Throughout this period the four safirs directed the Imamites' activities. Their names were Uthmān b. Sa'id al-'Umari, Abū Ja'far Muḥammad b. Uthmān, al-Husayn b. Rūḥ al-Nawbakhtī and 'Ali b. Muḥammad al-Sammarī. Baghdad was the centre of activities for the safīr, who had agents in other provinces, beneath whom were many local agents.

A critical study of this period reveals that the main function of the safirs was to perform certain tasks previously undertaken by the Imams so as to save the Imam from the political pressure of the 'Abbāsids, which had been directed toward his predecessors from the time of al-Ma'mūn. The split amongst the Imamites after the death of al-'Askari in 260/874 led the first and the second safirs to concentrate their efforts upon re-uniting the Imamite ranks by proving the existence of the twelfth Imam and emphasizing that he was al-Qā'im al-Mahdī; that is, he who would undertake the elimination of oppressive government by militant means.

While the Imam was in hiding the role of the safīr continued to increase so that by the time of the fourth safīr, his statements began to be regarded as the statements of the Imam himself. It seems that the increased role of the safīr was the result of the instructions of the Imam himself, who wanted his followers to accept the leadership of the jurists until the moment of his reappearance.

iv) On the death of the fourth safīr in 329/941 no further safīr was appointed and all direct communications with the Imam came to an end, which meant the end of the Imamite Wikāla. This was also considered the beginning of the second occultation. At this stage the Imamites expected the Imam's reappearance in the near future, and as a result none of the jurists dared to act on behalf of the Imam.
However the prolongation of the occultation led them to attempt to fill the vacuum left by the death of the fourth safīr. They turned their attention to theological matters and became the leaders of the Imamites in this field. Gradually they came to be seen as the hidden Imam’s indirect deputies, who were leading the community and instructing in the law during his occultation.

Finally the concealment of the twelfth Imam seems to have been closely connected with two important phenomena: Firstly, with the occurrence of the second occultation, most of the Shi’ite revolts, particularly those of the Zaydite and the Imamites, gradually disappeared. Secondly, when the Imams were openly living amongst their followers, they suffered along with them from the oppression of the government, which was suspicious of their ambitions. But after the second occultation this oppression all but disappeared; and the Imamite jurists (Fuqahā) began to carry out their activities without encountering the difficult conditions faced by their predecessors. This encouraged one to put forward the idea that Imams were throughout their lives trying to recover their usurped right, the political leadership of the Islamic state, by means which they believed to be correct and legal, while after the second occultation this task fell upon the Imamites themselves under the leadership of the Fuqahā, a situation which has continued until the present day.

In other words, as long as the Muslims are not ready for such political transformation the rise of the hidden Imam, the expected Mahdī, will be far. During his occultation it is the task of his followers in particular the Fuqahā to make Muslims ready for this transformation. They should struggle to make them true committed Muslims practicing the shari’ā in its true sense in their daily life and in all aspects of society. The Fuqahā should convince the Muslims that their rightful leader is the hidden Imam, the expected Mahdī, who was divinely appointed and that he acquired this title, the Mahdī, because he will be ‘guided’ by Allah and will guide men to undertake a spiritual and political transformation of society.

Before the reappearance of the hidden Imam, the Fuqahā can assume political authority in order to disseminate the above tasks and to implement the rules of the shari’ā.
NOTES:

INTRODUCTION

1. The founder of this sect was Abū al-Jārūd Ziyād b. al-Mundhir, the companion of the fifth Imam, al-Bāqir. After the revolt of Zayd b. Ṭālib, Abū al-Jārūd abandoned his allegiance to al-Bāqir and put forward the claim of Zayd, establishing a new sect called al-Zaydiyya al-Jārūdiyya. Some later representatives of this sect agree with the Imámites that the series of the Imams ended with the number twelve but other claims that there were thirteen by including Zayd.

4. al-Najāšī, 32-3; T. al-Fihrist, 97-8.

11. al-Majlisī, Bihār al-Anwār (Tehran, 1395), LI, 300-1.

12. N. al-Ghayba, 143, 156, 163, 185.

13. N. al-Ghayba, 82-6, 100.

CHAPTER I.

4. Goldziher, al-

6. Tabari, II, 546, Ibn A’ītham reports a letter attributed to the Kufans, sent to al-Husayn b. ʿAlī encouraging him to rebel against the Umayyads, in which they used the title al-Mahdi for al-Husayn as an honorific adjective:

Ibn A’ītham, op. cit., V, 47.

7. Rajkowski, op. cit., 166-7. There is evidence which supports the claim that Ka’b narrated traditions attributed to the People of the Book which predict the rise of al-Mahdi. It is obvious from a line of poetry attributed to the poet Kutayr that those who applied this term to Muhammad b. al-Hanafiyya were influenced by Ka’b. This can be noted in Kuthayyir’s saying: Huwa al-Mahdi Akhbaruhu Ka’bun Akhū al-Akhbār fi al-Ḥuqab al-Khawālī; al-Zubayrī, Nasab Quraysh (Beirut, 1953), 41.

9. Al-Nawbakhti thinks that Ibn al-Hanafiyya died in 81/700 (Firaq, 24), whereas al-Ṣadūq puts his death in 84/703; Kamāl, 36; Ikhtiyār, 126.

11. N. Firaq, 25-6; Milal, 111-2; B. Firaq. 17, 27-8, 38.
12. N. Firaq, 29-30, 42-3. For a full account of the fact that the 'Abbāsid propaganda was the outcome of a branch of the Kaysānīyya movement, see al-Anṣārī, Madhāhib ibtada'athā al-Styūsa fi al-Islām (Beirut, 1973), 152-8, 199-214.

14. N. Firaq, 54; 'Uyūn, 155; Maqātil, 359; B. Firaq, 44.

15. Ibn Tāwūs, al-Iqbal, 53.

16. N. Firaq, 57; Kamāl, 37.

23. al-Kāfī, VIII, 287.

28. al-Tirmidhī, IX, 74, 75; and the Cairo edition, IV, 505-6.

30. Kamāl, 286-7. Al-Tirmidhī mentioned the same tradition on the authority of Ibn Mas'ūd without any details concerning the occultation of the Mahdī. Al-Tirmidhī, IV, 505-6; al-Dārimī, Sunan, IV, 151.

32. al-Tha'labī, 'Arā'is al-Majālis, 363; al-Kanjī, op.cit., 327.

35. Sulaym b. Qays al-Hilālī, Kitāb Sulaym b. Qays (Najaf, n.d.), 56, 159-62. Although this book has received some criticism with regard to its authenticity, a careful examination of its contents which show that it was regarded as a source by such writers as al-Kulaynī in al-Kāfī, al-Mas‘ūdī in al-Tanbih wa-l-Ishrāf and al-Nu‘mānī in Kitāb al-Ghayba.

37. For the Umayyad and the ‘Abbāsid use of the epithet al-Mahdī so as to gain political success, see al-Iṣḥāfānī, al-Aṣḥābī, XVI, 88; al-Dārīmī, Sunan, IV, 152.

39. al-Bukhārī, al-Sahih (Cairo, 1355), IV, 175; M. Sahih, III, 190-3; al-Tirmidhī, IV, 501; Ibn Hanbal, al-Masnad (Cairo, 1313), V, 294.

43. N. al-Ghayba, 48-9; Kamāl, 270-3.

44. For the biography of ‘Abbād and his Shi‘ī sympathies see Ibn Hibbān, al-Majrūhīn, II, 172; Mizān, II 379-80, IV, 149; al-Najāshī, 225.

45. al-Ḥilli, al-Īdāh, 176; al-Galbāyghānī, op. cit.; 5.

46. Mizān, II, 379-80

49. al-‘Aṣfārī, Aṣl Ahū Sa‘īd al-‘Aṣfārī, f. 2. Al-Kulaynī includes these traditions in his work al-Hujja, but, according to his transmission, the Prophet mentioned twelve Imams from his descendants and not eleven. Thus the number of the Imams along with ‘Alī would be thirteen. Because al-Kulaynī transmitted his narration on the authority of al-‘Aṣfārī, it appears that the latter’s version is more accurate. al-Kāfī, I, 533-4.

51. See as note 1.

53. al-Barqî, Kitâb al-Rijâl, 4, 7, 8, 9.
54. Ibn al-Nadîm, Al-Fihrist, I, 535; N. al-Ghayba, 47.
56. Ibid., 109-10, 124-5, 165-6, 201, 204-6.
57. al-Hilâlî, op. cit. 94; Kamâl, 285.
58. al-Hilâlî, op. cit. 95.
59. al-Masâ'dî, Al-Tanbih, 198.
60. al-Kâfî, I, 529; N. al-Ghayba, 38, 46, 274-8; T. al-Ghayba, 99.
61. Al-Tirmidhî, IV, 505-6; Al-Dârimî, Sunan, IV, 151.
63. Kamâl, 280. Another narration has been narrated by the companion Jâbir al-Ansârî, which confirms that al-Mahdî would be from the progeny of ʾAlî b. al-Ḥusayn (al-Tûsî, Al-Amâlî II, 251), but al-Sâhib b. ʾAbbâd doubts its authenticity; Nuṣrat, Madhâhib al-Zaydiyya, 208-9.
64. Al-Kâfî, I, 531-3; Al-Irshâd, 393; Dalâ'il, 236-8, 249-51.
65. Al-Hadramî, Aṣî Ja'far b. Muḥammad b. Shurayh, Ms. f. 32b; for other similar traditions see Al-Kâfî, VIII, 167, 536; Ibn Tâwûs, Al-Iqbal, 431.
67. Kamâl, 377. Al-Tûsî reports another narration attributed to the tenth Imam who stated explicitly that the twelfth Imam would be Al-Mahdî (T. al-Ghayba, 92). However, it might be that such narrations were not common among the Imámîtes. When the traditionist Al-Fâḍî b. Shâdhân (d. 260/874), talks about the role of Al-Qâ'im Al-Mahdî, he does not attach this epithet to the twelfth Imam; Ibn Shâdhân, Al-Iqâb, 475-6.
68. Al-Irshâd, 411; see also Al-Ṣanâ'înî, Al-Musannaf, XI, 472.
69. See Chapter II.
70. N. al-Ghayba, 104, 107, 159; Al-Hadramî, op. cit., f. 48a; Al-Kâfî, VIII, 264.
71. N. al-Ghayba, 106-7; Al-Kâfî, VIII, 264, 310.
72. N. al-Ghayba, 94, 96.
73. Al-Kâfî, II, 223.
74. N. al-Ghayba, 158.
The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

75. al-Kāfī, I, 342; Kamāl, 325.
76. T. al-Ghayba, 278.
77. al-Kāfī, I, 368-9; Bihār, LI, 212.
79. al-Kāfī, VIII, 225; N. al-Ghayba, 106, 160; al-Tabbāsī quotes a statement from Ibn Aṭīmah attributed to ʿAlī which states that the partisans of al-Mahdī will start their activities from al-Ṭalqān in Khurasān; al-Shīrāzī wa-l-Rafʿa, 141.
80. Kamāl, 654.
81. N. al-Ghayba, 104, 122, 123. Al-Ṣaffār reports that al-Qāʿīm will apply Islamic law according to the books of ʿAlī which he related directly from the Prophet; Baṣāʾir al-Darajāt, f. 124.
82. al-Ṣaffār, op. cit., f. 50; al-Kāfī, I, 298.
84. Ibn Shādhān, Ihbāʾ al-Rafʿa, quoted by al-Tabbāsī, op. cit., 221; al-Kāfī, VIII, 233; al-Ṣadūq, ʿIlāl, II, 267; al-Majlīsī includes in his work al-Bihār a book attributed to al-Mufaddī b. ʿUmar which deals with the occurrence which will take place after the rise of al-Qāʿīm; Bihār, LIII, 1-38; Dalāʾil, 239, 260; N. al-Ghayba, 148.
86. N. al-Ghayba, (the second edition), 308, 319.
87. al-Ḥimyārī, op. cit., quoted by al-Galbāgānī, op. cit., 305.
89. N. al-Ghayba, 103.
90. N. al-Ghayba, 105.
91. al-Kāfī, I, 240, 281, 370-2. Diʾbil the poet recited a line of poetry concerning the militant role of al-Qāʿīm in the presence of al-Riḍā; the latter confirmed this by saying that al-Qāʿīm would be from the progeny of al-Ḥusayn. Diʾbil, Diwān, 73, 76; Kamāl, 327-4.
92. N. al-Ghayba, 134, 139-40; Kamāl, 649; T. al-Ghayba, 286; al-Kāfī, VIII, 225, 310.
93. N. al-Ghayba, 136; T. al-Ghayba, 286; Bihār, LI, 232.
94. N. al-Ghayba, 94.

95. For his biography, see Ibn Dāwūd, Kitāb al-Riḍāl, 104.

98. N. al-Ghayba, 137; Bihār, LII, 232.

100. al-Kāfī, VIII, 209-210; al-Irshād, 404.

101. It is reported that the Prophet said, “The Mahdī is from my progeny. His name is similar to mine” (al-Tirmidhī, IV, 505). According to Abū Dāwūd, the Prophet also added, “And his father’s name is similar to my father’s name” (Abū Dāwūd, al-Sunan, IV, 106-7). According to the last phrase the name of al-Mahdī is Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh. Perhaps al-Mansūr took this point into account when he called his son, “Muḥammad al-Mahdī” (al-Bidāya, X, 89). For a full account see Osman, op. cit., 266-9.

102. See Chapter II.

103. Ithbāt, 205.

104. Ithbāt, 205.

106. Ithbāt, 262.

109. Ibn ʿUqda, Kitāb al-Malāḥīm, f. 72. According to al-Mufīd only the Zaydites denied the death of Yaḥyā b. ʿUmar and held that he was al-Mahdī (al-Fuṣūl al-ʿAshara, 30). But incidents seem to indicate that there was a common belief among the Imamiyya and the Ḥārūdiyya from the years 245-60 onwards that the twelfth Imam would be al-Qāʿim al-Mahdī, but they were not sure about his identity, and whether or not he would be the son of al-ʿAskārī.

111. Tabarī, III, 1683.

113. Murūj, VII, 404.

114. Tabarī, III, 1683-4; al-Kāfī, I, 500.
CHAPTER II

5. Kāshīf al-Ghīrā, Asr al-Nahīa wa-l-Istāḥah (Qumm, 1391), 51; Ahmad Amīn, Dhūhūl al-Islām (Cairo, 1936), III, 281-2; al-İsľahānī, Kitāb al-İsľahānī, XI, 300.

6. 'Abd Allāh b. Abbās b. 'Abd al-Muṭṭalib was one of the companions of the Prophet. He was born three years before the Prophet’s emigration to Medina and in the year 68/687 in Ta’if. He was famous in his deep knowledge about the interpretation of the Qur’an and the Prophetic tradition. Thus he acquired the title Ḥibrul-İmmāma the learned man of the nation. Ibn Hajar al-İsľahānī, al-Iṣbāb, II, 330-4.

8. al-Kāfī, I, 203-4, 545-6, 516. Several sources report that the other Imams received the khums and voluntary gifts from their followers, some of whom were working in the ʿAbbāsid offices, such as Hasan b. ʿAlīyā al-Asadi, who was the governor of Bahrain. According to another report, the ninth Imam, al-Jawād, ordered his followers to send him his share of the booty which they had seized from the Khurramiyya. al-Ṭūsī, al-Istibşār (Tehran, 1970), II, 58, 60-2; Maqāṭīl, 333.

11. For a full account of al-Ṣādiq’s statements concerning the future Mahdī see Kamāl, 333-59.

15. Ṭabarī, III, 261-3, 377-8; Mizān, IV, 211.

17. al-Kāfī, I, 478; Murūj, VI, 227.

21. al-Kāfī, I, 484.

22. al-Khaṭṭāb al-Baghdādī, Tārīkh Baghdad (Beirut, 1931), XIII, 31; Ṭabarī, III, 533; Ibn Ṭūlūn, al-Shadharāt al-Dhahabiyya (Beirut, 1958), 96.

23. Ṭabarī, III, 506-7; al-Fakhrī, 136.

24. Ṭabarī, III, 508; al-Sadūq agrees with al-Ṭabarī about the persuasion of Yaʿqūb b. Dāwūd, but he mentions that he was converted to the Imamite school about 179/795. See ʿUyūn, 60. However, Yaʿqūb belonged to a Shīʿite family from Merv. His father and uncle helped promote ʿAbbāsid propaganda in Khurasān. Later Yaʿqūb himself was associated with al-Nafs al-Zakiyya in his revolt in 145/762, after which he was imprisoned until 158/774-5. Shaban, op. cit., 21.

25. N. Firaq, 43; Watt, Formative Period, 155; according to al-Balkhī this claim was invented by the Rawandiyya after the death of al-Mahdī. However, it appears that the Rawandiyya had held this claim at the instigation of al-Mahdī himself. Al-Qādī ‘Abd al-Jabbār, op. cit., II, 177

29. Ikhtiyār, 269-70.

30. al-Yaʿqūbī, III, 142. It is clear from the prominent persons who took part in this revolt that it was Zaydite, for example Yahyā, Sulaymān and Idrīs, the brothers of al-Nafs al-Zakīyya, who rebelled in the year 145/762 against al-Mansūr. Moreover Ibrāhīm b. Ismāʿil Tabātābā was the father of Muhammad b. Tabātābā, the spiritual leader of the Zaydite revolt which took place in Kufa in 199/814 (Maqaṭīl, 297, 304). It is worth mentioning that al-Ṣāhib b. ‘Abbād considered the individuals mentioned above as Zaydite; al-Ṣāhib b. ‘Abbād. Nusrāt Madhāḥib al-Zaydiyya (Baghdad, 1977), 222.

32. ‘Ibar. III, 215-6. Al-İṣfahānī mentions two narrations about the attitude of al-Kāzīm. The first one reveals that he refused to participate in the revolt, while the second shows that he ordered Yahyā al-Mahdī to rise in arms; Maqaṭīl, 298, 304. There is evidence showing that al-Kāzīm did not take part in this revolt but encouraged the rebels to fight the ‘Abbāsids vigorously.; al-Kāfī, I, 366.

34. al-Kāfī, I, 494. The Imamite activities in Egypt may have started in Akhmin during the time of al-Sādiq, because some people of Akhmin such as ʿUthmān b. Suwayd al-Akhmīmī and Dhū al-Nūn al-Misrī were students of Jābir b. Ḥayyān al-Kūfī, who was a student of al-Sādiq (al-Qiftī, Tārīkh al-Ḥukamā [Leipzig, 1903], 185; al-Shībī, op. cit., 360). Among al-Kāzīm’s Kufan agents in Egypt were ʿUthmān b. ʿĪsā al-Rawāṣī and al-Ḥusayn b. ʿAlī al-ʿUyūn, 92; al-Najāshī, 52, 230.

35. Ikhtiyār, 442.

36. Ikhtiyār, 433. For a full account of other names see al-Najāshī, 104, 158, 254-5.

37. Tabari, III, 561, 609, 612, 740; al-Yaʿqūbī, III, 166; al-Kāfī, II, 224-5. Al-Kashshī mentions that the family of Banū al-Asḥath sent the zakāt (30,000 dinars) to the agent of al-Kāzim in Kufa, which seems to confirm their Imamite inclinations; Ikhtiyār, 459.

41. N. Firaq, 64.

42. Al-Kulaynī mentions this on the authority of ʿAlī b. Jaʿfar al-Šādiq. His narrations states that Muḥammad b. Ismāʿīl met his uncle al-Kāzim in Mecca and asked him to allow him to go to Baghdad. Al-Kāzim did so and gave him 300 dinars and 3000 dirhams for the expense of his journey. Then he warned his nephew not to bring about his death by giving the authorities information concerning his activities. However, Muḥammad contacted the caliph Hārūn al-Rashīd and informed him that his uncle was considered the real caliph by the people who had visited him; al-Kāfī, I, 485-6. Also see Ikhtiyār, 263-5; Ibn Ḥazm, Jamāḥat Anṣāb al-ʿArab (Cairo, 1971), 60.

43. al-Fakhrī (Gotha, Greifswald, 1860), 195-6, 227-8; al-Kāfī, I, 366.

45. Ṭabarī, III, 612-3; al-Fakhrī, 231; al-Kulaynī records a correspondence between Yahyā al-Mahd and al-Kāzim, which indicates that the latter had nothing to do with this revolt; al-Kāfī, I, 366-7.

47. Ṭabarī, III, 606.

50. Because Sulaymān succeeded in killing Idrīs, the Caliph al-Rashīd appointed him to the barid of Egypt, and had the previous official Wādīḥ, who had helped Idrīs in his escape to al-Maghrib, killed; Ṭabarī, III, 561.

53. Ikhtiyār, 258-63.

underground activities (al-Kāfī, I, 485-6). Whereas the arrest of al-Kāzīm was part of the general plan of the Caliph which he carried out against the Imámites, several remarks suggest that the viziers Banū al-Marmak were behind al-Rashîd’s plan, in order to bring about the fall of their Imamite competitors in the ‘Abbasid ministry, the family of Banū al-Ash‘ath; al-Kāfī, II, 224-5; Ikhtiyār, 258.

55. al-Kāfī, I, 476; N. Firaq, 71-2.

56. Ibn al-Mu‘tazz, Tabaqāt al-Shu‘arā‘ (Cairo, 1956), 244.

57. According to al-Najāshī and al-Tūsī, Hishām’s death occurred in 199/814. But it seems that he died before that. Al-Kashshī associates his death with the arrest of al-Kāzīm in 179/795. In that year Hishām attended a theological symposium in the presence of al-Rashîd and Yahyā al-Barmakī. Later al-Rashîd issued an order to arrest al-Kāzīm and his partisans. Hence Hishām escaped to Madā‘in, then to Kūfah where he died two months later; al-Najāshī, 338; T. al-Fihrist, 355; Ikhtiyār, 255-6, 258-62.

58. N. Firaq, 67; Ikhtiyār, 258; al-Kāfī, I, 258-9; al-Ya‘qūbī relates that the ‘Alid underground activities were probably quite strong in Baṣra. The increase in the activities of the missionary of this group, Ahmad b. ‘Isa al-‘Alawī, who spent sixty years hidden there, finally caused al-Rashîd to pursue them. Ahmad b. ‘Isa was imprisoned, but he managed to escape to Baṣra in 188/803. Then ‘Abbāsids spies detected the missionary and the agent of his group, Ḥādir, who refused to reveal the place of his leader; so they killed him and impaled his body in Baghdad; al-Ya‘qūbī, III, 160.

59. ‘Uyūn, I, 89-90, II, 143.

60. N. Firaq, 67-8, 70; Q. Maqālāt, 89-91; al-Najāshī, 61, 258, 230-31. It seems from the report of al-Kashshī that Muhammad b. Bashir and his followers applied the term al-Mahdī to al-Kāzīm, whose death they denied, giving him the epithet al-Qā’im al-Mahdī (Ikhtiyār, 478). Such evidence indicates that the Imamites already knew about the rise of one of their Imams under the title of al-Qā’im al-Mahdī, but they were not sure who this would be.

63. al-Kāfī, I, 312; Q. Maqālāt, 89.

64. Ikhtiyār, 464-5,472.

65. Ibid., 591-2.

66. Most of the eastern Sufi movements trace their origins to Ma‘ruf al-Karkhī (d. 200/815), who was a companion of al-Riḍā. They regarded al-Riḍā as of the Sufi movement, but at the same time they did not believe in his Imamate. For an account of this relation see al-Shībī, op. cit.

170
67. ʿUyun, II, 234-5.

69. Ibn Aṭīḥam al-Kūfī, op. cit., VIII, 312-3. The most dangerous revolt was the rebellion of Naṣr b. Shabth in al-Jazira. Another serious revolt was the protest of the populace (al-ʿAmma) of Baghdad against the installation of al-Riḍā as heir-apparent by al-Maʿṣūm. Thus they installed Ibrahim b. al-Mahdi as a caliph there; Bidayā, X, 280-2; al-Kāmil, VI, 230.

70. It is clear from the reports of ʿTabarī and al-Najāshī that the rebels did not believe in the Imamate of a specific ʿAlid Imam, but they supported the Imamate of him who would rise in arms in order to establish his rights to this office (Tabarī, III, 979, 1019; al-Najāshī, 194). They wrote on the coins which they minted in Kufa a Qurʾānic verse (al-Saff, LI, 4) revealing their revolutionary inclination. Al-Isfahānī and al-Sāḥib b. ʿAbbād considered it a Zaydite uprising; Maqātil, 347, 350; ʿUyun, II, 235; Ibn ʿAbbād, op. cit., 222.

71. Murūj, VII, 56.

72. A considerable body of the followers of al-Riḍā participated in this revolt without his instruction. Perhaps they noticed that the brothers of their Imam were prominent leaders of the revolt, and thought that al-Riḍā was behind their participation. Hence they joined it. There were men like Muhammad b. Muslama al-Kūfī (Tabarī, III, 989), who was regarded by al-Najāshī as trustworthy (al-Najāshī, 286; ʿUyun, II, 234-5). It seems from al-Riḍā’s interpretation of a dream of one of his partisans concerning an expected uprising that he already knew of the activities of his kinsmen; al-Kāfī, VIII, 257.

73. al-Dāwa li-l-Riḍā min ʿAl Muḥammad wa-ʿAmal bi-l-Kitāb wa-l-sunna.

74. Tabarī, III, 976-79.

75. al-Kāmil, VI, 214-16; Maqātil, 355; Tabarī, III, 981-3, 988. Al-Āzraqī reports that Abū al-Sarāyā sent a kiswa of silk to the Kaʿba in two colours, white and yellow, the former of which was the colour of the ʿAlids’ standard. Between the two parts was written: “In the name of God, the Merciful, the Compassionate. May God bless Muhammad and his progeny, the noble descendants, the pure, and the best of the human race. Abū al-Sarāyā, he who invites people to rally behind Āl Muḥammad has ordered that this kiswa be made for the holy House of God.” al-Āzraqī, Akhbār Makkah (Mecca, 1965), I, 263, 264.

76. al-Najāshī, 194; Maqātil, 354; Gibb, H. A. R., “Abū al-Sarāyā”, E.I.

77. Maqātil, 363-6; Tabarī, III, 985-6.

78. Ikhtiyār, 472.

79. Al-Kulaynī reports several traditions on the authority of ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn and al-Ṣādiq regarding this point, al-Kāfī, VIII, 264, 310.

80. Tabarī, III, 990.
81. Maqātil. 359; ʿUyūn, 155.
82. al-Ḡāfi, I, 491; Maqātil, 360.
83. al-Ḡāfi, I, 488-9; ʿUyūn, II, 146; Ṭabarī, III, 1000.
85. al-Ḡāfi, I, 489, VIII, 151; ʿUyūn, 138-40; Ṭabarī, III, 1012-3.
86. Khāṭib, X, 184. Concerning Umm Ḥabība, ʿl-Ṭabarī thinks that she was the daughter of Maʿmūn, but Ibn Ṭūlūn reports that she was his sister. The age of Maʿmūn at that time was 30; therefore one is inclined to accept Ibn Ṭūlūn’s report; Ibn Ṭūlūn, op. cit., 97.
87. al-Yaʿqūbī, III, 185; al-Kāmil, VI, 227.
88. Watt, Formative Period, 176. Al-Kulaynī reports that al-Maʿmūn asked al-Riḍā to write to his followers in the areas of revolt, asking them to stop their support of the rebels; al-Ḡāfi, VIII, 151.
89. Several anecdotes indicate that the ʿAlids’ standard was white. The followers of Abū al-Sarāyā were called “al-Mubayyida” in reference to the standard of ʿĀli (al-Aʿrafa, op. cit., I, 263-4). Naʿīm b. Khāzim, an Arab advisor of al-Maʿmūn, warned the latter against adopting the advice of al-Fadl b. Sahl in installing al-Riḍā. He pointed out to him that his vizier was not sincere to the ʿAlids, because he suggested the green colour, the sign of his ancestors, the Sasanids, instead of the white, the standard of ʿĀli and his sons (J. Wuzarāʾ, 313). When al-Maʿmūn asked al-Riḍā to perform the Friday prayer, the latter wore a white turban and white clothes (ʿUyūn, II, 149). Finally the Imamas narrate that the banners of the followers of al-Qāʾim al-Mahdī would be white (Najm al-Dīn al-ʿAskarī, al-Mahdī al-Mawʿūd al-Muntazār [Beirut, 1977], I, 177).
90. Ṭabarī, III, 1019-20; also al-Kāmil, VI, 242.
91. Ṭabarī, III 1029; al-Kāmil, VI, 248.
92. al-Yaʿqūbī, III, 184, 190.
93. N. Firaq, 72-3; Ikhtiyār, 501-2; ʿUyūn, II, 151-2.
95. al-Ḡāfi, I, 486, 490; Murūj, VIII, 57, 61; ʿUyūn, I, 186, 188; Shaban, op. cit., 47.
96. al-Kāmil, VI, 253; Aḥmad b. Ṭāhir b. Ṭayfūr, Tārīkh Baghdad (Cairo, 1949), 10.
97. ʿUyūn, II, 188.
98. al-Yaʿqūbī, III, 204; according to the account of al-Kulaynī both were Imamites and the father of the first, Yahyá b. al-Husayn, supported the Imamate of al-Riḍā (al-Ḡāfi, I, 316). Al-Najashi reports that the grandson of the second,
Yaḥyā b. Ahmad b. Muhammad, was a prominent Imamite in Nishapur; al-Najāshī, 345; Abū al-Fidā, al-Mukhtāṣar fī Akhbār al-Bashrī, II, 32.

99. Ṭabarī, III, 1039; al-Kāmil, VI, 253.

101. Ṭabarī, III, 1040.

102. Ṭabarī, III, 1062-3; al-Kamal, VI, 269.

103. N. Fīraq, 85-7; Q. Maqālāt, 93-5; al-Najāshī, 19.

104. Ithbāṭ, 213-5.

105. al-Najāshī, 21, 67-8, 141, 294.

106. al-Kāfī, I, 494.

108. Ikhtiyār, 611-2; al-Najāshī, 265.

109. al-Kāfī, V, 111.

110. Bihār, L, 44-5.

111. Ikhtiyār, 487; al-Najāshī, 180.

112. Ithbāṭ, 213, 215.

113. al-Kāfī, I, 548; T. al-Ghayba, 227; Bihār, L, 37-8.

115. Ibid., 80, 98; Mizân, IV, 276.

117. al-Azī, 368.

118. Ibn Shahr Āshūb, Manāqib Āl Abī Ṭālib, IV, 397; al-Azī, 368.

119. Ṭabarī, III, 1092-3, 1102; al-Kāmil, VI, 264, 293.

120. Ṭabarī, III, 1102.

121. Ṭabarī, III, 1103; al-Azī, 399.

122. Ṭabarī, III, 1106, 1111; al-Kāmil, VI, 286-7.
123. Muhammad b. al-Qāsim was the Imam of the revolutionary Zaydites during al-Jawād’s period. When al-Mu’taṣim endeavoured to arrest him, he escaped from Kufa and revolted in al-Tālqān. But al-Mu’taṣim captured him and imprisoned him in Sāmarrā’. Then he disappeared from jail mysteriously. Thus a considerable body of the Zaydites in the districts of Kufa, Ṭabaristān, Daylam and Khurasān held that he did not die but was alive and would rise in arms to fill the earth with justice after it had been filled with tyranny; Murūj, VI, 116-7.

128. The flourishing state of the ʿAbbāsid economy can be noted in al-Muʿtaṣim’s ability to recruit a new garrison, mainly from the Turks of Caucasus, and to establish a new capital, Sāmarrā’. His successor al-Mutawakkil followed in his footsteps, establishing another garrison, which he called al-Shākiriyya, by recruiting people from the western provinces of the empire. Later al-Shākiriyya garrison was enlarged by al-Mutawakkil until it became his official army. Furthermore he established a new capital called al-Jaʿfariyya. According to al-Masʿūdi, after his death he left four million dinars and seven million dirhams in the treasury. Murūj, VII, 276-7; Shaban, op. cit., 76.

129. Maqălāt, 394; al-Fakhřī, 176.

130. al-Yaʿqūbī, III, 216.

131. Ṭabarī, III, 1368.

133. Ṭabarī, III, 1373-5; see also al-Kāfī, I, 498.

134. Shaban, op. cit., 72-5; 76.

135. Al Masʿūdī and Ibn Ḥāzm mention that Jaʿfar b. Ismāʿīl b. Mūsā al-Kāzim was killed by Ibn al-Aghlab in al-Maghrib during the caliphate of al Muʿazz (Murūj, VII, 404; Ibn Ḥāzm, op. cit., 64), which suggests that Jaʿfar may have been sent there by his father to preach to the people concerning the ʿAlids’ rights to the caliphate.

137. al-Yaʿqūbī, III, 217.

138. Ikhtiyār, 603, 607; T. al-Ghayba, 226-7; Bihār, L, 183.

139. Ikhtiyār, 513-4.
NOTES

140. Ithbāt, 225-6; Biḥār, L, 209.

141. Ṭabarī, III, 407; Murūj, VII, 302. Many early sources represent the ʿAbbāsid view, and contemporary scholars claim that the reason behind the demolition of al-Husayn’s tomb was that the Shiʿa had made it an alternative centre for pilgrimage (Maqātil, 395; al-Tikriti, The Religious Policity of al-Mutawakkil ʿAla Allāh al-ʿAbbāsī [232-47/847-68], M. A. Dissertation [McGill University, Canada, 1969], 58, 63). But all the narrations espousing this view are attributed to a single narrator called Ahmad b. al-Jiʿd who was a loyal supporter of the ʿAbbāsids. Perhaps he gave this interpretation to excuse the action of the caliph, whose aim was to stop the underground activities of the Shiʿa, who used their visit to the tomb of al-Husayn as a means of communication. In addition the caliph wanted to eliminate any sign of the grave, which might revive the revolutionary trends amongst the Shiʿa.

142. Ṭabarī, III, 1404.

143. al-Kindī, Wilāʾ Misr. (Beirut, 1972), 177-8.

145. Maqātil, 396.

146. Murūj, VII, 238-9; al-Kāfī, I, 500.

147. al-Kindī, op. cit., 230.

149. Murūj, VII, 207.

150. Ibid., VII, 302.

151. al-Kindī, op. cit., 229.

152. al-Kāfī, I, 511, 513.

153. Manāqib, IV, 416.

154. al-Arbiṭ, Kashf al-Ghumma, III, 247. The gāḍī of Kufa at that time was Jaʿfar b. ʿAbd al-Wāḥid. The caliph al-Mustaʿ in removed him from this office and exiled him to Basra where he died in 257/780; Mizān, I, 413.

157. Ṭabarī, III, 1522.
CHAPTER III

2. The reports of the early Shi'a authors like al-Kulaynî, Sa'd al-Qummi and al-Mufid did not reveal any external cause for al-'Askari's death (al-Kâfî, I, 509; Q. Maqālât, 101-2, al-Irshād, 377, 383, 389; al-Mufid, al-Muqni‘a fi al-Fiqh [Iran, 1274], 72-5; and his Taṣbih Fiṭiqādāt al-Imamiyya [Tabriz, 1371], 63,) but the later Shi'a authors followed al-Tabarî, who claimed that the Imam was poisoned or killed. He based this assumption on a tradition whose chain of transmitters related to al-Sadîq, who said, "None of us die naturally, but are killed or martyred." (al-Tabarsî, Fi‘lām al-Warâ‘, 349; Muhammad b. Ja‘far al-Tabarî, Dalā‘il al-Imāma [Najaf, 1369], 223, Ibn Shahr Āshūb, Manāqib, IV, 421; Bihār, L, 236-8, 335, Muhammad al-Sadr, Tārīkh al-Ghayba al-Sughrā [Beirut, 1972], 230-4).

7. Al-Barqī and al-Kulaynī mention many traditions with different chains of transmitters asserting that the world cannot be without a Proof (Hujja); al-Barqī, al-Maḥāsin (Tehran, 1370/1950), 92, 234-6; al-Kāfī, I, 178-80, 514; see also Dalā'il, 229-30; Ahmad b. ʿAlī al-Ṭabarṣī, al-Iḥtiyāj (Najaf, 1966), II, 48-9, 78.

11. Because of the way al-Shahristānī classifies his information on these schisms, it seems that his study is based on the works of al-Nawbakhtī and al-Ashʿarī. Al-Nawbakhtī deemed the Imamite sub-divisions to be as many as fourteen, although his work in its present form counts only thirteen. Fortunately al-Mufīd, who discusses the various factions on the authority of al-Nawbakhtī, mentions the fourteenth faction, which is missing from al-Nawbakhtī’s work. Al-Masʿūdī does not give any details on the splits. Later al-Nawbakhtī’s work became more circulated than Sa’d al-Qummī’s work, because the latter contains opinions on the occultation which contrast with the official opinion of the later Imamites from the fifth/eleventh century onwards; al-Qummī’s book was gradually withdrawn from these circles; N. Firaq, 79; al-Fuṣūl al-Mukhtāra, 258-60; Murūj, VIII, 50, Milāl, 130-1.

20. Al-Faṭḥiyā: A Shiʿite sect which arose after the death of Jaʿfar al-Ṣādiq, the sixth Imam, who contended that the Imamate had passed on from al-Ṣādiq not to Mūsā but to his eldest son, ʿAbd Allah, according to the tradition which says that the Imamate can only be vested in the eldest son, with the condition that he should be free from any bodily defects (al-Kāfī, I, 285; Ikhtiyār, 282-3). They were also called al-Faṭḥiyā as an allusion either to ʿAbd Allah b. Jaʿfar because he had broad feet or was broad-headed, or it referred to their leader, who was called 'Abd Allah al-Aftah: N. Firaq 65; al-Fuṣūl al-Mukhtāra, 248-51; Ikhtiyār, 254.
The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

22. Al-badā' means the appearance of something or some knowledge after it has been concealed. In theological terms, it is a dogma which deals with the question of whether or not it is possible for God to change His decision about something. The theologians maintain that this is impossible, even if it often appears to happen, as for example, when Ja'far al-Ṣādiq designated Ismā'īl as his successor according to God's command. For when Ismā'īl died, God then ordered Ja'far to designate Mūsā al-Kāzim as his successor. So it seems that God changed his decision about who was to succeed Ja'far. But in fact, God's eternal knowledge never changes. What changes is the degree to which men are cognizant of that knowledge. Hence the doctrine of al-badā' states that God's ultimate judgement about something often appears to men only after first having been concealed. It declares that God cannot have changed His decision, for that would imply that His knowledge changes, or that He was ignorant and then gained knowledge. Finally, the Imamītes hold that Goes does allow certain people to have knowledge of His ultimate judgement. Bandar, A., 'Aqidat al-Badā' (Baghdad, 1976); also a letter from the author dated 15th January 1978.

23. N. Firaq, 99; al-Shahristānī's information concerning this sect is confused. He claims that Fāris b. Hātim, not his sister, was a follower of Ja'far, but Faris had been assassinated by the order of al-'Askari himself; see Milāl, 129; Ikhtiyār, 524.

24. For the dogma of Fāris b. Hātim, his political activities in Qazwin and Sāmarrā, and his assassination, see Ikhtiyār, 522-8; al-Najāshī, 238; T. al-Ghayba, 238.

25. Al-Nawbakhtī and al-Qummī mention that a group maintained that Ja'far was the Imam after al-'Askari not by the testament of his brother but by that of his father. Thus they held that the adoption of the Imamate of al-'Askarī was incorrect and that people should go back to the Imamate of Ja'far; N. Firaq, 82-3; Q. Maqālāt, 110-1; al-Fuṣūl al-Mukhtāra, 259.

26. For this tradition see al-Kāfi, I, 285-6; T. al-Ghayba, 146.

27. N. Firaq, 79; Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Qubba, al-Insāfī al-Imāma, quoted in Kamāl, 55.

29. Ibid., 511; Bihār, LIII, 190-1.

31. Q. Maqālāt, 103.

32. Q. Maqālāt, 109.
33. N. Firaq, 84.
34. T. al-Ghayba, 128-9; al-Fusul al-Mukhtara, 259.
35. Q. Maqalat, 114; N. Firaq, 84-5; Milal, 130.
37. Q. Maqalat, 114; T. al-Ghayba, 147; al-Mufid also mentions this faction but thought that they held the same dogma as al-Qat’iyya (The Twelvers); al-Fusul al-Mukhtara, 259-60.
38. Q. Maqalat, 114; N. Firaq, 85; al-Fusul al-Mukhtara, 261; Milal, 130.
39. Al-Nawbakhti’s information about this sect is confused, whereas al-Qummi and al-Mufid are much clearer in their presentation; N. Firaq, 85-6; Q. Maqalat, 114-5; al-Fusul al-Mukhtara, 260.
40. T. al-Ghayba, 60.
41. al-Fusul al-Mukhtara, 260.
42. Q. Maqalat, 102-4; Abû Sahl al-Nawbakhtî, Kitâb al-Tanbih, quoted in Kamal, 88; al-Insâf, quoted in Kamal, 61.
43. This group dated his birth as mentioned but the later Imamites differ about it. Ibn Rustam al-Tabari dates it as 15th Sha’ban 257, while al-Kulayni mentions several traditions giving the dates 252,255 and 256 respectively. Al-Sadûq and al-Mufid follow al-Kulayni on this point. Some of the factions opposed to the Imamites may have abandoned their claims and joined the Imamites, who then accepted their differing transmissions concerning the birth of the twelfth Imam; al-Kâfi, I, 514-16; Dalâ’îl, 271; al-Fusul al-Mukhtara, 258; Kamal, 430.
44. al-Insâf, quoted in Kamal, 55-6.
45. N. Firaq, 90-91.
47. Milal, 130-1; N. Firaq, 88-9.
49. Q. Maqalat, 108-9; T. al-Ghayba, 147.
50. Kamal, 485,487.
52. T. al-Ghayba, 142-6; al-Fusul al-Mukhtara, 261.
53. Ithbât, 248. For the later authors who named her as Narjis see al-Irshad, 390; T. al-Ghayba, 153, 158; *Uyûn, 32-3.
The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

54. Biḥār, LI, 28, quoted from al-Dirūs.
57. Ṭabarî, III, 1434.
58. Ikhtiyār, 147-8; al-Najāshī, 298; Ibn Dāwūd, al-Rijāl, 541.
59. al-Kāfi, I, 323.
60. N. al-Ghayba, 84, 85, 120; Kamāl, 329.
62. T. al-Ghayba, 134-9; Dalā’il, 262-4.
63. al-Irshād, 390-1.
64. Kamāl, 431.
65. al-Najāshī, 268.
67. al-Kāfi, I, 178; N. Fīraṣ, 91.
68. al-Kāfi, I, 285-6; Abū Sahl al-Nawbakhtī states in his work al-Tanbih that the main argument used by the Imamites to prove the existence of the twelfth Imam was the traditions of the preceding Imams, which had been narrated before the death of the eleventh Imam in 260/874; quoted in Kamāl, 92-3; also see N. Fīraṣ, 90-91; Q. Maqālāt, 102.
69. N. al-Ghayba, 90.
70. T. al-Ghayba, 90.
72. For example, see al-Kāfi, I, 514; Kamāl, 424; al-Irshād, 390. However, Ibn Rustam al-Ṭabarî mentions that al-ʿAskari’s son was born on the 8th of Shaʿbān, 257/870; Dalā’il, 272.
73. Q. Maqālāt, 114; al-Sadūq reports a narration the authority of Yaʿqūb b. Manṣūr who claimed that al-ʿAskari had shown him his son, whose age at that time was between eight and ten years old; Kamāl, 407.
74. al-Kāfi, I, 329; al-Irshād, 390-1.
75. T. al-Ghayba, 150-1, 153.
76. al-Kāfi, I, 514-5.

78. Q. Maqālāt, 114; N. Firaq, 85.

80. According to al-Tabari, Abū Hāshim al-Ja`fari died in 261/875; Ṭabarî, III, 1887.

82. Ithbāt, 251.

83. According to al-Kulaynī the tenth Imam, al-Hādī, died on 26 Jumādā II, 254/2 June 869; al-Kāfī, I, 497.

84. Kamāl, 432.

87. Ithbāt, 261-2.

88. According to al-Kulaynī each Imam when he comes out from the womb of his mother puts his hands on the ground and holds his head towards the sky, and then recites some Qur’anic verses; al-Kāfī, I, 386.

89. al-Qasas, XXVIII, 5-6.

90. Kamāl, 424-6; the account of the birth of the twelfth Imam has been related in the Imamites’ works with some differences in detail. See Ithbāt, 248-50; T. al-Ghayba, 150-4; Dalā’il, 269-70. All the Imamite sources agree that al-‘Askari left only one son; al-Ṣadūq, however, reports a narration on the authority of Ibrāhīm al-Māzyār which indicates that al-‘Askari had two sons, Muḥammad and Mūsā, who were living in Hijaz. A critical study of the context of the narration and its chain of transmitters suggests it was invented, mainly because the narrator Ibrāhīm b. al-Māzyār died before 260/874, whereas according to the narrative al-‘Askari’s sons were mature, and this is unlikely if the twelfth Imam was born in 256/874; Kamāl, 445-53.

93. I’tilāl, 245; Kamāl, 316.

The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

97. al-Kāfī, I, 333.

98. Ibid., VIII, 247.

99. The Imamite works record the names of many individuals who saw the son of al-ʿAskarī. One report attributed to Muḥammad b. ʿUthmān, the second saḥīr of the twelfth Imam, says that al-ʿAskarī gathered together forty of his reliable followers and showed them his son; Kamāl, 435; al-Kāfī, I, 330-1; T. al-Ghayba, 148, 152.

100. Kamāl, 429.

101. Ithbāt, 247-8, 253.

102. al-Kāfī, I, 328, 240; N. al-Ghayba, 99-100; T. al-Ghayba, 149.

104. al-Kāfī, I, 339.

105. al-Fuṣūl al-ʿAshara, 13.

106. Al-Ḥasan b. Muḥammad was related to an Umayyad family called Āl Abī al-Shawārīb. During the ʿAbbāsid period most of his relatives worked in the office of Judge (al-Qādī). As part of his anti-shīʿite policy al-Mutawakkil included al-Ḥasan b. Abī al-Shawārīb among his courtiers (Tabarī, III, 1428). Later al-Muʿtazz appointed him chief judge in 252/866 (Tabarī, III, 1684). Three years later he was discharged from his office, but recovered it during al-Muʿtadid’s regime. He continued in this office until his death in Mecca in 261/875; Tabarī, III, 1787, 1790-1, 1891, 1907.

107. al-Kāfī, I, 505; Kamāl, 43.

108. Kamāl, 43.

109. Ibid., 476-8.

110. Kamāl, 473.

111. Ibid., 476.

112. Ibid., 474.

113. al-Fuṣūl al-ʿAshara, 13.

114. According to Imamite law, if a dead person leaves a mother and a son and a brother, the brother has no right to take anything from the estate; al-Ṣadūq, al-muqntāʾa (Tehran, 1377), 171; Kamāl, 47, 58.

CHAPTER IV

2. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 224-5. Al-Ṭūsī thinks that Ibn al-Ḥajjāj died during the time of al-Ṛṣālā, but al-Masʿūdī reports that he was still alive after al-Ṛṣālā’s death in 203/818; Ithbāt, 213.

3. al-Kāfī, II, 557; Ikhtiyār, 381; al-Ṣadiq, Man lā Yaḥdūruh al-Faqīḥ (al-Mashyakha), IV, 67. The date of his death is not mentioned. However, al-Kashshāḥī reports that Dāwūd b. ʿAlī, who killed Muʿāwiyah, died a few days after Muʿāwiyah, and according to al-Dhahabi, Dāwūd died in 133/750 (Mizān, II, 14). So the persecution of Muʿāwiyah must have occurred in the same year.

4. Ikhtiyār, 459-60.

5. al-Najāshī, 21, 231, 250, 348.

6. Ithbāt, 213.

7. al-Najāshī, 250.

8. Ibid., 209.

10. ḤUyūn, I, 89-90, II, 143.

11. For a full account of these traditions see Chapter I pp 17-30; however the Wāqīfa report a tradition attributed to al-Ṣādiq which states that al-ʿQāʾim would be the seventh Imam; Ikhtiyār, 475; al-Kāfī, I, 320-1.

15. Ibid., 483, 506, 591-2.

17. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 224-5; al-Ṭūsī states that ʿAbd Allah b. Jandab was the agent of the seventh and the eighth Imams but it seems that his career in the organization was earlier than that. According to Ibn Shuʿba, he was the agent of the sixth Imam, al-Ṣādiq; Ibn Shuʿba, Tuhaf al-ʿUqūl, 223.

18. Ithbāt, 213-5.

23. Ikhtiyār, 513-4; according to another letter the agent of al-Hādī in Baghdad and its environs was † Alī b. al-Ḥusayn b. †Abd Rabba. After his death in Mecca in 229/843, Abū †Alī b. Rashīd assumed his post; Ikhtiyār, 510.

28. Ithbāt, 215; al-Barqī categorized him as one of the close followers of al-Hādī; al-Rijāl, 60.

29. The representatives of this trend throughout the time of the tenth and the eleventh Imams were mainly such extremists as Ahmād b. Muhammad al-Sayyārī, Ja‘far b. Wāqid, Abū al-Samhāri, †Amr b. Yahyā al-Dihqān, Fāris b. Ḥātim al-Qazwīnī and Muḥammad b. Nuṣayr al-Numayrī; Ikhtiyār, 525, 529, 573, 606.

36. For a full account of the traditions which were used by the Imamites during the short occultation, see al-Kāfī, I, 525-35; N. al-Ghayba, 26-47; al-Ṣaḥfī, Ašfār, al-Ṣa‘īd al-Ṣaḥfī, f. 1-3.

40. Javad †Alī, op. cit., in Der Islam, XXV (1939), 199; Rajkowski, op. cit., 667; al-Najāshī, 222; T. al-Fihrist, 243; al-Ṭūsī mentions that the grandfather of †Uthmān was †Amr, however, he does not link him with †Amr b. Ḥurayth; T. al-Ghayba, 231.
42. Dalāʾil, 217.
43. ʿT. al-Ghayba, 229.
44. Ikhtiyār, 526.
45. ʿT. al-Ghayba, 229-31.
46. ʿT. al-Ghayba, 231-2; Kamāl, 435; for a full account of those men see al-Najāshī, 41, 202, 323.
47. ʿT. al-Ghayba, 231.
49. For a full account see chapter III, pp. 56-67
50. al-Kāfī, I, 517-8, 522-3.
51. Al-Kashshāḥi gives his statement as regards al-Hasan b. al-Nadr along with his account of Abū Hamīd al-Marāgha. He does not name explicitly the city which al-Hasan belonged to; Ikhtiyār, 535. According to al-Mustawfi Marāgha is a large town, and was formerly the capital of Azerbayān; al-Qazwīnī, Nuzhat al-Qulūb, 88. However, there is evidence to support the claim that al-Hasan b. al-Nadr was a native of Qumm. Al-Sādūq reports that al-Hasan was from Qumm and listed him among the people who saw the twelfth Imam; Kamāl, 442.
52. Al-Kulaynī reports in his account of the birth of the twelfth Imam sixteen narrations, elucidating the activities of the first safīr with his followers. Most of these narrations indicate that he practiced miracles to persuade them that he was rightfully appointed by the Imam; al-Kāfī, I, 514-24, narrations nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 12-17, 20, 21, 23, 28.
53. al-Fusūl al-ʿAshra, 13.
55. ʿAbd al-Jabbar, al-Mugni (Cairo, 1963), II, 176; quoted from al-Balkhī.
56. Milal, 128; Fasī IV, 181, however some later sunni scholars such as Abū Nuʿaym al-Asfahānī, ʿAbd al-Wahhāb al-Shaʿrānī al-Mālikī, al-Kunji al-Shāfiʿī and Sibt b. al-Jawzi held that al-Hasan al-ʿAskari had, in fact, left a son. For full account of the later sunnite views concerning the existence of the twelfth Imam, see Sulaymān al-Qanduri, al-Ḥanafi; Yanābī al-Mawadda (al-Istānā, n.d.), 451, 471, 491; Sadr al-Dīn al-Ṣadr, op. cit., 65-7.
59. Ibn Khaldûn writes that the twelfth Imam disappeared in a cellar in Hilla. However, Hilla was established in 495/1101 by Banû Mazyad whereas the occultation of the Imam, according to al-Dhahabi took place in 265/878. Thus it appears that Ibn Khaldûn also relied in his report on the popular belief; al-Muqaddima (Cairo, 1322), 157.

60. Al-Ṭūsî states that the second safîr saw the twelfth Imam in Mecca holding the drapes of the Kaʿba. According to another report a certain Yûsûf b. Ahmad al-Jâfîrî on his way to Syria in 309/921 saw the Imam (T. al-Ghayba, 162, 166). For a full account of the letters of the Imamites and their answers by the Imam, see T. al-Ghayba, 184-93; Muḥammad al-Ṣadrî, op. cit., I, 403,430.

63. Ikhtiyâr, 518, 520, 555.

64. Ibid., 521.

65. According to al-Ṭabarînî (a Naṣayri writer), the Nusayriya movement was established by ʿAlî b. Ahmad al-Ṭarbî, who during the time of al-ʿAskarî gained thirty-five partisans in the village of Ṭarbî and other followers in Ninawa near Hilla. Then he attracted Muḥammad b. Nusayr to his side. The latter led the movement along with his student al-Husayn b. Ḥamdân during the time of the short occultation. In 336/947 the movement became independent from the Imamites, and gave more emphasis to the role of the Gate (Bâb) than the Imam himself; al-Ṭabarînî, Sabîl Râḥat al-Arwâḥ, in Der Islam, XXVII (1946), 129-31.

67. Al-Ṭūsî mentions that al-Sharîf was an adherent of the tenth Imam and that he is not sure about his real name. Al-Kashshî mentions a certain Muḥammad b. Mūsâ al-Sharîf or al-Sharīf amongst the Ghulāt during the time of the tenth Imam. It is most likely that he is the same person discussed by al-Ṭūsî; Ikhtiyâr, 521.

68. T. al-Ghayba, 258.

69. Jâvad Alî, op. cit., in Der Islam, XXV (1939), 203; In his account of al-Karkh district al-Baghdâdi states that many places were inhabited by Râfîdîtes (Shîʿites); al-Khâṣîb, I, 81.

70. T. al-Ghayba, 229.

71. Ikhtiyâr, 532.

72. Ibid., 580.

73. al-Qummi, Târikh Qumm, 211.

74. al-Kâfî, I, 517-8.
75. Dalāʾīl, 272, 275-7.
76. Bihār, LI, 316-7.
78. Bihār, LI, 300-3; Dalāʾīl, 283-5.
79. al-Ishād, 399. For the relations of al-Qaṭṭān with the eastern provinces, see Ikhtiyār, 535.
81. Ikhtiyār, 531.
82. al-Kāfī, I, 518; al-Ishād, 397.
83. al-Fuṣūl al-ʿAshara, 17; According to al-Mufīd Banū al-Rakūlī were the agents of the Imam in Kufa; however, after the death of the first saffīr, the sources begin to refer to Banū Zuzāra and Banū al-Zajawzjī as the agents in Kufa. The two different names seem to refer to one family. Perhaps the correct spelling of this name is Banū Zuzāra but the copyist of al-Mufīd’s work misread it as Banū Zuzāra; T. al-Ghayba, 198-200.
84. al-Kāfī, I, 518-9.
85. Kamāl, 496-7; al-Sadūq reports that al-ʿArīḍī knew the place of the twelfth Imam in Medina and guided a person from Kashmir to the Imam; Kamāl, 497, 440.
86. al-Ishād, 401.
87. al-Kāfī, I, 523.
88. al-Kāfī, I, 523. Al-Mufīd relates the same report but both of them did not give the name of the agent of the Imam in Sāmarrā, al-Ishād, 401.
89. Ikhtiyār, 527; al-Kāfī, I, 519.
90. T. al-Ghayba, 216.
91. al-Najāshī, 264.
92. al-Kāfī, I, 519-20.
93. According to al-Tūsī, al-Ṣafwānī was the assistant of al-Qāsim b. al-ʿAlā during the time of the third saffīr; another report indicates that he met the second saffīr in Baghdad in 307/919; T. al-Ghayba, 203-5.
94. Al-Ṣafwānī reports that Arrān was a city in Azerbayjān, but it is well known among the geographers that Arrān is a province and that its capital was Barda. It is included in the great triangle of land lying to the west of the junction point of the rivers Ayırüs (Kur) and Araxes (al-Rās); T. al-Ghayba, 204.

95. T. al-Ghayba, 204.

98. al-Najāshī, 162-3.

100. Ikhṭiyār, 542-3, 527.

101. Al-Kashshī’s report indicates that the relations between the Khawārīj and the Imamites in Sijistān were tense. He states that al-Faḍl b. Shāhān escaped from the Khawārīj when they attacked Bayhaq, but he died during his escape; Ikhṭiyār, 543. Al-Īṣfahānī reports that the Khawārīj killed an ʿAlīd called Muhammad b. Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad; Maqātil, 453.

102. Ikhṭiyār, 509-10, 575-8.

103. al-Kāfī, I, 523-4; Ikhṭiyār, 509-10, 575-80.

104. al-Najāshī, 264-5.

105. al-Kāfī, I, 524.

106. Although there is no clear statement concerning the links between al-Rāzī and Ḥamadān, there is ample evidence that al-Rāzī controlled the activities of all the agents in Iran, so it is more than probable that he directed those of al-Ḥasan b. Hārūn, especially in view of this narration.

110. al-Najāshī, 65.

111. T. al-Ghayba, 260.

112. Ibid., 232. Although Ibn Barīna states that the location of the grave was on the western side of Baghdad, today there is a grave within a mosque located in an avenue leading to the Maydān crossroad on the eastern side of Baghdad. The Imamites believe that this is the grave of ʿUthmān b. Saʿīd.

CHAPTER V

1. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 230-1, 233, 236; Kamāl, 432.

2. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 235; Kamāl, 510.

3. Ṭ. al-Fihrist, 50-1; Ṭ. Tahdhib al-Ahkām, IV, 134; Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 100-1. Most of the narrations attributed to Ibn Hilāl come on the authority of Sa'd al-Ashʿarī al-Qummi, which reveals that Ibn Hilāl had a high position among the Imamites before he was excommunicated by the safīrs (Ikhtiyār, 18, 141, 503, 603). For the narration concerning the twelfth Imam being al-Qā'im related on the authority of Ibn Hilāl, see Kamāl, 252-3, 350, 649; al-Kāfī, I, 342; N. al-Ghayba, 175, 100-1, 149, 283.

4. Ikhtiyār, 535.

7. al-Sadūq, Mashyakhat al-Faqīh, IV, 128. Al-Naṣb literally means to declare war on someone, or to show open hostility to someone. In the Shiʿite works the term al-naṣb has been used to denote a doctrine of a group of people called al-Nawāṣib (pl. of nāṣib). The Nawāṣib were mainly distinguished by their hostility towards the People of the House (Ahl al-Bayt). Al-Kulaynī considers Ahmad, the son of the ʿAbbāsid vizier ʿUbayd Allah b. Khāqān, as one of them, and adds that al-Qāʾim would order them to pay the jizya (al-Kāfī, I, 503, 508, VIII, 227, 101, 160-1). The Khawārij were amongst the Nawāṣib and al-Ṭūsī considered them as infidels (kuffār) and forbade the Shiʿites from having any social relations with them. Furthermore, he permitted the Imamites to confiscate their money; al-Ṭūsī, Tahdhib al-Ahkām, IV, 22; al-Istibshār, III, 183-4.

8. Ṭ. al-Fihrist, 50-1; al-Ṭabarṣī, al-Iḥtiyāj, II, 289.

12. Ibid., 537.

13. According to the Imamites, Islam is based on five pillars: prayer, zakāt, fasting, pilgrimage, and the wilāya, that is, the recognition of the Imam, to which they gave priority over the pillars. Therefore if a person spends all his life performing the other four Islamic pillars but does not recognize the Imam, his worship is invalid. For a full account of this point, see al-Kāfī, I, 181-4, 374-5, II, 18-19.

15. Al-Dihqān is ‘Urwa b. Yaḥyā al-Nakhdhās al-Baghdādī; he is said to have been the wakīl and treasurer of the eleventh Imam, al-ʿAskārī. But he was deposed and cursed because he seized the money of the organization and burnt the documents of the Imam, which were kept in the treasury; Ikhtiyār, 573, 579.

17. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 260.

18. al-Najāshī, 254-5; Ikhtiyār, 564, 566.

20. Al-Kashshī mentions a document attributed to al-ʿAskārī containing instructions to his agents in Iraq and Khurasan, in which he ordered Ishāq al-Nisābūrī to contact al-Bilālī in Baghdad; Ikhtiyār, 579.

21. al-Kāfī, I, 328; Kamāl, 499.

22. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 260.

23. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 261.

24. Ibid., 261.

26. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 259. Javad Alī and Rajkowski think that Ibn Nuṣayr was an eminent citizen of Basra. Moreover the latter thinks that he was of Persian origin. However, both base their accounts on al-Khāṭib al-Baghdādī (al-Khatib, III, 163-4) and al-Kashshī, whereas the latter refers to two people bearing the same name. The first one was his teacher in Basra and the second was the above extremist. Al-Kashshī attributed the latter lineage to the Arab tribe Fahr and criticized him bitterly; Ikhtiyār, 5, 278, 503, 520.

27. Ikhtiyār, 520-1.

28. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 259.

29. N. Furāt, 78. Al-Sābī reports that Banū Furāt used to inhabit a village called Bābīlī Sāfrīn in the district of upper Nahrawān, and that there were more than 300 people in this village (Hilāl b. Muḥsin al-Sābī, al-Wizāra [Cairo, 1958], 11-12). They named themselves after their great-grandfather, Furāt b. Aḥnaf al-ʿAbdī, who had lived and died in Kufa around 120/737 and was a close associate of al-Sajjād and al-Bāqir (al-Barqī, al-Riżāl, 8-9, 16). Another member of this family was ʿUmar b. Furāt, who was executed on the orders of Ibrāhīm b. al-Mahdī in 203/808, as a punishment inflicted on him for his propaganda in favour of the vizier Ibn Sahl. See for details, D. Sourdel, “Ibn al-Furāt”, E.I.2; Rajkowski, op. cit., 769-70.

34. T. al-Ghayba, 233-4.
35. al-Kāfī, I, 329, 331.
37. Ibid., 440.
38. Ibid., 442.
41. Ikhtiyār, 532.
42. al-Ṭabarānī, al-Iḥtijāj, II, 297-301.
43. T. al-Ghayba, 240.
44. Concerning the activities of al-Qaṭṭān, see al-Kāfī, 520; T. al-Ghayba, 190-1; Bihār, LI, 302, 217; Kamāl, 409-1; al-Irshād, 398-9. For Hājīz’s relations with the safīr, see Bihār, LI, 294, and for Ahmad b. Ishaq’s contacts with the safīr and other agents, see Dalāʾīl, 272; Ikhtiyār, 556-7.
45. Kamāl, 442.
46. Ikhtiyār, 535.
47. al-Irshād, 399.
48. Dalāʾīl, 272. According to al-Ṣādiq, Ahmad b. Ishaq died in Ḥilwān before 260/874, but this cannot be accepted because there are several indications that he outlived al-Ṣādkī (d. 260/874). Moreover al-Ṣādiq relates his report on the authority of Muhammad b. Bahr, who was well-known for fabricating narrations; Kamāl, 454, 466-7; al-Najāshī, 298.
49. Kamāl, 488.
50. al-Kāfī, I, 525.
53. Ibid., 240-1.
According to Ibn Rustam, after the death of al-Ṣākārī in 260/874, al-Baqṭānī claimed that he was the agent of the twelfth Imam (Bihār, LI, 300). But later he appears to have abandoned his claim and served both the second and third safirs (T. al-Ghayba, 242). Al-Wajnāʾ was amongst those who had seen the Imam (Kamāl, 443). He was resident in Baghdad during the time of the second safir (al-Kāfī, I, 521). However it appears that he had some relations with the political bases of the Imamites in Mosul in 307/919; T. al-Ghayba, 205.

T. al-Ghayba, 198.

T. al-Ghayba, 193, 195.

al-Najāshī, 198; Buzurg, Nawābīgh al-Ruwāt, 186.

al-Khirsān, Sharḥ Mashyakhat Tahdhib al-Ahkām (Najaf, 1963), 13-16.

T. al-Ghayba, 235.

Kamāl, 485.

Kamāl, 504.

T. al-Ghayba, 205-6.

al-Irbilī, Kashf al-Ghumma, IV, 409; Bihār, LI, 56-7; al-Irbilī does not mention the year in which Ibn Hamdān controlled Qumm; however, Ibn al-Athīr reports that he was installed in this post in 296/908. Consequently the contact between the second safir and Ibn Ḥamdān must have occurred after that date; al-Kāmil, VIII, 14, 32.

Kamāl, 493, 495.

Ibid., 488, 486; Bihār, LI, 294, 325.

Ibid., 192-3.

Al-Ṣābāsiyya was a sīf in Baghdad granted to al-Ṣābās, the brother of the caliph al-Manṣūr. According to al-Khāṭib al-Baghdādī there were two sīfs of the same name, one on the eastern side of Baghdad and the other on the western side. Because the house of Abū Jaʿfār was on the western side, the meeting may have occurred there; al-Khāṭib, I, 79, 95.

Kamāl, 498.

T. al-Ghayba, 192.

Kamāl, 499.
73. Al-ʿAbbās b. Maʿruf was a companion to the tenth Imam, al-Ḥādi. He devoted his time during the short occultation to relating Imamite narrations; therefore, perhaps, Abū Jaʿfar originally ordered al-Aswad to hand the money over to Ibn Maʿruf because al-Aswad, at that time, was not aware of the necessity of the underground organization. For a full account of the career of Ibn Maʿruf as a narrator of Imamite narrations which criticise those Shiʿites who considered Ibn al-Ḥanafiyya or the seventh Imam Mūsā al-Ḵāzm as the hidden Imam, see Ikhtiyār, 315, 461; al-Najāshī, 215-6, 151; al-Ṭūsī, Tahdhib al-Aḥkām, IV, 122, 137, V, 292, VI, 122, 194.

75. ʿAbd al-Ghayba, 241.

77. al-Irbūlī, Kashf al-Ghaumma, IV, 428; Bihār, L, 293.

78. Ṭabarī, III, 2099.

79. Al-Ṭūsī reports that the tomb of al-Ḥusayn collapsed in 273/886 probably due to an act of sabotage, especially if one bears in mind the fact that an attack upon the grave of ʿAlī was foiled about the same time; al-Ṭūsī, Tahdhib al-Aḥkām, VI, 111-12.

80. For the distinction between the Mubārakīyya and the Qarāmīta, see Q. Maqālāt, 80-6; N. Firaq, 67-74; al-Fuṣūl al-Mukhtāra, 247-8.

81. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 39, 130. The Ismāʿīlī writer Ibn Ḥawshab narrates in al-Kashf several Qurʿānic verses about the Last Day, which for him means the rise of al-Qaʿim al-Mahdī (al-Kashf, 5-6, 10, 11, 14, 24; Abū Yaʿqūb al-Sījistānī, Kashf al-Mahjūb (Theran, 1949, 81-3). Moreover, Ibn Ḥawshab mentions a narration attributed to al-Sādiq, stating that al-Qaʿim will rise in Mecca. Thus he agrees with the Imamite reports regarding this point; al-Kashf, 32-5.

82. Ibn Hawshab, ʿĀsrār al-Nuṭaqāʿ, 51-3, 90-2. For the details of the Ismāʿīlī use of these traditions in their activities with the tribe of Kitāma in 280/893, see al-Kāmil, VIII, 24-5, 26.

83. Ibn Hawshab, al-Kashf, 62; al-Kāmil, VIII, 22-3; Ivanow supports this point in suggesting that “the terrible slaughter of the pilgrims in the Kaʿba itself, and the seizure of the sacred relics were not acts of wanton cruelty, but were connected with some expectations of a religious character, such as the return of Muḥammad b. Ismāʿīl in full glory, etc., which most probably was expected to be due about that time.” Ivanow, “Ismailis and Qarmatians”, Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, XVI (1940), 82; also see W. Madelung, “Karmatī”, E.I.2.

84. N. Firaq, 76; al-Ṭabarī confirms this number; Ṭabarī, II, 2218.
85. Q. Maqālāt, 86.

86. Ṭabarī, III, 2124.

87. al-Kāmil, VII, 340-1, VIII, 21-2. There is evidence which encourages the present writer to link the activities of the Qaramīta with those of the Ismāʿīlīs. Ibn Hawqal mentions that after the establishment of the Qaramīta state in Bahrain they used to send the khums to the Sāhīb al-Zamān, that is the Ismāʿīlī leader in Egypt; Ibn Ḥawqal, op. cit., 21-3.

88. Ṭabarī, III, 2218; Ibn Ḥawqal, op. cit., 29.

89. Ṭabarī, III, 1757. Shaban put forward the theory that the Ismāʿīlī movement in Iraq and Bahrain was called the Qaramīta after a specific race called al-Qaramātīyyūn. They came originally from Libya and they could hardly speak Arabic. They took part in the Zanj revolt and joined the Ismāʿīlī movement when the revolt collapsed. (Shaban, op. cit. 130).

90. Ṭabarī, III, 2202.

91. Maqālāt, 85.

93. al-Kāmil, VIII, 311, 376.

94. Ṭabarī, III, 2127-8; al-Kāmil, VII, 311.

95. al-Ashʿarī, Maqālāt al-Islāmiyyūn, 58; Ibn Shādhān, al-Idāh, 475.

96. Later in 300/912 Muhsin was arrested in the suburbs of Damascus. His head was sent to Baghdad, where it was impaled on a bridge in the eastern side of the city, an area which was inhabited by a large Shiʿite population; Maqālāt, 449; al-Kubaysī, op. cit., 446.

97. ʿAlī b. ʿĪsā, who was known for his anti-ʿAlīd attitude, was called a Qaramātī by his personal enemies; as a result he was dismissed from office (ʿArib, op. cit., 59). Al-Qāsim al-Khaqānī was discharged in the same manner. Later al-Hallāj was arrested on the accusation that he was a Qaramātī missionary: Nujūm, III, 182; Ibn Taymiyya, Jāmiʿ al-Rasāʾīl, 1, 188.

98. al-Ṣābī, al-Wuzarāʾ, 292-3; Ṭabarī, III, 2123.

100. Ṭabarī, III, 2123. ʿUbayd Allah b. Sulaymān was a close associate of al-Muwaffaq in Sāmarrā in 264/878, but four years later he was imprisoned. When al-Muʿtaḍid became the heir-apparent to al-Muʿtamid, ʿUbayd Allah was promoted to the office of the wizāra, whereupon he used his office to pursue his rivals such as Banū Furāt. At the same time he managed to uncover the activities of the agents of the second safir. He died in 288/900; al-Kāfī, 1, 525; al-Kāmil, VII, 219, 227, 309; al-Fakhrī, 302.
101. Ţabari, III, 2148; al-Muntazam, V, 150.

102. Al-İsfahānī mentions that two ʿAlids, Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. Ibārāhīm and ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. ʿAlī, were tortured along with the Qarāmī ṣāhib al-Kāhl, whose hands and legs were cut off, yet they did not support the Qarāmīta nor did they have any relations with them (Maqātil, 446). Al-Ṭabarī states twice that the ʿAbbasid troops arrested a group of Qarāmīta in 286/899 and investigated them. They disclosed the name of their leader, Abū Hāshim b. Ṣadaqa al-Kāčīb, who was arrested and put in jail (Ṭabarī, III, 2179). Al-Muʿtadid’s investigation of the Qarāmīta leader, Abū al-Fawāris, shows that he differentiated between the doctrine of the Qarāmīta and the Imāmītes; al-Kāmil, VII, 354.

103. al-Kāfī, I, 525.

104. al-Kāfī, I, 525.

105. al-Kāfī, I, 525; al-Irshād, 402; T. al-Ghayba, 183-4. This order is believed to have come from the Imam himself.

106. al-Rawandī, al-Kharaṣṭiʾ wa-l-Jarāʾih (Bombay, 1301), 67. Al-Tūsī mentions the names of two of the three soldiers: Ahmad b. ʿAbd Allah and Rashīq, the servant of al-Muʿtadid. It appears that al-Tūsī’s report is sound, because al-Ṭabarī confirms that Rashīq was the personal soldier (ghuṭām, khādim) of al-Muʿtadid and took part in the fighting against the Zanj revolution; Ţabarī, III, 1953, 2003, 2007, 2017-9, 2082-3; T. al-Ghayba, 160-1.

111. Ibid., 165.

112. Kamāl, 440.

113. The Prophet’s companion ʿAbd Allah b. ʿAmr b. al-Šās used to narrate a Prophetic tradition predicting the rise of al-Qaḥṭānī, whose rising is only a sign for the rise of al-Qaʿīm al-Mahdi. However, Muḥāwiya prohibited this companion from narrating the tradition, because he thought that the spread of such traditions would encourage the people to overthrow him; B. Ṣaḥīḥ, 384.

115. Ţabarī, III, 2225.
116. Al-Nu’ūmānī devotes a section of his work al-Ghayba to the refutation of the claims of the Ismā‘īlis (N. al-Ghayba, 53-7, 176-80); al-Kula'yī reports a narration on the authority of al-Sādiq, forbidding his follower ʿUmar b. Ḥanzala from taking part in any ʿAlid revolution before the outcry in the sky; al-Kāfī, VIII, 310. See also Ikhtiyār, 262-3.

118. For a full account of the increase of the role of the Imamite fiqhā‘i, see Chapter VII.

119. Kamāl, 484.

120. Al-Ṭūsī gives two dates for the death of Abū Ja‘far, the first of which, 304/916, is on the authority of the grandson of Abū Ja‘far, Hibat Allah. The second report attributed to Abū Ghālib al-Zurārī, the agent of Ibn Rūḥ in Kufa puts the date at 305/917. Because the latter had close relations with Abū Ja‘far and was his contemporary, it seems that his report is more likely to be accurate; T. al-Ghayba, 238-9; al-Kāfī, VIII, 80; Abū al-Fidā‘, al-Mukhtāsar, 11, 69.

121. T. al-Ghayba, 238-9. On the eastern side of Baghdad there is a tomb situated in a mosque called al-Khullānī. The people believe that it is the grave of Abū Ja‘far. Since al-Ṭūsī mentions that his grave is on the western side it is possible that his corpse was transported to the new grave, but there is no available source to support such a claim.

CHAPTER VI

1. Ibn Sahr Āshūb, Manāqib, I, 458.
2. Ikhtiyār, 557. The work of Ibn Abī Tayy is not extant, but al-Dhahabī used it in writing al-Nawbakhti’s biography; al-Dhahabī, Tārikh al-Islām, f. 132.
5. Ibid., 250-2.
6. Ibid., 242-3; Bihār, LI, 355.
7. The narrator of this report is Abū Ghālib al-Zurānī. He reports that he used to contact the second safīr via al-Nawbakhti, who when he became the third safīr, contacted the agents of Kufa through al-Shalmaghānī; T. al-Ghayba, 202.
10. The testament of the second safir to Ibn Rūḥ al-Nawbakhtī was reported on the authority of the agents, Muḥammad b. Ḥumām and Jaʿfar b. ʿAmad b. Mařīl, who were present at that meeting and bore witness to the designation. Moreover Ibn Barīna, the grandson of the second safir, also reports the testament and agrees with the other agents in regard to its authenticity. Kamāl, 503.

12. Ibid., 240.

13. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 255.

15. al-Dhahabi, Tārīkh al-Islām, f. 132 b.

16. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 240. According to some reports, the decision that Ibn Rūḥ would be the successor of Abū Jaʿfar had already been revealed by Abū Jaʿfar himself to a few agents three years before his death in 305/917. Jaʿfar al-Madāʾīnī and Muḥammad b. Ṭāli al-Aswad were amongst the agents who received these instructions. Kamāl, 501-2.

17. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 256.

18. al-Dhahabi, Tārīkh al-Islām, f. 132 b.

19. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 250-1.

20. For a full account of the career of Ḥāmid b. al-ʿAbbās, see al-Kubaysī, op. cit., 190-9.

22. Iqbāl, op. cit., 216.

24. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 197-8, 212.

25. al-Najāshī, 293-4; Buzurg, Nawābīgh al-Ruwaṭ, 289.

26. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 205-6; Buzurg, Nawābīgh al-Ruwaṭ, 96.

27. Kamāl, 504.

28. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 240.

29. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 176, 179-80.

31. Ṭ. al-Ghayba, 255.
32. T. al-Ghayba, 202-5. According to Buzurg, al-Qāsim died in 304/916. But al-Ṭusi refers to his activities during the time of the third safīr (305-26/917-37), so his death must have occurred after 304/916; T. al-Ghayba, 202.

33. al-Najāshī, 289.

34. Kamāl, 502.

35. Ibid., 516-7.

37. al-Jahshayari, al-wuzarā', 300.

38. T. al-Ghayba, 199.

41. al-Ṣābī, op. cit., 40-1.

42. Ibn Miskawayh, op. cit., I, 123.

45. ʿArīb, op. cit., 141.

46. ʿArīb, op. cit., 141; T. al-Ghayba, 200.

47. Iqbal, op. cit., 220.

49. al-Ṣūfī, al-Awraq, 87.

51. al-Najāshī, 293-4; T. al-Fihrist, 305-6; T. al-Ghayba, 158, 221, 267. It seems that the extant work called Fiqh al-Riḍā is in fact Kitāb al-Taklīf of al-Shalmaghānī because it has a tradition concerning testimony (al-Shahīda) and another concerning the definition of the measure called kurr which al-Shalmaghānī gave in contrast to the other Imāmites.

52. T. al-Ghayba, 212, 263.

53. Ibn Ḥawqal, op. cit., 211.

57. Such a claim obviously contradicts the beliefs of both the Shiʿa and the Sunnī alike. For details of God’s essential nature according to the Imamites, see al-Hillī, al-Ḥasan b. Yūsuf, Anwār al-Malakūt fi Sharḥ al-Yāqūt (Teheran, 1338), 77–85, and his al-Bāb al-Hādi Ashar, A Treatise on the principles of Shiʿite theology, trans. from Arabic from W. Miller (London 1958), 15–52.

59. T. al-Ghayba, 268.

60. Ibid., 265.

62. Ibid., 264.

63. al-Kāmil, VIII, 218.

65. T. al-Ghayba, 266.

68. Ibn Miskawayh, op. cit., I, 123.

69. Yāqūt, Irshād al-Ārib, I, 303.

70. al-Ṣadr, op. cit., 517-8.

71. T. al-Ghayba, 269.

72. al-Kāmil, VIII, 217.

73. Yāqūt, Irshād al-Ārib, I, 299.

74. al-Najāshī, 289, 294.

75. Al-Shaybānī seems to have been an Imamite Muḥaddiṭh but after the deviation of al-Shalmaghānī he inclined toward him, ignoring the Twelfth Imam’s pronouncement against him; T. al-Fihrist; 299; al-Najāshī, 309.

76. al-Ṣadr, op. cit., I, 527; Hāshim al-Ḥasanī, op. cit., II, 575.

78. Ibid., I, 267.
At the present time the grave of Ibn Rūḥ is situated on the eastern side of Baghdad, whereas al-Ṭūsī mentions that this grave was in the Nawbakhtiyya district at the avenue which leads to Qaṣṣarat al-Shawk, which was located in the western side of Baghdad; Yāqūt, Mu'amal al-Buldān, IV, 191; al-Ṣāmīd, op. cit., 70.

83. Kamāl, 517.

CHAPTER VII

1. T. al-Ghayba, 256.
3. Buzurg, Nawābīgh al-Ruwaṭ, 200. Šaymara was the name of a town in the region of al-Jabal in Iran (Ibn Hawqal, op. cit., 158, 259), but it seems that the surname of the fourth saffī is derived from the river al-Sammar in Basra, because most of his relatives lived there; Ithbāt, 246-7; al-Subkī, Ṭabaqāt al-Shafiʿy, III, 339.
4. Ithbāt, 246-7.
5. Biḥār, LI, 23.
6. Ithbāt, 240.
7. al-Kāfī, I, 524.
8. Kamāl, 517.
10. Yāqūt, Mu'amal al-Buldān, I, 532.
15. Ibid.
17.  Ibid.
18.  N. al-Ghayba, 92.
19.  al-Irshād, 399; Bihār, LIII, complete work.
22.  al-Hasani, op. cit., 278.
23.  For these traditions see al-ʾAṣfārī, op. cit., f. 1-2.
27.  Watt, The Majesty that is Islam, 170-1.
29.  al-Kāfī, I, 355, 339. For a full account of these traditions, see al-Saffar, Basāʾir al-Darajāt, f. 23b; al-Mufid, Awāʾil al-Maqālāt, 8; al-Kāfī, I, 177-8, 184.
30.  al-Saffar, Basāʾir al-Darajāt, f. 23b-24a.
32.  This can be noted in the tradition attributed to the ninth Imam, al-Jawād, who said, “If my son ʿAlī, died, a light from him will appear and when this light went off, another light will be concealed. I warn those who doubt what will happen.” N. al-Ghayba, 99.
33.  For all these traditions see al-ʾAṣfārī, op. cit., f. 1-2 (Appendix); Kamāl, 349.
34.  See Chapter I, p. 20.
35.  al-Ṭabarsi, al-Iḥtiyājī, II, 283.
37.  Bihār, LI, 377-78.
38.  T. al-Ghayba, 270.
39. Incidents recorded by Ibn Taghri Barfi indicate that the adherents of al-Shalmaghānī continued their underground activities until the year 341/952, when the Abbāsids discovered their cells. For a full account, see Nujūm, III, 307-8.

40. The disciples of al-Ṣādiq who narrated these traditions on his authority were Ishaq b. Ṭāmār al-Sayrafi, Ibrāhim b. ʿAmr al-Kannasi, Ḥishām b. Sālim, al-Mufaddil b. ʿUmar, Ḥāzim b. Ḥabīb, Abū Basir and Muḥammad b. Muḥammad; N. al-Ghayba, 90-1.

41. N. al-Ghayba, 92.

42. Sachedina, op. cit., 125.

43. T. al-Ghayba, 110.

44. al-ʿAlawi, Fi Nusrāt al-Wāqifa, quoted in T. al-Ghayba, 44.

45. Q. Maqālat, 106.

46. N. Fīrāq, 97.

47. Buzurg, al-Dhari'a, XXI, 69.

48. Quoted in the T. al-Ghayba, 274.

49. al-Kāfī, I, 340.

50. Kamāl, 112.

51. N. al-Ghayba, 6.

52. N. al-Ghayba, 80.

53. Ibid., 99; Ibn Qubba quoted in Kamāl, 112.

56. Camāl, 3.

58. Quoted in Kamāl, 94-122, 126.

60. Kamāl, 2-3, 16.

62. There are two reports which support this point. First al-Ṣadūq mentions that the Zaydites accused the Imamites of inventing the Prophetic traditions which indicate that his successors will be twelve Imams (Kamāl, 67-8). The Zaydite al-Ṣāhib b. ʿAbbād (d. 381/991) held this claim against the Imamites (Ibn ʿAbbād, Nuṣrārī Madhāhib al-Zaydiyya, 209-12). Also the Iṣmāʿīlīs did so. Ivanow (ed.), Zahr al-Maʿānī, 51.

63. Sachedina, op. cit., 83.

64. Kutub al-Ziyārat are the books which give details of how to undertake pilgrimages to the shrines of the Imams.

65. Bihār, XII, 81.

69. al-Saffar (d. 290), Basāʾir al-Darajāt, f. 50a; al-Kāfī, I, 243.

70. N. al-Ghayba, 122.

82. The khums (the fifth) in Shiʿite law is an obligatory tax based on the following Qur'anic verse: "And know ye that whatever of a thing ye acquire, a fifth of it is for God, and for the Apostle, and for the Apostle's near relatives and the orphans and the needy and the penniless traveller" (al-Anfāl, VIII, 41). The Imams collected the khums from their followers and used the first three shares for the benefit of the congregation and the kindred of the Prophet, and the second three shares for distribution among the orphans, the needy, and the penniless traveller (wayfarer) of the Prophet's family; Ašl ʿAsim b. Hamīd al-Hannat, f. 22; al-Kāfi, II, 626-8.

83. al-Muḥaqiq al-Ḥillī, al-Muṣtabar fī sharh al-Mukhtāsar (Qumm, 1318), 298; al-Jawāmiʿ al-Fiqhiyya (Iran, 1276), 12, 76.

84. For details see Ibn Dāwūd, al-Riḍāl, 110; T. al-Fihrist, 268, 363; Ibn Qubba, quoted in Kamāl, 120; al-Najāshī, 315.

85. al-Ṣāḥib b. ʿAbbād, op. cit., 211.

86. Ijtihād, in Sunnī law means the pronouncing of independent judgements on legal or theological questions based on the interpretation and application of the four principles, the Qurʾān, traditions, consensus, and reason (ʿAql). According to the Imamites, Ijtihād is employing all one's power to arrive at speculative probability (ẓann) in a case or in a rule of divine law depending mainly on the Qurʾān and traditions; al-Ghurayfī, al-Ijtihād wa-l-Fatwā (Beirut, 1978), 9.

88. T. al-Ghayba, 270.

90. al-ʿAmīlī, al-Wasāʾil, XVIII, 101; Biḥār, LIII, 181; al-Khumaynī, op. cit., 77.

91. al-Ṭabarṣī, al-ʿIḥtiyāj, II., 263-4; al-ʿAmīlī, al-Wasāʾil, XVIII, 94-5.

92. al-Ṭabarṣī, al-ʿIḥtiyāj, II, 260.

93. al-Muḥaqiq al-Ḥillī, al-Muṣtabar, 298.

94. al-Muḥaqiq al-Ḥillī, al-Muṣtabar, 298.

95. al-Fuṣūl al-Mukhtāra, 261.
BIBLIOGRAPHY

------, ʻal-Madā'in fī al-Masādīr al-ʻArabiyya', Sumar XXIII, 47-66.

al-ʻĀmilī, Bahāʾ al-Dīn (d. 1031/1622), al-Risāla al-Itrānī n-ʻAshariyya fī al-Radd ʻalā al-Gāfiyya, India Office Library, Arabic Ms. 2161, Delhi Arabic No. 7193.

(Amin) al-Mahdī wa-l-Mahdawiyya, Cairo, 1951.

ʻArīb b. Saʿd al-Qurtubī (d. 366/976), Silāt Tārīkh al-Ṭabarī, Leiden, 1897.

------, al-İbāna ʻan Uṣūl al-Diyāna, Cairo, 1348/1929.

The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

al-Azraqī, Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh (d. ca. 244/858), Akhbār Makka, vols. 1-2, Mecca, 1965.

al-Balāḏūrī, Abū Ḥayyān (d. 279/892), Futūḥ al-Buldān, Beirut, 1957.

---------, al-Rijāl, Tehran, 1342.

---------, Geschichte der Arabischen Literatur, supplement, 3 vols., Leiden, 1937-42.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Diʿbīl al-Khuzāʿī (d. 246/860), Shir Diʿbīl b. ʿAbī al-Khuzāʿī, ed. by ʿAbd al-Karīm al-Ashtar, Damascus, 1384/1964.

al-Dijaylī, ʿAbd al-Hamīd, Rasāʾīl Ismāʿīlīyya Nādira; includes Risālat al-Ghayba, the Occultation of the Fātimid caliph al-Ḥākim attributed to Ibn Abī Yaʿlā, and was written in 411/1012, Majallat al-Majmaʿ al-ʿIlmī al-ʿIrāqī, vol. 3, part 1, 1954, pp. 405-421; vol. 4, part 1 1956, pp. 251-64.

al-Dīnawarī, Abū Ḥanīfa Ahmād b. Dāwūd (d. 282/896), al-Akhbār al-Ṭiwāl, ed. by ʿAbd al-Munīm ʿArīr, Cairo, 1960

Eliash, J., “Ḥasan al-ʿAskarī,” E. I.², III.

Fayyād, ʿAbd Allāh, Tārīkh al-Imāmiyya wa Aslāṣīhim min al-Shīʿa, Baghdad, 1972.

----------. Tārīkh al-Tarbiyya ʿinda al-Imāmiyya wa Aslāṣīhim min al-Shīʿa, Baghdad, 1972.

Flotin, Van, al-Siyāda al-ʿArabiyya wa-l-Shīʿa wa-l-Isrāʾ ilīyāt, trans. into Arabic by Hasan Ibrāḥīm and Muhammad Zakī, Cairo, 1934.

The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

(Goldziher) and Tritton, A. S., “Badā‘”, E. I.², I.

---------, Muntahā al-Maqāl, Iran, 1302.

---------, “Dja‘far al-Šādiq’, E.I.², II.

Huart, Cl., “Ismā‘iliyya”, E. I.².

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ibn al-Athīr, ʿIzz al-Dīn (d. 630/1232), al-Kāmil fī al-Tārīkh, Leiden, 1283-93/1866-76.

--------, al-Lubāb fī Tahdhib al-Ḥansāb, vols. 1-3, Cairo, 1356.

Ibn Hanbal, Ahmad (d. 241/855), al-Musnad, Cairo, 1313/1895.

--------, Jamhurat Ansāb al-ʿArab, Cairo, 1391/1971.

Ibn Hishām, Das Leben Muḥammad, ed. by Wustenfeld, Gottingen, 1859.

--------, Talbīs Iblīs, Cairo, 1928.
The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

Ibn Khaldūn (d. 808/1406), al-ʿIbar wa Dīwān al-Muqtada wa-l-Khabar, Cairo, 1284-7/1867-70.

--------, al-Muqaddima, Cairo, 1322/1904.

Ibn Khurdādhbih, Abu al-Qāsim ʿUbayd Allāh (d. 300/912), Kitāb al-Masālik wa-l-Mamālik, Leiden, 1889.

Ibn Manzūr, Muḥammad b. Mukarram (d. 711/1311), Lisān al-ʿArab, Cairo, 1300-3/1885-7.

Ibn Miskawayh, Aḥmad b. Muḥammad (d. 421/1030), Tajārib al-Umam, 4 vols., Cairo, 1914.

Ibn al-Muʿtazz, ʿAbd Allāh (d. 296/908), Ṭabaqāt al-Shuʾarāʾ, ed. by ʿAbd al-Sattār Farraʾ, Cairo, 1956.

Ibn Shahr Ṭīḥūb, Muḥammad b. ʿAlī (d. 588/1162), Masālik al-ʿUlamāʾ, Tehran, 1353.

Ibn al-Ṭaqqāqā, Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. Ṭabātābā (d. 701/1300), al-Fakhrīfī al-Adāb al-Sultāniyya wa-l-Duwal al-Islāmiyya, Cairo, 1927.
BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ibn Ṭawūs, ʿAbī b. Mūsā (d. 664/1265), al-Iqḥāl, Iran, n.d.

---------, Kashf ʿai Maḥajja, Najaf, 1950/1370.

---------, ʿal-Malāḥim wa-l-Fitan, Najaf, 1948.

Ibn Tayfūr, Ahmad b. Ṭāhir (d. 280/893), Kitāb Baghdād, ed. by ʿIzzat al-ʿAttār, Cairo, 1368/1949.

Ibn Taymiyya, Ahmad b. ʿAbd al-Ḥalīm (d. 728/1327), Jāmiʿ al-Rasāʾil, Cairo, n.d.

Ibn ʿUqda, Ahmad b. Muḥammad b. Saʿīd (d. 333/944), Kitāb al-Malāḥim, Ms. 262, Tehran University.

Ivanow, W., The Alleged founder of ʿIsmāʿīlīsm, Bombay, 1946.

--------, The Rise of the Fatimids, Bombay, 1946.

al-Jahshīyīrī, Muḥammad b. Ṭabdūs (d. 331/941), Kitāb al-Wuzarāʾ wa-l-Kuttāb, Cairo, 1938.

al-Kashshī, Muḥammad b. ʿUmar b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz (d. ca. 340/951), Ikhtiyār Maʿrifat al-Riḍā, Mashhad, 1348.

al-Karajākī, Abū al-Fath Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. ʿUthmān (d. 449/1057), Kanz al-Fawāʾid, includes five letters: Risālat al-Bayān ʿan Jumal lʾtiqādāt Ahl al-Imām; Risāla fi Wujūb al-Imāma; Risāla fi Usūl al-Fiqh; Risāla al-Burhān ʿalā Sīḥat Tūl ʿUmar Sāhib al-Zamān; Risāla al-Tūʾajjub min al-Karajākī.

al-Kharrāz al-Rāzī al-Qummi (d. after 381/991), Kifāyat al-Athar fi al-Nuṣūṣ ʿalā al-Aʾīma al-Ithnā ʿAshar, Iran, 1305/1888.

al-Khaṭīb al-Baghdādī, Ṭāhir (d. 463/1070), Ṭārīkh Baghdād, 14 vols., Cairo, 1349/1931.

al-Kindī, Muḥammad b. Yūsuf (d. ca. 335/946), Wulāt Miṣr, Beirut, 1959/1379.

--------, al-Rawḍa min al-Kāfī, Tehran, n.d.

--------, “ʿAlī al-Riḍā”, E.I. 2, I.

--------, “al-ʿAskarī”, E.I. 2, II.

--------, “Bāb”, E.I. 2, I.

--------, “al-Mahdī”, E.I. 1, III.

Madelung, W., “Ḵᵛṟmaṯī”, E.I. 2, IV.

--------, “Nuṣairī”, E.I. 1, III.

--------, al-Tanbīh wa-l-Ishrāf, Baghdad, 1357/1938.

--- Tashīh Ḥīṭqādāt al-Imāmiyya. Tabriz, 1371/1951.

Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Qushayrī al-Nisabūrī (d. 261/875), Sahīh Muslim, 4 vols., Cairo, 1377/1957.

al-Nuṣārī, Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm (d. 360/970), Kitāb al-Ghayba. Tabriz, 1317/1899.

al-Qalqashandī, Aḥmad b. ʿAlī (d. 821/1418), Sugh al-ʿAṣha, 14 vols., Cairo, 1963.

al-Qandūrī, Sulaymān, Yanābīʾ al-Mawadda, al-Istāna, n.d.

al-Qazwīnī, Hamd-Allāh Mustawfī (d. 740/1340), Nuzhat al-Qulūb, the geographical part, trans. by Le Strange, Leiden, 1919.

al-Qifī, ʿAlī b. Yūsuf (d. 568/1172), Tārīkh al-Ḥukamāʾ, Leipzig, 1903.

al-Rawandi, Saʿd b. Ḥibbat Allah, al-Kharāʾij wa-l-Jarāʾīh, Bombay, 1301/1883.

--------, Fadak fī al-Tārīkh, Najaf, 1955.

al-Ṣadr, Ṣadr al-Dīn, al-Mahdī, Tehran, 1358.

---------, al-Tawḥīd, Tehran, 1387/1967.

al-Ṣaffār, Muḥammad al-Ḥasan (d. 290/902), Basāʿir al-Darajāt, Tehran University, Central Library, Ms. No. 657.

al-Sajistānī, Abū Dāwūd Sulaymān b. al-Askārī, Sunan Abī Dāwūd, 4 vols., Cairo, 1370/1951.

al-Shahristānī, Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Karīm (d. 548/1153), Kitāb al-Mīlal wa-l-Nīkāl, London, 1263/1846.

Strothmann, R., “Mūsā al-Kāzim”, E.I.1, III.

----------, “Muḥammad b. ʿAlī al-Riḍā”, E.I.1, III.

----------, “Shīʿa”, E.I.1, IV.

Subhī, Ahmad Mahmūd, Naẓariyyat al-Imāma Lādā al-Shīʿa al-Ithnā ʿAshariyya, Cairo, 1969.

al-Subkī, ʿAbd al-Wahhāb b. ʿAlī (d. 771/1369), Taḥqīq al-Ṣafīyya al-Kubrā, 10 vols., Cairo, 1965/1385.

The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

al-Ṭabrantī, Maymūn b. al-Qāsim al-Nuṣayrī (d. 427/1035), Kitāb Sabīl Râhat al-Arwâh, ed. by Strothmann in Der Islam, XXVII (1946).

al-Thālabī, Ahmad b. Muhammad al-Nisābūrī (d. 427/1035), ʿArāʾis al-Majālis, Cairo, n.d.

al-Tirmidhī, Muhammad b. ʿĪsā (d. 279/893), Sunan al-Tirmidḥī, 5 vols., Cairo, 1356/1937.

--------, al-Ghayba, Tabriz, 1322/1904.

--------, Ikhtīyār Maʿrifat al-Riḍāl, Mashhad, 1348/1969.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

al-Uṣūl al-Arba’mi’a, Ms. Tehran University, no. 262, 1962.

al-Zubayrī, Maṣḥab b. ʿAbd Allāh (d. 236/850), Nasab Quraysh, Cairo, 1953.
The Occultation of the Twelfth Imam

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

Employed in the Footnotes and in the Bibliography

D. Sunan - al-Sajistānī, Abū Dawūd, Sunan Abī Dāwūd, Cairo, 1370/1951.

220
ABBREVIATIONS

Khāṭib - al-Khāṭib al-Baghdādī, Tārikh Baghdād, 14 vols., Cairo, 1349/1931.

M. Ṣaḥīḥ - Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj al-Nisābūrī, Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, Cairo, 1377/1956.

Ṭ. al-Ghayba - idem, Kitāb al-Ghayba, Tabriz, 1322/1904.

al-Tirmidhī - al-Tirmidhī, Muḥammad b. Ṣaʿd, Sunan al-Tirmidhī, Cairo, 1356/1937.

